THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 21.

Vallandigham's Sentence.

We publish in another place the finding of the Military Court in the case of C. L. VALLANDIGHAM, and his sentence to confinement in Fort Warren until the end of the war.

That a man so pestilent and so undisguisedly hostile to the Government should have been suffered to go at large as long as he did, is more a subject of wonder than that he was at last arrested, tried and punished. From the beginning of the war, both in and out of Congress, he has labored to embarrass, cripple and weaken the Government, and in the same degree to encourage and strengthen the rebellion; and he has not ceased to sow broadcast in the popular mind the most seditious sentiments. His speeches have been widely disseminated by the copperhead press of the North, and no less so by the rebel press of the South. In the North he was the accepted leader of his party; while in the South he was regarded as the champion of the friends of the rebellion in the North. No man can estimate the mischief he has done, or how many lives have been sacrificed in consequence of the hope, courage and vigor he has infused into rebel hearts and rebel arms. Certainly it was high time his dangerous tongue was stopped.

In times of peace we can afford to let men talk pretty much as they please; and it is the glory of the country that it is so; but the rules and usages of peace are not applicable to a state of war, especially such a war as this. But when the rebel armies shall have been subdued, and we shall have nothing but copperheads to fight with, Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, according to his sentence, will be set at liberty, and allowed to talk ad libitum to as many people as will listen to him.

The Rebel Papers on the Situation.

The rebel papers are by no means pleased with the situation in Mississippi. Thus the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser admits that the passage of the Vicksburg batteries by our gunboats gives us almost entire control of the river between Vicksburg and Port Hudson, and prevents the shipment of supplies from the country west of the Mississippi. The same paper adds:

"The land movements of the enemy through the interior of the State of Mississippi are in themselves of no small importance, and their success seems to indicate either that the Confederates in that section are too few in numbers to meet and check the advance of the enemy, or that they have no leader possessed of the qualities which have made the names of Wheeler and Morgan famous.

"Weeks ago we heard the fear expressed that too large a portion of the cavalry belonging to the army of the West was being transferred to Tennessee, and it was then predicted that the Yankees would seize the opportunity to make raids for the purpose of destroying provisions and the growing crops. The prediction has been fulfilled, and the people of Central Mississippi are now suffering the consequences of one of the most daring raids which has been committed by the enemy since the war began. In their march the Yankees have destroyed an immense amount of stores, greatly needed at the present time, and have done almost incalculable injury to the country."

The Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle of the 8th inst., remarks:

"Our hold upon the Mississippi once wrested from us, it is gone forever, or at least so long as the war shall continue, which would isolate the government from the west, put an end to all intercourse, and place us at disadvantage where we shall enter upon the adjustment of terms of peace. A great deal has been said about guarantying the free navigation of the river to the Northwest, but with what plausibility could our government come forward with such a proposition when the entire river, with all its fortifications, erected by the Confederacy is already in their possession? Of course they would laugh at such a proposition coming from us under such circumstances, and hence it is of the first importance that our present position on the river be permanently held. Better far would it be to sacrifice Richmond, Charleston, Savannah or Mobile than to yield the river by which the Confederacy will be rent in twain, the West hopelessly cut off from the East, and a vast section of the best producing portion of the country subject to the depredations and spoliations of the enemy. The very thought of such a result is excruciating."

In reference to the late raid into Mississippi the Chronicle says:

"The boldness and impudence of the federals in some cases were remarkable. A couple of their scouts were sent into Hazlehurst an hour or two before their raid upon the place, who walked boldly into the telegraph office and penned a dispatch to Jackson, stating that the Yankee raiders had turned to the northeast. Their true character, however, being recognised, there was some talk of arresting them, when they—the Yankees—drew their pistols, defied the officers and men of the town, mounted their horses and rejoined their commands, then within two or three miles of the place. After which the whole force entered the town, in squads of fifty and a hundred—several hours' interval between the van and rear-guard—as leisurely and with as much nonchalance as our country people would ride into town on a gala day.

"The damage to the Southern Railroad extends over a distance of four and a-half miles, commencing a mile west of Newton, running east. Two bridges, each about one hundred and fifty feet long, seven culverts and one cattle gap constitute the track injury done. Twenty freight cars were burned at Newton, and the depot building and two commissary buildings. The telegraph wire was taken down for five miles and cut in pieces."

Retaliation--Pro and Con.

Our dispatches, a day or two ago, contained the following from the Petersburg Express of the 15th inst.:

"The retaliatory resolutions adopted by the Confederate Congress provide that every commissioned officer who shall command negroes for military service against the Confederate States, when captured, shall be put to death; and negroes, when thus captured, shall be delivered to State authorities, to be dealt with according to the present or future laws of the State."

But though the spirit is willing, the flesh is weak, in this matter of "retaliation."

