The Union Convention.

A telegram from Harrisburg, in the GAZETTE of yesterday morning, stated that it is probable that the Union State Convention, which was appointed to be held in this city on the first day of July, will be postponed to a future day, on account of the troubles arising from the invasion of the State by the rebels. In fact, many of the delegates are actively engaged in the defence of the State, and for that reason could not and would not attend. The Democrats went on with theirs at the very moment when the marauders were pouring over the border of the State; but as they are peace-men, and not very much opposed to the rebels, it was only in keeping with their principles to go on with their party work, that being the only thing about which they manifest much solicitude. Loyal men, however, cannot consistently act so; hence the suggestion to postpone the Convention until the soil of the State shall no longer be polluted by the foot of an armed rebel, is right enough.

Our dispatches seem to leave no further room for doubt as to the position of the main body of LEE's army. As we had anticipated for several days past, it now appears that having been baulked in his attempt to steal a march on General HOOKER, and make a sudden swoop down on Washington from the front, he has had to content himself with the alternative, which no doubt so prudent and prescient a general had from the first foreseen and made his arrangements to suit, in case his first scheme failed—that alternative being precisely what we are now informed he has done, namely the re-occupation of the Shenandoah Valley, which BURNSIDE's movement on Fredericksburg last year forced the rebels to abandon.

As to the designs of the rebel General, none of his movements reported since our last, seem to throw any clearer light upon them. One of our cotemporaries makes the following judicious remarks on this subject:

It is not probable that Lee has moved so far from Richmond simply to refresh his army and to harvest the crops on the Shenandoah, or that he will be content with the achievements made by his advance and detached columns. Though the vigilance and activity of Hooker's army have foiled the rebel attempts on Washington from the front and have postponed any immediate attack, it is very certain that Lee will not abandon the object for which he has made this northward expedition without the effort to accomplish it in part or in whole, and it becomes of the greatest importance to watch his movements and to penetrate his mysterious designs. That he has a grand scheme of invasion on hand is evident, and it remains to be seen whether Baltimore, Harrisburg or Pittsburgh is to be the end and aim of his march.

We have been taught by experience that when Lee's picket guard along our front is the strongest, when the marchings and evolutions of his army are most conspicuous, and when the smoke of his camp fires ascends most freely, he is engaged in developing some masterly strategy, under cover of which he is very sure to "turn up" where least expected. Just now there is business along all his outposts—bridges destroyed West to Cumberland, cavalry fighting East in the Loudon valley, and terror-inspiring raids all across his Northern front. It is just possible that these active movements on this wide periphery conceal the more rapid motion of the "hub," and that while we are amused or alarmed by Pleasanton or Jenkins, the bulk of the rebel army is slowly being transported across the Potomac and taking up a position in new camps, where a thorough system of invasion can be organized. The first wild rumors a week ago placed a large force North of the Potomac. This soon wasted away to a few thousand men, and this again has by slow accretions reached an imposing force, which is massed in several places, the whole forming a cordon of outposts, preventing the egress of information and enclosing a large field in which active preparations may be made for a vigorous campaign. Slowly and surely Lee would seem to be throwing his army upon its new base of operations. By fives and tens of thousands, and with little perceptible noise it may be rolled across the river, there compacted into a solid body, and suddenly launched upon Pennsylvania or Baltimore. In very weight and unexpectedness would give it a terrible momentum and render more difficult the task of checking it.

It is obviously the duty of the North, if such be Lee's plans, and indeed if Lee had no such plan, the duty would be equally imperative, to effect a thorough organization of its militia and home reserves.

The value of an organization has been proved by the fact that from New York and Brooklyn, where the militia system is thorough, a score of regiments have been sent at once into the field, while not one has been obtained from all the State besides. A presumed emergency arises, a sister commonwealth asks aid, and before a single sun has set, thousands of men are under arms and ready to march. The very delay was caused by defects in an organization which, strange to say, proved itself richer and more abundant in men than in arms and equipments. Before Pennsylvania could determine the terms and limits of military service of its own citizens, there were thousands of New Yorkers upon her soil, and prepared to meet the rebel invaders.

