

OFFICIAL. LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES, Passed at the Third Session of the Thirty-seventh Congress.

AN ACT TO PREVENT AND PUNISH FRAUDS UPON THE REVENUE, TO PROVIDE FOR THE CERTAIN SAID COLLECTION OF CLAIMS IN FAVOR OF THE UNITED STATES, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES. [Public No. 65.]

Section 1. And be it further enacted, That the collection of duties on imports and tonnage, passed March second, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine, and any amendments thereto, shall be construed as if they were contained in the act to prevent and punish frauds upon the revenue, to provide for the certain said collection of claims in favor of the United States, and for other purposes.

Section 2. And be it further enacted, That any person who shall be guilty of any fraud in the collection of duties on imports and tonnage, passed March second, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine, and any amendments thereto, shall be liable to the same penalties as if he were guilty of any fraud in the collection of duties on imports and tonnage, passed March second, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine, and any amendments thereto.

More About the Late Cavalry Fight. Mr. Wood, of the New York Times, makes the following interesting remarks in his account of the late Cavalry fight.

General Milroy's Attack. During the morning of Sunday, and in fact before the battle, General Milroy's attack was a very successful one.

The Battle of Winchester—A More Detailed Account.

As the late unfortunate affair at Winchester has been the subject of much reproach to General Milroy, whose surrender of a fortified position to a force which proved to be impossible for him to have held out for several days at least, when relief might have come to him from General Hooker, has been denounced as little better than the surrender of Harper's Ferry by Col. Miles, we think our readers will like to see the following more detailed account of the whole affair, which we had to postpone till to-day, owing to the pressure of more recent events which claimed our attention and our columns for some days past. The account we give is a copy of the report of the N. Y. Herald.

The first attack drove in the pickets, and soon artillery positions were secured, but Milroy withdrew his artillery to a better position. It must be remembered that the Union men, with three batteries of heavy artillery, were on six days in the fort, and the enemy had not more than a few thousand rounds, and would soon be forced to withdraw.

At two o'clock on the morning of the 14th, the entire command which had been in the fort, and which was now in the hands of the enemy, was ordered to evacuate the fort, and to retreat towards the north. The command was ordered to evacuate the fort, and to retreat towards the north.
