THE MERRY INTO THE PRODIGAL SON had fallen. "Far away from home and his kind father, obliged to take care of swine, with nothing to eat but the husks of corn left by them," etc. "Then, why didn't he eat the pigs?" was the practical reply.

COMMUNICATED.

Mr. Enright.—In your issue of the 13th inst. we notice a communication from Athens signed "School Director," the tone and sentiment of which is abominable, and if carefully read cannot fail to be considered a direct insult to the able teachers of our country, who have been so self-sacrificing, earnest, and zealous, of late, in fitting themselves for the noble work they are doing.

A small boy (aged five), looking at a picture of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden, asked his mother if they never were more clothed than those in which they were represented, and being told that that was all they wore, said:—"Then whatever did they do when people came to call?"

A mother was telling her little boy of nine years the story of the flood and how every living thing was drowned; the child asked his mother and asked in reply:—"And the fishes, too?"

A little girl of six years, on being told something which amused her, exclaimed:—"I shall remember that the whole of my life, and when I forget it I will write it down."

Bed-time for my fair little woman; but first a short glance at the tired old doctor's knees. "How tired you look, papa dear. What's the matter? Can't I do anything for you?" "Little dear, mind of mine, I'm tired because I'm very, very sorry for some dear patients who are sick unto death, and am much thinking about them."

A father going into the children's bedroom one morning found the clock stopped. He inquired the cause, when a little boy (aged five years) said:—"I stopped the clock, father, because I thought God would hear me better say my prayers."

A little boy aged four was sleeping with his brother, when his mother said:—"Why, Tommy, you are lying right in the middle of the bed; why will you poor Harry do?" "Well, ma, he replied, "Harry has got both sides."

An infant terrible, five years of age, was one day reproved by his mother for juvenile delinquency and warned that all bad boys would eventually be sent to that place where, in the words of Dr. Watts, there is nothing but death and chains.

"Well, but," said he, "if there is fire there, but not darkness, and if there are chains I'll have a swing."

Arm and Household

Starting a Flock of Sheep. The increasing interest in sheep husbandry, consequent upon the advance in wool, gives this industry more prominence among farmers than it has occupied for several years past.

While we are certain that the present condition of the wool market is not due to speculation, but is on a substantial basis, and the prices will not be maintained, but will very likely harden still more before another wool clip comes in, there is little doubt that there will be a large increase in the crop next spring.

It is well to remember that the stocks of woolen goods in the country before the rise of the staple last spring were very low. The prospects for fine crops are a market abroad for all our surplus food products, together with a return of confidence upon the local consumption, cannot but be a revival in all branches of business, and the woolen industry was among the first to feel its influence.

As a consequence of the New England Farmer thinks it unfortunate that so many complaints of ill-success in farming are continually published, and points out that the extent to which it is conducted on borrowed capital is the greatest cause of the difficulty. There is much sense in the following extract:

"Readers of Agricultural papers do not often find successful farmers relating their experience, and giving such details of the management of their business as would encourage others to persevere. And yet these are just the men we all want to hear from. The croakers are too numerous and altogether too fond of blaming the business for their non-success. The trouble is in the man, not in the business. When I learn that only one farm in twenty-five is paid for when bought, the wonder to me is, not that so many fail, but that so many succeed. When Richard says that he has bought a farm for $2,500 down, and gives a mortgage for $1,500 at eight per cent, expecting to make a living for himself and family, pay Mr. Doe $30 a month interest, and have a net three or four per cent, at the end of the year, he is not a farmer, but a speculator. He pays $2,500 down, and gives a mortgage for $1,500 at eight per cent, expecting to make a living for himself and family, pay Mr. Doe $30 a month interest, and have a net three or four per cent, at the end of the year, he is not a farmer, but a speculator.
