

Details of the Horrible Accident on the Pacific Railroad—Fall of Another Bridge.

The St. Louis papers are filled with thrilling particulars of the late terrible accident on the Pacific Railroad. The editor of the News was on the doomed train and gives a graphic description of the disaster. After describing the rejoicings along the road, he says:

But how soon was the scene destined to be changed! How soon were so many of those bounding hearts to be pulseless. No one dreamed that death was near, and yet it lurked for us only a few miles further on. At 1 o'clock we left Hermann, preceded by a locomotive and tender, which had been sent forward to see that the way was clear, and no danger impending. Soon we came in sight of the bridge across the Gasconade river, about nine miles from Hermann, and about thirty-five from Jefferson city. The bridge is approached by an embankment, thirty feet high, which terminates in a massive stone abutment. Forty yards from the abutment, and just at the edge of the river, stands another stone pillar, three more of which reach to the other side of the stream, and support the bridge.

The river is about two hundred and fifty yards wide, and the bridge thirty feet high, at least. The Pioneer locomotive had crossed the structure safely, and was waiting on the other side to see the result of our attempt. There was no fear of danger and no apprehension of peril. We slowly moved along the embankment, and came on the bridge. The locomotive had passed the first span, and had its forewheels above the first pillar—beyond the abutment—there being then, resting on the first span, the locomotive, baggage car and two heavily loaded passenger cars. The weight was too much for the long, slender timbers which supported the rails and the enormous load above. Suddenly we heard a horrid crash—it rings in our ears now—and saw a movement amongst those in the car in which we were seated; then there came crash—crash—crash as each car came to the abutment, and took the fatal plunge. The affair was but the work of an instant. We were running slowly at the time, and the successive crashes came on at intervals of nearly a second. We ourselves were seated in the seventh car—there being three behind us—when we heard the horrid sound that came up, as each car slowly and deliberately took the leap, we hoped that our car might stop before it reached the precipice. But no; it seemed that the spirit of ruin was beneath, determinedly dragging each car to the spot, wrenching it from its fastenings, and hurling it to atoms beneath. Six cars fell in one mass, each on the other, and were shivered into fragments. The seventh fell with its forward end to the ground; but the other end rested on the top of the abutment. Those in it were only bruised. The eighth and ninth cars tumbled down the embankment before they reached the abutment.

Such a wreck we never saw, and hope never again to see. It was one undistinguishable mass of wooden beams, seats, iron wheels and rods, from beneath which came up groans of agony. Those who could crawled out of the ruin immediately, and either sought to relieve their own wounds or the wounds of their friends. Some wept tears of joy to find their friends alive; and others shuddered to find their friends dead. The uninjured organized themselves under the lead of Mr. Pride, the conductor, and endeavored, by chopping, to extricate those who were yet alive from the wreck. Here a beam was cut into a disengaged a broken arm; there an iron axle was pried up to relieve a mutilated leg. There was no shrieking and screaming, though all begged, for the love of heaven, to be extricated from some mass of iron or beam of wood, which pinned them to the earth. All begged for water, drank it when it was brought, and prayed for more. There was hardly an entirely uninjured man to be seen. Most of those who had escaped had streams of blood flowing over their faces from splinter wounds. Others limped and hobbled about, looking for their friends. A board shanty was the only shelter to be had, and that was soon filled with the wounded, whose silent, speechless agony was enough to make the stoutest heart shudder. Immediately after the accident, the heavens grew dark and black, as though the night had come. The wind shrieked from the leafless trees; the heavens were rent in twain, and from the crevice gleamed the white lightning, and the hoarse thunder bellowed its cruel mockings at the woe beneath. It seemed as if the elements were holding high carnival over the scene of slaughter.

The St. Louis Republican suggests that the devilish malice of some evil disposed persons may have been at work to weaken the superstructure and thus to expose to the hazard of death the hundreds of valuable lives in the cars on that day. This much is certain, that Mr. O'Sullivan himself believed that the bridge was perfectly safe, as he passed over it on a locomotive the night previous. Mr. O'Neal, the engineer, was left at Hermann, very dangerously injured. Some of the bodies of the dead were marked with unusual and terrible mutilations. One of the survivors informs us that he saw two corpses with the entrails torn out by splinters. It is not yet practicable to give a complete list of the wounded among so many passengers, and where few escaped without a cut or contusion.

The Republican also notes an accident to the train from the scene of the disaster for that city, containing the dead and wounded. It says:

On the way up, upon arriving at the bridge across the creek known as St. John's, about four miles above Washington, a portion of the train was left behind to provide for contingencies in case the bridge might break down, which was thought to be quite probable, the creek being much swollen from the heavy rains. The balance of the train proceeded to Hermann, took on the survivors, the wounded, and the dead, and about two o'clock started on its return. About five o'clock they reached the bridge across St. John's Creek. Before starting to cross, a number of the unhurt at the disaster, (among whom was our informant,) got out of the cars and walked across the bridge; afterwards, as soon as the locomotive started to cross, the whole structure gave way, and the entire train of cars, containing the dead and wounded, and most of the survivors, was left on the other side of the bridge.

Those who walked across got in the cars which arrived last night, and proceeded immediately to the city. How soon the dead and wounded may be brought in, it is impossible to conjecture. When our informant left the creek, there was no show for anything to cross, there being no boats of any description at hand. The wounded were all placed in one car, and with the kind attentions of physicians and friends were doing as well as could be expected. The dead (28 in number) were all boxed up and placed in separate cars.