A uniform system should be put in operation at once in all the Northern States, so that we may always have a reserve force for a contingency. The report of a rebel raid must not find us alarmed and calling upon the Federal government for assistance or frantically invoking neighboring States, for the men and arms that we should have thoughtfully provided and laid up against the time of need. It is the duty of a free people to rely on its own strong arm for protection, and it is their privilege to be at all times prepared to do battle in its own behalf.

A Confederate Spy Making Union Speeches in Ohio.

Doubtless there are plenty of rebel spies in every part of the country, but the difficulty of communicating with the "Confederacy" may often render their activity fruitless. The N. Y. Evening Post tells the following curious story of one of these spies playing the part of Union orater:

A young man from this city, travelling for business a few weeks ago in Ohio, attended a Union mass meeting held in one of the large cities of that state, and among the speakers recognized, in the most ardent of them all, an Englishman who had formerly been his teacher in one of the ward schools up-town. At the close of the speech the young man appproached his former friend, calling him by his old name. The name was disclaimed by the Union orator, and all acquaintance with the young man denied. But the New Yorker could not be shaken off thus easily, and pressed his inquiries until he succeeded in making himself feared, if not recognized, by the Union speaker. The latter finally winked to him to go with him from the ground, and asked him if he could keep a secret.

Upon his answering affirmatively, the orator took the young man to his room at the hotel, again extorted his secrecy upon honor, and, first taking out a pistol to guard against surprise, as well as to frighten his visitor, acknowledged himself to be a Confederate spy in disguise, showed his uniform, and also a commission as a recruiting officer in the rebel service. His pressing business at the time of meeting his former pupil was to carry dispatches to Canada and England, which mission he has probably by this time safely succeeded in accomplishing. Why he was not denounced by the person he took into his confidence we are not informed.

The Invasion Excitement in Baltimore--Preparations for Defence.

The Baltimore American, of Monday, gives us some information about the preparations made there to meet a rebel attack. Our citizens will like to compare notes with Baltimore on this interesting subject:

Saturday and Sunday were two days of unprecedented excitement in and around Baltimore. Gen. Schenck has been using great energy to place the city in a state of defence, and has met with the hearty cooperation of our citizens, at least six thousand of whom have been furnished with arms, and are organized in companies, prepared to defend the city from the threatened invasion.

The work of erecting barricades progressed rapidly on Friday and Saturday, and yesterday morning the entire circle of the city was completed and ready for military occupation at any moment that scouts and pickets shall announce the approach of the enemy. Should an attempt be made to take the city the occupation of the houses in the vicinity of the line of barricades by riflemen is also the prospect of many who have longed for the arrival of these traitors in our midst.

The erection of the line of entrenchments and fortifications on all the approaches to the city have also progressed rapidly since Saturday morning, and yesterday attracted thousands of visitors. On Saturday morning about one thousand colored men were gathered by the police from different sections of the city, causing much excitement among that portion of our population as they were marched out to the different locations for the defensive works. At night another force was secured to relieve those who had been at work throughout the day, and another relief gang was provided yesterday morning and evening, so that rapid progress had been made and the works are now ready for immediate use.

The appeal of Gen. Schenck to the Loyal Leagues of Baltimore has been most heartily and patriotically responded to by our citizens. The arms furnished them have been found entirely inadequate to the demand, and in addition to the several thousands now in hands prepared to use them at the barricades, as many more will be furnished to-day. Each of the leagues have formed companies and chosen officers, and were yesterday ordered under arms, with three days' rations.

A cavalry raid may be made in this direction, for the destruction of bridges, but before any infantry or artillery force approaches Baltimore several battles must be fought between here and Frederick. A cavalry raid could not enter the city even with our present preparations to resist them, and we think will not be undertaken.

Hon. Henry Winter Davis has tendered his services to Gen. Schenck as volunteer aid, and has been charged with the enrollment of the volunteer companies.

