RUTH MORRISON.

er tells where he's going, nor what way either. I'm sure none of the men knows, I'll ask the hostler, though, if you wish; ma'am."

"Do," said Ruth, but in a despairing voice, and she tottered back to the room like one intoxicated. She had just thrown herself on the nearest chair, when she heard the tread of, it seemed, two people coming down the stairs, and then a quick voice in the hall, that sent the blood like an electric shock careening through her frame. She bounded from her seat, and stood with extended arms to listen again. In an instant, two gentlemen—one elderly, gray-haired, the other, tall and young—passed arm-in-arm, by the window, down the street. One wild cry broke from her: "Call him, call him! O Ferdy, Ferdy!" and she sank senseless on the floor.

Just at half-past seven o'clock, the evening of the 29th of December, the mail-car from Banbridge drew up at the public house, or, as the owner would have called it, the inn, at Common Cross, that rejoiced in the sign an title of the Golden Sheaf. A fine painted specimen of ripe corn flourished on the board that swung on one side of the door, while large letters underneath announced that there was entertainment provided, with good beds, for man and beast. This place of resort was well known in the neighborhood, and the buxom landlady, a widow, fat, fair, and forty, was a universal favorite. Rumor had it, at one time, that the portly personage who had been in close and familiar gossip with her for the last half hour by the brisk fire in her snug little parlor, was a favored suitor; but upon Mr. Marks' advances, the widow had never really smiled. He often took, it is true, "a draught of her best," and had an occasional friendly chat with her; but he was no great favorite with the mistress of the Golden Sheaf. She encouraged his visits, for she valued his custom, and greatly enjoyed hearing the odds and ends of news the butler contrived to pick up; but beyond this she went not. Just now they had a most comfortable and confidential communication together on the unusual events of the preceding day, when the sound of the mail-car made them both start up, and Marks appeared at the door, with Mrs. McGrath behind him, holding a candle.

Captain Sinclair jumped down—"Oh, is that you, Marks? All well above?"

"All well, sir—all well," and he touched his hat.

"Here, Mick," said the captain, handing the driver his gratuity.

"Thank you, captain—thank you, sir," rejoined the man, in the hearty tone of one who appreciates the donor as well as the gift bestowed.

"Take care; are my traps all here?" he added, as the man was about to drive off. "Portmanteau, small box, coat, rug, umbrella; yes, all right."

"Good night, sir."

"Good night," and the car drove rapidly away.

"Confoundedly cold night it is!" exclaimed the captain.

"Yes, indeed, sir," responded Marks, and his teeth chattered as he spoke.

"Here, take these things on;" and he threw his coat and rug on the portmanteau that was on the ground. "I'll warm my feet for a moment at your bright fire, Mrs. McGrath, for I declare I don't think I could get on, I'm so perished," and he stamped upon the door-step.

"And, welcome, captain, welcome," responded the smiling dame; "and maybe you'd let me get you a little drop of something warm; a little taste of mulled wine," she added in a lower tone; "it would take the chill out of you better than anything else."

"No, no, thank you, Mrs. McGrath; nothing but three minutes of your fire for my feet, and then I'll be off home."

"Will you go up, sir, by the Oak Walk or the avenue?" inquired Marks, who was still standing at the door.

"By the short way, the Oak Walk, to be sure," responded his master. "Why on earth do you ask?"

"Only," muttered the man, "that Corbett's wife, at the gate-house, is sick, and I suspect they're all abed by this, and the gates locked."

"Oh, no matter; I'll go up the other way, of course."

Upon which Marks shouldered the portmanteau, first carefully adjusting something that he had in his breast-pocket; and throwing the remaining articles upon his other arm, he trudged off down the road. "Ha!" he whispered to himself, "how careful he is of that small box; he wouldn't trust me with that; he'll take that himself, if you please. Maybe 'twill change owners sooner than he thinks." The owner opened a little wicket-gate leading off the high-road, and went rapidly along until he came to the point at the lake where the walk diverged and passed on through the grove. First laying down the portmanteau at one side near the stump of a tree, and wrapping up the rug and cloak, and laying them on it, he put his hand behind his ear and bent forward, to try if he could detect the advancing footsteps; then he looked round carefully, as if measuring the ground and space with his eye. "A little too dark, but that can't be helped," he growled, casting an uneasy glance up to the heavens, where dense black clouds almost entirely obscured the slender light of a young moon. Once more gazing about him, and apparently satisfied with his scrutiny, he passed stealthily in among the trees, and ensconsed himself behind the gnarled trunk of an old oak, which, even if it had been lighter, would have sheltered him from detection; then holding the pistol, with a demoniacal grin upon his visage, he cowered down, waiting for his unconscious victim, and muttering now and then: "'Tis informally cold. I hope that she-devil below there, at the Sheaf, won't keep him half the night."