The Richmond Enquirer, said to be the official organ of JEFF. DAVIS, looks at the subject on both sides, and, after taking the pros and cons, in a very long editorial pours forth great griefs over the difficulties which beset the matter. It admits that the only chance for retaliation is in accordance with the resolution of the rebel Congress authorizing the putting to death of all white officers found connected with negro regiments. But then, it adds, the Yankees will in turn hang our officers,—and closes with a regular "boo hoo" over the misfortunes of the Confederacy.

The Question of Iron-Clad Vessels in England--Important Experiments.

Since the news of the failure of the attack on Charleston reached England, the subject of iron-clad vessels, monitors, etc., has been a general matter of discussion, both in parliament and in the newspapers. In the course of the debate in the House of Commons, on the 28th ult., Sir J. EFFINGSTONE said that, while great speed and strength must be conceded to such structures as the Warrior and Black Prince, it was impossible to maneuvre them in action or bring them under the control of their crews;—that owing to their "limited power of steerage," they are liable to lose their "way" in action, and so are rendered unserviceable. On a recent occasion it took "seven miles" of seaway to maneuvre the Black Prince, and "in a sea" it was impossible to get such vessels "round to the wind." This is just the kind of difficulty that was experienced in the handling of the New Ironsides during the attack on Sumter, and hence what is being considered in England by way of remedy for the defect must be of interest here. On this point, Mr. Lindsay said that he had a letter from Capt. Cochran, of the Warrior, stating that a hydraulic steering gear had been fitted to the ship, by which one person could steer her, and make her turn in a complete circle in six minutes. But other experiments were going on to cure the same defect. On the 25th of April a trial was made of a small iron steamer of four hundred and seventy tons burden and one hundred and sixty-five feet long, called the Hebe. This vessel is fitted with two propellors moved by two independent engines, and she was made to describe a complete circle in three minutes and nine seconds. With the helm lashed "amidships," and the screws working in opposite directions, she made the circle in four minutes and fifty-eight seconds.

In the course of the debate Lord Clarence Paget, one of the Secretaries of the Admiralty, alluded to an experiment made only the day before, which would probably alter the whole construction of the upper frameworks of armored ships. His statement was rather vaguely made, but on turning to another column of the Times we find an account of the experiment to which he probably referred. It was the trial of a new target, made on the 28th ult., at Shoeburyness. The target represented a section ten feet by thirteen, of the broadside of a ship armor-plated according to a plan submitted by a Mr. Chalmers. The outside plate was three and a-half inches of hammered iron, backed up by ten inches of teak wood laid on in streaks of five inches wide. Between every two of these streaks was laid a horizontal plate of iron, three-eighths of an inch in thickness, and this, after passing under the ten inches of wood, was riveted to an iron plate one and a quarter inches thick at the back. Behind this again was another thickness of five inches of teak, and against this was the "inside skin" of the ship, being a plate of iron five eighths of an inch thick.

It will be seen that the above arrangement of vertical and horizontal plates produces a series of cells, and the object of that is to distribute the impinging force of a shot over a large surface. The result of the trial proved that this object was to a large extent effected. Twenty-seven shots were fired at the target, beginning with sixty-eight-pounders, continuing with two-hundred-pounder solid cast iron shot fired three at a time, and ending with a salvo of three one-hundred-and-ten-pounders and two sixty-eight pounders, concentrated on a single point. The crash at this last fire was terrific; the shots were splinted into fragments, and the outside plate of the target was dinted—that was all.

Besides the distribution of the force of an impinging shot effected by the mode of plating which thus passed such a severe ordeal, the plan, it is claimed, has other merits. Each superficial foot of a vessel so constructed would weigh eleven pounds less than an equal area of the other armored vessels under construction, and the cost is nearly 25 per cent. less.

This account of the result of English discussions and experiments would not be complete without stating that the target which had resisted such a storm of heavy shot was perforated like card board by a steel-pointed three-hundred-pounder projectile, fired from an Armstrong rifle, with a charge of forty-five pounds of powder.

The Peterhof--The Rebel Agent Mason Interested.

A curious revelation has lately been made, by the publication of a letter in the London Daily News. The letter referred to was written by Messrs. Bennett & Wake, the shippers of the Peterhof, and appears to be a copy of a kind of circular inviting "enterprising" merchants, as Messrs. Bennett & Wake themselves are said to be, to engage in the trade with the Confederate States, via Matamoras. The Daily News, in a paragraph introducing the letter, tells us something of the parties named in it, as follows:

Mr. Bennett, we may observe, was on board the Peterhof when she was taken; Mr. Wake was one of the deputation which waited on Lord Russell to press for a spirited assertion of the rights of British commerce. Mr. Redgate, mentioned in the circular, was a passenger by the Peterhof, and wrote the protest against her seizure. Messrs. Harding, Pullein & Company, it will be remembered, were the brokers for negotiating the Confederate loan, and Mr. Harding was one of the deputation which waited on Earl Russell. It will be seen that he is the gentleman named as the factor for the distribution of the proceeds of the cotton, &c. Mr. Bisbee, who holds the contract to deliver goods "into the Confederate States," and who is not bound to take them through Matamoras, is a citizen of the South. With these indications we subjoin the document:

(COPY.)