MR. WEBSTER'S ESTATE.—The executors of the estate of Daniel Webster have sent printed circulars to persons having claims against the same, in which it is stated that the net amount of assets in their hands is $55,180 89, and the amount of claims is $155,000. The executors are now making a distribution among the creditors. They divide twenty-one and three-quarters per centum, retaining about one per centum to defray the expenses and charges in the suit against the city of New Orleans for a claim of $25,000 for counsel fees in the Gaines' controversy.—Boston Times.

FATAL ELECTION AFFRAY IN ALBANY.—Thirty Nov. 6.—The election excitement pervades the whole city. In the Second Ward, the polls are swarming with voters. Michael Drannon, a fighting man, assaulted William M. Crossen, when the latter drew a pistol and shot him through the heart, causing instant death.

CALIFORNIA PRODUCTIONS.—Among the wonders at the State Agricultural Exhibition in California were a calf, seven months and a half old, which weighed eight hundred pounds; two hogs which weighed 900 pounds; a sunflower, three feet in circumference; a pea-stalk two inches long; a cluster of twelve large pears on a single twig; and a stem of a peach tree, five feet long, containing thirty magnificent peaches, some of which measured seven inches in circumference.

EVERY READER will please notice the advertisement headed "OF THE BOARD OF EMPLOYMENT," and send for a full descriptive Catalogue of all our Illustrated Works. [IT IS THE INTENTION in the great art of selling books, to send you a Catalogue of our most making, which is far better than all the old catalogues in California and Australia.] Any person wishing to embark in the enterprise, will risk little by sending to the publisher, $25, for which he will receive sample copies of the various works, (at wholesale prices) carefully boxed, insured, and directed, allowing a very liberal per centage to the Agent for his trouble. With these he will soon be able to ascertain the most saleable, and order accordingly. Address (not paid): ROBERT SEARS, Publisher, 231 William Street, New York.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—A certain Cure for termination of Blood to the Head.—Elias Howe, one of the most celebrated advocates of temperance in the Union, admits that he suffered more than any one he ever heard of from termination of blood to the head, although he was most abstemious both in eating and drinking, also in taking rest, yet he was so bad at times, that in the midst of his most eloquent discourses, he was compelled to leave off addressing his auditors, and on several occasions has been carried away from meeting completely senseless. Having seen the good effects of Holloway's Pills, he was induced to give them a trial, and to use his own words, they acted like magic. It is fourteen months ago since he commenced taking this celebrated medicine, which completely cured him of his ailment, and he has not had any return of this complaint since. These Pills are wonderfully efficacious in all disorders of the stomach and bowels. "There came a certain local next and truly distressing" read the letter. His mother immediately interrupted his interesting story, "Hawey," said she, "I know why Mr. Spokesman refers to that telegraph, it is to old Zedekiah's son, who was awfully proud and stuck up after he got that nice stick-and-span bran-new suit at Rockhill & Wilson's. The old man had heard of the 'comb,' and that he was 'in' for a 'new rig' himself, whenever it met the views of the gentlemen."

New Principle! No Poison! Rhodes' Fever and Ague Cure, OR, AN ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

FOR the Prevention and Cure of FEVER and AGUE, or CHILL FEVER; DUMB AGUE, and other INTERMITTENT and REMITTENT FEVERS; ALSO OF BILIOUS FEVERS, accompanied by TYPHOID SYMPTOMS; TYPHOID FEVER, YELLOW FEVER, SHIP and JAIL FEVER, GENERAL DEBILITY, NIGHT SWEATS, and all other forms of disease which have a common origin in Malaria or Miasma.

This subtle atmospheric poison, which at certain seasons is unavoidably inhaled at every breath, is the same in character wherever it exists—north, south, east, or west,—and will every where yield to this newly discovered ANTIDOTE, which neutralizes the poison, completely purifies the system, and thus entirely removes all the cause of disease. The proprietor distinctly claims these extraordinary results for its use: It will protect any resident or traveller, even in the most sickly or swampy localities, from any Ague or Bilious disease—whatever, or any injury from constantly inhaling Malaria or Miasma. It will instantly check the Ague in persons who have suffered for any length of time, from one day to twenty years, so that they need never to have another chill, by continuing its use according to directions. It will immediately relieve all the distressing results of bilious or ague diseases, such as general debility, night sweats, &c.—The patient at once begins to recover appetite and strength, and continues until a permanent and radical cure is effected. And as a proof that it is also

WORTHY OF PUBLIC CONFIDENCE.

Because of its Singular and Entire Harmlessness, The following certificate from one of the most celebrated chemists in the United States is attached to every bottle: New York, June 11, 1855. "I have made a chemical examination of 'RHODES' FEVER AND AGUE CURE,' or 'ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA,' and have tested it for Arsenic, Mercury, Quinine, and Strychnine, but have not found a particle of either in it, nor have I found any substance in its composition that would prove injurious to the constitution. JAS. R. CHILTON, M. D., Chemist." This allows of its FREE USE AS A PREVENTIVE, by which all persons may be sure of entire freedom from the above named diseases, no matter how sickly the season or swampy the locality.

PROOFS OF EFFICACY are frequently published, and the confidence of the public is asked only in proportion to its actual merits wherever introduced and used. These only are relied upon to prove its worth. One or two bottles will answer for ordinary cases; some may require more. Directions in German, French and Spanish, accompany each bottle. Price one dollar. Prepared and sold by the proprietor, JAMES A. RHODES, Providence, R. I. For sale by druggists generally. Nov. 12, 1855. 1y