BEST IN THE WORLD!

ABSOLUTELY PURE. CHURCH & CO'S ARM AND HAMMER BRAND. BI-CARB SODA. CHEMICALLY PURE.

AND

SALERATUS

Which is the same thing.

Impure Saleratus or Bi-Carb Soda (which is the same thing) is of a slightly dirty white color. If any spear white, examined by itself, but in COMPARISON WITH CHURCH & CO'S "ARM AND HAMMER" BRAND will show the difference.

See that your Saleratus and Baking Soda is white and PURE, as should be ALL SIMILAR SUBSTANCES used for food.

A simple but severe test of the comparative value of different brands of Soda or Saleratus is to dissolve a dessert spoonful of each kind with about a pint of water (hot preferred) in clear glasses, stirring until all is thoroughly dissolved. The deleterious insoluble matter in the inferior Soda will be shown after setting some twenty minutes or sooner, by the milky appearance of the solution and the quantity of floating flocky matter according to quality.

Be sure and ask for Church & Co.'s Soda and Saleratus and see that their name is on the package and you will get the purest and best made. The use of a white hand milk, in preference to Baking Powder, saves twenty times its cost.

Send no one pound package for valuable information and read carefully.

What is CAREY'S GREAT ENGLISH GESS NOTHING PECIFIC

G. E. S. S. is a liquid—a valuable combination composed of several of the most powerful and penetrating liquids known in chemistry, and was discovered by a celebrated English chemist, and was introduced into the United States in the year 1856, and since that time, by its marvelous curative powers has won for itself a world-wide reputation for its many cures of Rheumatism, Pains and Swellings, Burns and Scalds, Sprains and Bruises, Cuts and Old Sores, Contraction of the Muscles, Tender and Frosted Feet, Chilblains, Neuralgia, Pain in the Side, Chest and Back, and is a Specific for Horses as well for Man, and now stands at the head of all Liniments unrivaled, and scarcely a stable or house can be found without a bottle where it is known.

We challenge competition; $1,000 will be paid for any case of the above-named ills that G. E. S. S. will not cure if the directions are closely observed. G. E. S. S. only stands the test because it has proved the best. It is safe and sure. Always keep a bottle on hand, thereby in frequent instances avoiding the necessity of calling a doctor.

There is a balm for most all ills;
The mother craves one drop—her hartshorn pills—
When fairly tried, it then will show
That Carey's G. E. S. S. is more than blow.

Try a bottle and if it does not give satisfaction return it to your Druggist half-full and he will refund you your money.

Did space permit we could give you a hundred testimonials from men and families in this county that could not be doubted.

Call upon your nearest Druggist or Store-Keeper and ask for Carey's G. E. S. S., and not be put off by some other worthless trash. If he has not got it on hand, ask him to send for it for you

WARNER'S SAFE REMEDIES

Warner's Safe Pills

ARE AN IMMEDIATE AND ACTIVE STIMULUS FOR A TORPID LIVER, AND CURE COSTIVENESS, DYSPEPSIA, BILIOUSNESS, BILIOUS DIARRHŒA, MALARIA, FEVER AND AGUE, and should be used whenever the bowels do not operate freely and regularly.

Their action is gentler than that of other pills, and at the same time more effective. NO OTHER PILLS REQUIRE SUCH SMALL DOSES FOR THOROUGH WORK.

They have been used with great success in the English army, where Malaria prevails, and are the BEST ANTIDOTE FOR ALL KINDS OF MALARIAL POISON.

People who live or work in unhealthy places, and those of sedentary habits, should use them. Taken at bed-time, they promote rest and bring on natural evacuations the next forenoon.

They do not act directly on the bowels, but indirectly through the liver, by causing it to secrete the necessary bile, and should always be preferred to pills which operate as a violent cathartic, causing nausea and weakness.

If any person can prove that there is a better remedy of its kind than Warner's Safe Pills, he will be paid $1,000 by H. H. Warner & Co.

Price, 25 Cents a Box.