Military Movements in Pennsylvania --Operations to Drive out the Rebels.

A letter to the Philadelphia Inquirer from Bedford, Pa., dated on the 19th, says:

Early this morning the citizen cavalry from Blair county went back, under the direction of Lieut. Col. Sinn, to picket a road lying north of McConnellsburg. To-night, as Milroy's forces lies between those two points, they have returned, and with them comes a very large force of infantry, under command of Col. McCartney. This point is strongly susceptible of defence. These forces are nearly all from Blair and Cambria.

At 10 p. m. this infantry is marching by, and the whole population of this quiet, retired village has turned out to receive them. Cheering is going on from the inhabitants and the troops are cheering back again. Handkerchiefs wave, fair women and ardent young girls shed tears of joy. The juveniles kindle bonfires upon the streets and the century-old town of Bedford feels as if there was new blood poured into her veins, and hot young sensations leaping through her heart and brain. Sensations in Chestnut street scarcely parallel it. They are all completely armed and know how to shoot. Rebel raids towards this point are rapidly becoming dangerous.

Four rebels, captured near McConnellsburg, were taken to Fort Londonderry, ten miles west of that town. No thing has transpired relative to who they are or what they know. The telegraphic communication between McConnellsburg and London, a telegraphic station east of it, and in the direction of Chambersburg, was cut last night.

Everything is quiet since the troops have entered. The volunteers are behaving very well; among them is a relieving element, composed of nine months' men and volunteers who have been discharged on account of ill health, but who nobly have re-volunteered for the occasion.

Gen. Milroy is expected to mass a force, which, from his present position, can attack any enemy in the flank which may attempt to move northward by Chambersburg. Bloody Run, where Milroy now lies, is less than fifty miles east of Chambersburg, and can be thrown upon it in three days' marching.

The Rebels at Mercersburg, Pa.

Professor Schaff writes in a letter to the N. Y. Evening Post the following account of their visit to Mercersburg:

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY,
MERCERSBURG, Pa., June 20, 1863.

Perhaps a summary of what I have seen with my own eyes of the rebel movements in this State will be interesting to your readers. Since Monday last, the rebel cavalry, about fifteen hundred strong, without artillery, as far as I can learn, invaded Franklin county and held Greencastle, Chambersburg and the surrounding country at their mercy, destroying public property, and stealing as many horses as they could. We expected them here every hour. On Thursday night a detachment of Jenkins' cavalry, consisting of two hundred men, and headed by Col. Ferguson, of Virginia, passed through this place to the neighboring mountains, where most of the horses were concealed. Yesterday afternoon they returned with one hundred and twenty captured horses and about two hundred head of cattle; all of the best quality, the whole estimated at from twenty to thirty thousand dollars, the result of a few hours' expedition. They also had a few contraband negroes mounted on horseback. They remained about two hours in town, without disturbing the citizens, who turned out in considerable numbers to witness the humiliating sight.

I had a long conversation with Col. Ferguson, an intelligent and courteous officer with an immense beard, about the fortunes of war, the right of secession and the right of revolution, the prospects of a reunion or a separation, &c. He spoke with great determination and decision, was full of fight, but showed no disposition to assert his military power against the free expression of opposite sentiments.

To me the whole spectacle was most humiliating. Two or three regiments hurled up from Harrisburg by railroad would have scared all the rebel cavalry out of Pennsylvania and prevented all this plunder and devastation. Unless we get armed assistance from a distance the enemy will continue his depredations, and subsist his army upon this rich valley.

The two hundred rebels looked like semi-savages—at least, many of them—in the most miscellaneous dress and equipments. They left here at 4 o'clock, p. m., and took the road to Hagerstown, where they have, it is said, a large force.

Gen. Sherman.