No. 17 GUINEVILLE, N. O.

DEAR SIR:] We may state for the guidance of any friends we may be desirous of shipping to America, that arrangements have been made for the despatch of a vessel by us to the Rio Grande early in the first week of December, that cost of freight and insurance on goods can be paid at the port of delivery. The services of the highly respectable firm of Messrs. Brown, Fleming & Co., at Matamoras, have been secured, like those of Mr. Redgate, Lloyd's agent, an expert in cotton, and who has been resident nearly forty years in Texas and Mexico. That gentleman's services will be of great value to shippers in respect to his local knowledge and influence, and also as regards agency of the inland transits, and landing and shipping of goods and cotton. Mr. Harding, of the firm of Messrs. Harding, Pullein & Co.; of this city, has been named and consented to act as factor for the receiving of the proceeds in cotton and the equal distribution of the same to shippers according to value of respective shipments, and who will effect the necessary insurance.

Further, a Mr. Bisbee, of the Confederate States of America, holds a contract from that government where by he is to receive one hundred per cent. on invoice cost, payable in cotton at special value, clear of all charges of freight, &c., for any goods he may deliver into the Confederate States. Said contract has been authenticated by Mr. Mason and others. He is willing to share same, say to the extent of fifty per cent., with any houses who may feel inclined to ship. Moreover, said parties are at liberty to send out their own supercargoes, and if the goods can meet with a better market, shippers by our vessel may avail themselves of said contract or not, but in the latter case (if they do not send out under Bisbee's contract) there will be no certainty of getting cotton back, as the wages traffic cannot be properly carried out without the aid of government support in shape of teamsters to attend to cattle, and which the Confederate government will supply from the army and facilitate the inland transport of goods and the bringing back of cotton for the contract. In the event of peace or cessation of hostilities the Confederate government, by the contract, binds itself to receive goods that are shipped but not delivered, and for any order not shipped, but in course of same, ten per cent. profit upon invoice cost and charges.

Any further information you may require we shall be happy to give you our best efforts to obtain from the respective parties interested.

We remain, dear sir, yours truly,

BENNETT & WAKE.

THIRD EDITION. REVISED AND ENLARGED,

OF

REDFIELD'S

Hand-Book of the U. S. Tax Law,

(With the Original and Amended Law in full.) For Lawyers, Officers of the Revenue, Professional and Business Men, and all who have to pay Taxes. By AMASA A. REDFIELD, Esq., Counsellor-at-Law.

The Third and Revised edition of this new popular TAX BOOK PUBLISHED is offered to the public with the assurance that it contains the fullest and most minute information connected with every law passed by the Excise Law. Everything is given—nothing is omitted. In the preparation of the NEW EDITION the Compiler has been greatly assisted by a number of the most intelligent Collectors and Assessors in different parts of the country; and it is confidently believed that the work is now as near perfect as it is possible to make it.

All of the latest regulations and decisions of the new Commissioner are given.

Several Special Chapters are devoted to the Income Tax.

The Publishers invite a comparison of this work with any other, and believe, in view of the information given, it is by far the best and cheapest book yet offered to the public. One vol., 12 mo., 340 pages, neatly bound. Price, $1 25.

Sent by mail, prepaid, on receipt of price.

THE CAPTIVITY OF GEN. COROBAN.—The only authentic and reliable narrative of the trials and sufferings endured during his confinement of nearly SIX MONTHS in Richmond, and other Southern cities, by Brig. Gen. MICHAEL COROBAN, the hero of Bull Run. Price, only 25 cents.

MISS MARTHA BROWLOW; or, THE HEROINE OF TENNESSEE.—A truthful and graphic account of the many perils and privations endured by Miss Martha Browlow, the lovely and accomplished daughter of the celebrated Parson Brownlow, during her residence with her father, in Knoxville in the year 1861. Price 15 cents.

SIX MONTHS AMONG THE SECESSIONISTS.—A reliable and thrilling narrative of the sufferings and adventures of Miss Sarah D. Palmer, a native of Pennsylvania, who, at the opening of the great Southern Rebellion, was teaching school at Knoxville, the home of Parson Brownlow. In this work, Miss Palmer thrillingly depicts the many startling adventures she met with in her flight from state to State, in the service of the Confederacy, and in her pursuit, by her disappointed suitor. Price, only 15 cts.

All the above works are beautifully illustrated.

In order that these works, which are filled with the most thrilling incidents, may be placed within the reach of every one, they have been issued in the cheap style, in order to sell them at such a price as to be within the means of all.

Single copies may be had, post paid, on receipt of price. Address,

JOHN P. HUNT,
MASONIC HALL, FIFTH STREET.
