INSURANCE! Your house may never burn; you must surely die. It is wise to provide against the chances of fire; it is necessary to provide against the certainty of death. A fire policy may never become a claim; the maturity of a life policy is only a question of time; yet many a business man seeks after the former, and seeks to avoid the latter. He insures his stock of goods to improve his credit and and protect his creditors, yet neglects to insure his life for the protection of his family. He loves the latter most, but business habits have taught him prudence in the former case, while want of thought has made him neglectful in the latter.
