A severe affliction has come upon one of our best citizens, and the whole community sincerely sympathics with him and his family. At 2 o'clock yesterday a large concourse of friends and neighbors gathered at the house of Mr. A. A. Kinner to his son Austin, and to accompany them to the repose of the silent tomb. The circumstances of his death were at first extremely harrowing to the family, because the telegram only rold of the death of a loved son in the midst of, strangers, far from home, and the thought that he had none to care for him was very hard to bear. But when a gentleman —Mr. G. W. Mitchell, of Bradford, Pa.,—arrived with the remains in charge, the comforting words, "everything was done that could be, and he did not suffer," tended to lighten the heavy burden of sorrow. The friends having done their dury may rrow. The friends having done their duty ma id consolation in the words of Him who will re

I can get the whole of the American at once and have it to use, while it will be five years before I can get the whole 21 volumes of Britannica at the rate they are now being published. I cannot afford to be deprived of the use of a Cyclogedia for that length of time. The scientific articles in the Britannica are exhaustive—so much so that their length crowds out many subjects in which I am interested, especially American topic. Being written for English people, it has a natural leaning toward that which will please the people for whom it was written, even to the exclusion of many things in which we Americans are interest.

I own the Britanuica in twenty-one volumes and he American in sixteen. Where I use the Britan itea cince I use the American a dozen times. For business man who gets but little time to read, onsider a Cyclopedia Indispensable, and mus heerfully recommend the American Cyclopedia President Citizens Bank.

I concur in the above recommendation.

I own Appleton's American Cyclopedia, and prize it highly. I have easy access to "Chambea's" and the "Baltannica," but greatly prefer the "American," This greatwork is a positive necessity in every reading, thinking, growing house-hold. It is a complete library in itself, covering the whole field of recorded knowledge. No business man who would know his business, no mechanic who would know his a cog in the wheel, no farmer who would keep pasted and see his children grow in knowledge, can afford to do without this greatest of helps.
