The Chameleon.

In a lecture at the London Zoological Garden by St. George Mivart, and published in Nature, some curious things are told of the chameleon. His eyes move with complete independence of each other; one may be directed upward and forward, while expecting to see no spots on the varthe tip. Its limb movements are with comparitive celerity, attentively watching the fly's movements, now with one and now with the other eye. It sooner or later happens tance of the chameleon's head. Then

A YEVLY-VARNISHED carriage is liable to spot. To prevent this some wash the carriage two or three times in clean cold water, applied with a sponge instead of using a hose. This will help harden the surface and prevent it, to some extent, from being injured by the mud or water getting splashed on the job. Never let mud dry on the surface and then wash off nish. You will certainly be disappointed, and the only way to remedy the evil will be to have it revarnished. Soft water is better than hard water for the washing of carriages.