A letter from New Orleans tells us that Gen. Sherman has had his wounded leg amputated, and was in a fair way of recovery. We give the following details of the operation:

The wound was in the right leg, some distance below the knee joint. The shot, in passing through, fractured and splintered in a shocking manner both bones, and where it passed out lacerated the flesh to a great extent. When he was carried from his room and placed upon the amputating table, his face wore an anxious expression that spoke intense suffering; in a few seconds after being placed upon the table he was fully under the effects of chloroform, and in a minute after the leg was taken off above the knee. The arteries had been tied, and the stump was being washed, preparatory to dressing it, when he recovered his consciousness. At that time Dr. Foltz, who assisted Dr. Stone in performing the operation, was leaning over the General, fanning him. He recognized him at once, and asked, "Doctor, when are you going to commence?" The doctor replied, "General, the operation is over; your leg is off." "What!" said the General, "you don't say so;" I thought you were about to administer the chloroform." As soon as he was fully conscious of his situation his face brightened up, his eye sparkled, and, from his expression, I felt that he had changed for the better. The wound was soon dressed and he was carried to his room, feeling more comfortable than at any time since he was injured. He is gaining strength, his appetite is excellent, and his wound is healing finely. If he continues to improve in the same manner he will be able to move about on crutches in five or six weeks more.

SEMPLE CLAY. St. LOUIS, MO.

Having accepted the Agency for the sale of the SEMPLE CLAY, mined near St. Louis, Mo., I invite the attention of Glass and Steel Manufacturers to the Analysis given above as reported by Profs. A. A. Hays, of Boston, and J. C. Booth, of Philadelphia, which, together with the test of actual experience by manufacturers in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis, determine it to be the purest and most valuable Clay now known, whether Foreign or American. Fot made from it have stood in the Glass Furnace from 6½ to 9 months.
The Analysis is of the Clay as taken from the mine, without any washing or preparation whatever. It possesses great adhesiveness and plasticity qualities, which are not shown by the Analysis, and which admit of the admixture of a large proportion of shell or burned clay.
I am now prepared to fill orders for the above Clay, to be shipped from St. Louis or delivered here.

PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL'S OFFICE, Washington, May 22, 1863.
NOTICE.—The attention of all officers who have been honorably discharged on account of wounds or disability, and who desire to reenter the service in the Invalid Corps, is called to the provisions of General Orders, No. 105, of 1863, from the War Department, published in the papers throughout the country. Such officers are requested to comply promptly with the provisions of that order, and to send their written applications, as therein provided, for positions in the Invalid Corps, (stating the character of their disability,) with as little delay as possible, to the Acting Assistant Provost Marshal General of the State in which they may be. Such Acting Assistant Provost Marshal General will at once forward the applications, with his indorsement, to the Provost Marshal General of the State.
Officers for the Invalid Corps will be appointed immediately upon furnishing the papers required by General Order No. 105, of 1863, from War Department. Their pay and emoluments will commence from date of acceptance of such appointments, and not from date of organization of the respective commands to which they may be assigned.

DAVIS & McILWAINE, Auctioneers,
No. 54 FIFTH STREET.
The Real Estate, Stock and General Auction Business, established in 1843 by the late John D. Davis, will be continued at the old stand, No. 54 Fifth St., under the style of DAVIS & McILWAINE, JOS. G. DAVIS having this day associated with him ALEX. McILWAINE, well known as salesman in the house many years. Devoting themselves exclusive to a Commission Auction Business, in which they have had long experience, they confidently solicit consignments of every description of goods. Liberal advances made when desired.
Sales of Real Estate, Stocks, Bonds, &c., every Tuesday evening, in their second floor sales room.
Libraries and miscellaneous collections of Books carefully catalogued for public sale.

FORTIFY! FORTIFY!
A town fearing seige held a consultation,
Which was the best method of fortification.
A sturdy stone mason gave as his opinion,
That nothing but stone could save the Dominion.
A carpenter said, though the last was well spoke,
'Twas better by far to defend it with oak.
A currier, wiser than both these together,
Said, try what you please, there's nothing like leather.
While a "WESTERN RESERVE" MERCHANT replied,
"Tis clear as a sun-beam, there is nothing like—CHEESE!"
Which has been supplied by the ton, with several tons still in reserve, to be supplied at low rates by
