BY THE CARRIER. JANUARY 1st, 1857.

A kappy New Year to you, Friend! Lim glad once more to see Your happy, bonnie face, and lead A drop of joy to thee; and though my offering may be small, statill receive it-'tis my all. Since last we met, another year

Has slowly passed away-To some it has been bright and clear Assummer's loveliest day. To such all her gifts were happiness, · Hor greeting joy, her salutation peace; While soft and sweet the thankful prayer Ascends on the gently rising air. This is the time when spirit-dreams Beat in each bosom high; When bright along our pathway gleams The scene of days gone by;

Of the calm, still lake where the echo plays On its glassy face 'mid the sun's last rays. Such are the joys those spirits feel Whom fortune gives relief: But ah lo'er other spirits stent

The agonies of grief. Come to the gilded palace! Beath! When joys their revels keep! Come when the tender infant's breath First warms its mother's cheek!

Come when the youthful hearts beats high! While his bark glides smooth in the sunny sky! at me when the heart of the brave and free Exults in the thoughts of victory. And thy voice is sad but when thy word By the wandering stranger's ear is heard, It sounds like the voice of a loved one near Which beckons him home to a happier sphere But pass these scenes of sorrow o'er:

We keep a jubileo, And on our bounding hearts no more Come words of misery.

Tis New Year's day, and the blithe and gay Are keeping their joyous holiday ! We'll sing, as we meet in the festive hall, Of our cheering hopes, to the minstrel's call Another year has gone, "you see,"

As all the old folks say; . But bliss is here, and what care we For years that pass away!

The world may be old, but it still is green, And still is the face of beauty seen ; While soft and sweet from her sloping bills. The murinurings come of her laughing rills. The wise men say that all our race

Grow wiser every year; And speculate on time and place To make their doctrines clear. No doubt we all are very wise, And growing wiser still; And soon on "fame" ous wings we'll rise,

And wisdom-drops distil. Why only think ! dear sir! at Four Our boys are large and thrifty, And reason more of ancient lore Than former men at Pifty! I would not be surprised, indeed-As wisdom ceases never-

If soon in blazing words we'read That men may live forever! Because from observation made Upon the work of death, It now is known—though long delayed— Men die for want of breath!

The other arts—each in its turn— Through dreamy regions run; Achieving mightly deeds, they spurn The goal their fathers won. Suppose we throw acide the veil

That shrouds in mystic gloom The happy scenes, the joyful tale, And pleasures yet to come: No! no! a silence dear and deep

Sits sadly pensive there; And guardian bands these secrets keep Close in their grottoes fair. But, hark! a long-drawn, piercing shrick, Sharp and shrill as a mouses's squeak,

On the northern blast is carried; "Tis a "shrick for freedom"-Kansas groaps For thrice killed men she sighs and moons, Oft killed, but never buried ! Not thus Fremont and his howling crew

Af niggers black and parsons blue-They're dead and likewise buried. Now the stars and stripes securely wave · O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave," Since Buck the day has carried, Since (the county and) the country's safe, From foes within, (a happy escape.) Let's see what we've been doing. The Council-men, alone, unaided By 'foreign powers,' some streets have graded;

Broad sidewalks, too, are finely shaded, By trees of two months' growing. The "Tape-worm," too, unwinds its coil, It lives, it moves, it crawls along the soil, But changes its direction.

Lafore it hills are levelled, vallies raised, 'Aill Hanever's reached,-the powers be praised,

For making this selection. Venice had its bridge-the "bridge of Sighs," And so has Gettysburg a bridge of size,

A workman-like creation; A Tu(y)lor's work, well stitched with iron | Is style and at reduced prices for sale at thread, freure and lasting on its rock-bound bed,

It beats the nation. A undder theme-but pleasing and: A resting place for the Dead 's beer bad

Which shall be " Ever Green ?" A h ting spot for the sacred manes Of the loved and gone, who e cherish'd names giving bargains.
