We have just elevated a Penn-ylvanian to the highest office in the world, and to-morrow he enters upon the discharge of his official duties. Shall the burning shame be fixed upon Pennsylvania, pext fall, that it failed to sustain triumplantly, his administration? No. gentlemen, I do not believe our State can be swerved from her proud position. For myself. I shall go into this contest with all my heart, and labor ardently and untiriogly for the success of the great Democratic party. Gentlemen, again I thank you for the distinguished fonor you have conferred upon

Remarks of Mr. Brewer.

In the State Senate, on the 26th ult., Hon. GED.W. Brewer made the following truly cloquent remarks on the resolution introduced by Mr. Weish in relation to the death of Dr. : KANE, the intropid Arctic explorer.

Mr. Brewer said-

Mr. Speaker I have the melancholy pleasure of attesting my appropration of the reso-Antion submitted for the consideration of the Schate. This touching and mournful scene is ! than due to the cherished memory of that young hero, who so calculy sleeps in the quiet of an honored but untimely grave. I had not in-tended to mingle the broken accents of my voice with the appropriate and eloquent testimonials awakend by the national sorrow of this hour, but I am unable to suppress the unhidden emotions which spring to my lips; and generous, and so heroic, to pass away from the toils and pleasures and honors of earth, into the dark and silent house of the dead, without a brief and humble expression of my gratitude for his services and admiration for his genius. A whole nation, with heavy ness and silence, to the early and suggestive temb of Elisha R. Kane. But we find a parnot unpheasing reflection that so little of all city of Baltimore, to engage in other business. Try his wonderful remedy, and give the Professor a new tial solace, even in this season of grief, in the that made his life distinguished and eventful, and that now makes his memory a cherished glory, can ever fade from the grateful recollections of his becaused countrymen, or perish from the best and proudest records of the husame inputses and aspirations which were and to distinguish the signal achievements of his wonderful career. He was not a warrior, and yet he conquered a most spleadid heritage. His nodding plume never led a column into victorious battle, but he blazed a hero in the vala-guard of the world's grand march. If not mighty in arms-if not lavincible behind Christianity:

"Peace hath its victories.

No less renowned than war." From the alter of science he snatched his torch, and with its mild radiance illuminated the frezen regions of untraveled darkness-at the sacred shrine of philanthropy, was kindled into power and enthusiasm the lofty purposes. of his generous nature, and straight the footsteps of civilization echoed along the dreary shore of perpetual winter, and the holy songs of a simple, but touching worship, swelled into l the choras of a surpassing music, among the goodings of a Democratic meeting in Mounting everlasting snows of the jee-bound North. His devotion to science was beautified by the gonial to er of a pure and elevated sympathy week. Ditto the proceedings of a public and compassion. The proud trophy that re- | meeting in Petersburg. corded his achievements in the scientific world was decorated with the fair and unfading garland of a high and manly generosity. A genthe and plaintive voice swept across, the tranquil vaters of the blue sea, and whispered to his listening extilit mournful story of a wid-Lest sorrow, amid the shoulded grandeur of pulatial halls. That home, once bright, joyons and happy, was voiceless now-that i with all its hallowed momories, and all its : springing hopes, was a desolation now. That tale of sorrow, so touching and so mournful, thrilled every chord and animated every emotion of a manly bosom. The youthful hero fixed his eager gaze upon the cold beams of the Northern Star, and bounded along the path of horser and of glory. With a firm self, step and throbbing breast, he movel away from the scenes of his childhood—from the associations of his youth-from the eadearments of his bome. The child of a marvelious destiny, he strode away from the fascinations of Mr. 1 25 4 17 5 19 17 is a town in Georgia. affluence-from the charms of heavity and of fashi m-ir na the taste and clega rec of a polished so dety, to enrich the annals of the world's wisdom, and to bring back health and leadily to the faded cheek, and joy and contratment to the lone and desolated home of Laly Franklin. Failure could not daunt his; courage-danger could not change his purpose. The wintry winds of that inhospitable !

A sy and time he started upon the toils, trials and privations of that perilous journey. He returned, after many months, with an unwearied spirit, but with a broken constitution and shattered health-and now, alas! he is no more! It is but proper that Pennsylvania should pay her willing tribute to the memcay of her own distinguished son, whose untimely demise has clothed in the habilements of an unfergued mourning every civilized perple on the face of the earth. He was not persuitted to die in the home of his youth-in the land of his birth-but with his family around him, and with the low whispering winds of heaven, bearing to his ears upon their delicate wings the perfume and the music of a more sunny clime; Elisha K.
