The Time Had Come. Three or four years ago when there was a grip into the potato market there lived near an interior village in this State a farmer named Peters. He raised good crops, paid his debts, and was down on rings of all sorts. The price of potatoes kept going up, and the old farmer grew uneasy. He came into the village every evening to see how the market stood, and although be never said much it was evident that he would burst his hoops pretty soon if things continued on of his great ability and learning, but lawyer and said : that way. As I have before remarked, you deny that social ostracism exists at the South. I have given you onc instance, and that instance was that of a Southern man by birth. I have no doubt many similar cases exist.

You need not go to Virginia or to any other Southern State to seek proof of that fact. We have it right here in our midst-it is in this Senate. Is not the Senator from Virginia (Mahone) ostracised by the Democratic side of this body? Dare you deny his courage? Dare you refer to his past record? Dare you speak of him as a man not fit to associate with honorable Senators? Is e not your peer as he is ours? I ask you that question and give you time to reflect. Has it not been aunounced by one of their spokesmen that they will not even pair with him? Has be not been openly insulted day after day by that side? They have unblushingly boasted that not a Democrat shall pair with him.

They do not recognize him as a friend and brother Senator, and why. Because he has had the manhood to tell them that he dissented from their political opinions; because he has dared to tell them that he will act according to his own convictions and conscience and not be dictated to by anyone, because he had the hardihood to, stand up and assert his rights as a freeman on the floor of the American Senate. For this offense you refuse to extend him
