Mrs. McKee was a woman of powerful endurance, and could in her younger days endure almost any hardship, and even in the fatte: part of her life it was wonderful how she battled against disease and was victorious. But like all that have gone before, and that will follow after, there comes a time when we must submit to the great enemy of all mankind, Death, and so with her. Her friends thought she would revive yet this time-her power of codurance would throw off the terrible fever, but the time had come and -the Master called her home to a blessed rest which Christ has prepared for those that love Him.

Mrs. McKce was exceedingly devoted to her children; there was nothing too hard for her too endure, if it would but enhance their happiness; and this mothcrly devotion and tender sympathy following them for so many years was the secret of two superior children, to honor society and to save that maternal disgrace which is often sharper than a serpent's tooth.

She had a strong attachment to the little Church growing up in Ridgbury. It was her deep anxiety that it might grow, and its influence extend far and wide, that it might become the radiating center where nany might find the way to Christ, May her prayers be answered, and the mantle of her desires fall upon so many, who will carry fliem into execution. Her funeral was largely attended, and took place in the Baptist Church on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. The services were conducted by the pastor, P. S. Everett. Thus one by one we pass away, and the places that now know us will know us no more foreger. But may we look unto Christ as did our friend, and have
