DRIFTWOOD. Ic for sail years and mile," is a sign in Baltimore, on Stirling street near Chew.

"To PECEBE COURIES, Attorness and Counsilloress at Law, St. Louis-Siress; is the opening of an invitation ahe lately got to lecture. 'TAIK'T no good mamma; frow it in the ash baarel," was the heartless comment of a four-year-old boy of Troy, New York, when shown his newly-arrived baby brother. A KENTUCKT teamster has a pair of oxen for which he has refused $5,000. They once belonged to a hard drinker, and always stop at a saloon, and won't move till the new owner goes in for a drink He doesn't care for it, but has to get into the habit to make the team go.

OLEOMARGARINE is probably doomed to take a back seat in Michigan. A far mer of that State has been detected making his rolls of butter hollow, filling the cavities with water, leaving the butter where all would freeze solid, and thus selling ice at the market price of butter per pound.

In a well-known cafe of the avenue Unter den Linden, the fashionable thoroughfare of Berlin, it is requested in the politest terms in French and German that gentlemen do not smoke here, but for Englishmen and Americans there is only the gruff sign, "no smoking here."- Why this "thusness."

SOMEBODY in British Columbia has seen the Bohemian who substituted a dictionary for the central station Bible here, and has gone him several better. The British Columbian put Gulliver's Travels in the Bible cover, and the trick wasn't found out till a Hebrew opened it to swear on the orthodox place in Dentero-

A LITTLE New England girls chews her food fine because she is obliged to. She swallowed a nickel the other day, or rather didn't quite swallow it. Like the late Mr. Macbeth's amen, it stuck in her throat. She can easily swallow liquids and small bits of solid food, but large bits turn the coin cross-wise and stop her

Some judges are terribly slow. A Sara toga lawyer thinks one of the New York Supreme Court justices takes the cake for this. Last week he wrote the Judge this note: "My Dear Sir: I argued a case before you in April, 1879. I wish you would decide it in my favor. If you will not do that, I wish you would decide it against me; and if you cannot do that, please refer the case to some other judge who will dispose of the matter."

It was slightly destructive of the gravity of demeanor which should belong to all participants in public worship in a church at Somerset, Ohio, the other evening, for an intoxicated horseman to ride his horse down the aisle to the front of pulpit and abuse the congregation an preacher. To further enliven matters a small boy in the rear part of the church held up a small dog by the hind legs for about a minute. The adjournment was sudden and unparliamentary.

Ax Erie Railroad freight train conductor suddenly discovered one evening recently that his caboose at the rear end of the train had become detached from the car next to it, and that the train had gone on and left him behind. A strong wind was blowing in the right direction, and the conductor made two brakemen go on top the car with a quilt. They held it up as a sort of sail, and thus the caboose sailed along pretty fast by fits and starts for four or five miles before they met the engine coming back for them.

A curious case of alleged dreaming come true has occurred at Youngstown, Ohio. A woman of that town married a workman, a native of Russian Poland, and soon afterward dreamed that he had left a wife and three children in Russian Poland, and that the youngest child was lying at the point of death. The dream was so vivid that she told a friend, but didn't mention it to the husband himself just then. But several days afterward during his absence she got a letter addressed to him in the Polish language, and took it to a neighbor who was also a Pole, and had the latter open it. It showed that her dream was true the youngest child in Europe being very ill indeed, and the European wife begging him to send her some money. The Ohio wife gave him a regular curtain lecture when he came

ALL New England is laughing over the self-conceit of a foreman in a Springfield factory. A visitor who saw him "doing the heavy standing around," asked him in what capacity he was employed there. "My friend," remarked the foreman in a tone of patronizing pity for the visitor's ignorance, "have you ever been in the Grand Central Depot at New York?" "I have." "Then you have noticed a man sitting in a little room very high up in the building near the tower who governs the movements of all the trains. He does not seem to have anything to do, and often sits with folded hands, and while he is still nothing stirs below. But when he gives the signal each train rolls out of the depot, in accordance with a perfect system, which will not admit of the least particle of confusion. The illustration serves to show you my place; but, in fact, sir, I am"-and here he gave his forehead a significant tap-"the brains of this establishment." The best part of it is that the old hands who had been there twenty-five years heard about it. The foreman has only been there a few weeks.

RETURNS of the remarkable things that happened, or perhaps didn't happen, during the great cold snap are still coming in with an energy that denotes an eager public demand therefor. A Kansas ice dealer took the ice off a creek near his house by sawing it into square blocks for convenience in handling. The weather was quite warm for several days after the ice was taken off, and the water remained opened. When it froze again, saw marks exactly like those in the first ice, laying the whole off into perfect squares, were plainly visible in the new ice. Of course. where the ice was taken off the water marks disappeared. But some days later he took the ice off the same spot again, and when it froze over for the third time. the same saw marks were again visible upon the third coat of ice. Well, this beats anything the oldest inhabitant of Towards has to offer, and we are a pretty ad inhabitant ourselves. But the Kansas City Journal, which first published the story, and ridiculed it, now professes to believe it implicitly from editorial observation. It says: "A number of persons have visited the spot within the past few days, and Mr. Turner cordially invites any one who has the ouriosity to do the same to call and be convinced."

"Investigation," says the last report from the aricultural department at Washington, "demonstrates the fact that farmers are learning the necessity of increasing the store of plantfood in the soil, of having it in an immediately available form, and of supplementing the deficiency with specific fertilizers." We think so, too, and that farmers are becoming too, and that farmers are becoming better versed in the philosophy of fertilization, and better able to adapt depended almost wholly upon mulchtheir practice to the peculiarities of ing.
