From the Bizarre.

May I Shovel Your Snow Away? The flakes were thick on the city pave. It had snowed the night before.

And a slender lad, with a tattered dress,

With a plaintive tone and tearful eye,
Said he. "I want work to-day,
And though I am weak, kind Sir. I'll try
To shovel your snow away."

The shovel, upon his shoulder borne.

Had a weight he could scarce sustain,
And his pallid brow had an air forlorn,
As if he were used to pain;
With unmittened hand and no overcoat, He was out in the cold that day, To push his claim for an honest job,

And shovel the snow away. 'My Father died with the flowers of Spring;
The snows, which have fallen deep.
Are testing now on the lowly bed.
Where I often have gone to weep;
Oh, could he start from that sleep so sound,
And clasp his poor boy to-day,
I would haste to his grave in the hallowed ground,
And shovel its snow away.

"My Sister's cough will not leave her now;
And my Mother is feeble too,
I can buy them food and medicine,
With an honest job to do;
They often say that the wintry breath,
Which blows till it makes them start,
Is not so cutting, and stern, and chill,
As the ice around the heart."

That day when the sleigh-bells tinkled loud, That day when the sleigh-bells tinkled loud,
And the furs went proudly past.
And the joyous shout of the school-boys rang,
As the playful balls they cast.
Like a sob of the plaintive sea, there came
A note which was far from gay.
And its mournful burden was still the same—
"May I shovel your snow away?"

Please have the kindness to inform the gentleman who wrote this that when I made the foreign powers; that I repeated the same oath when I took my naturalization papers, that I was at the time more than thirty years of age, and knew consequently the value of an oath; that being a Christian, I believe in God, the avenger of perjury, that the same is true of all my brethern who are naturalized citizens, and "I say, landlord," he inquired, "have you that the loyalty of the Catholic body to the congot any more of them young hogs?"-Exchange stitution of the United States has been tested long enough, in peace and war, to give all sincere Americans a sure pledge for the future.

COMICAL.-A gentleman by the name of Man, residing near a private mad-house, met one of its unfortunate inhabitants, who had broken from his keeper. The manuac suddenly stopped, and, resting upon a large stick, exclaimed:

"Who are you, sir?" The gentleman was rather alarmed, but thinking to divert his attention by a pun. replied:

and a man by nature."

"Are you so?" rejoined the other: "why, am a man beside myself-so we two willfight you two!" He then knocked down Man and ran away.

"I am a double man; I am a Man by name my somewhere, before, but I cannot imagine "Very likely. I have been the keeper of a prison for upwards of twenty years!

Grocer-"Mr. Editor, I'll thank you to say I keep the best groceries in the city. Editor-"I'll thank you to supply my family with groceries gratis." Grocer-"I thought you were glad to get something to fill your paper." Editor-"I thought you were glad to fill your store room for nothing. It's a poor rule that won't work both ways." Exit grocer in a rage threatening to kill the paper.

YOUNG AMERICA AT HIS DEVOTIONS .- The editor of the Detroit Times says he heard, a day into bed before Mary does."

There is an old lady in Troy so full of by the fire to keep them from catching cold.

"Ah!" said a mischievous wag to a lady acquaintance of an aristocratic caste. "I perceive you have been learning a trade." "Learning a trade," replied the lady, indignantly, "you are very much inistaken." "Oh, I thought by the looks of your cheeks you had turned painter.'

There is no greater obstacle in the way of success in life, than trusting for something to turn up, instead of going to work and turning up something.
