SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 18.

A Day of Thanksgiving Appointed by the President

By the President of the United States of America

A PROCLAMATION.

It has pleased Almighty God to hearken to the supplications and prayers of an afflicted people, and to vouchsafe to the army and the navy of the United States, on the land and on the sea, so signal and so effective as to furnish reasonable grounds for augmented confidence that the Union of the States will be maintained, their Constitution preserved, and their peace and prosperity permanently preserved; but these victories have been accorded not without sacrifice of life, limb and liberty, incurred by brave, patriotic and loyal citizens. Domestic affliction in every part of the country follows in the train of these fearful bereavements. It is meet and right to recognise and confess the presence of the Almighty Father and the power of His hand equally in these triumphs and these sorrows.

Now, therefore, be it know that I do set apart Thursday, the sixth day of August next, to be observed as a day of National Thanksgiving, praise and prayer, and I invite the people of the United States to assemble on that occasion in their customary places of worship, and in the form approved by their own conscience, render the homage due to the Divine Majesty for the wonderful things He has done in the Nation's behalf, and invoke the influence of His Holy Spirit, to subdue the anger which has produced, and so long sustained a needless and cruel rebellion; to change the hearts of the insurgents; to guide the counsels of the Government with wisdom adequate to so great a National emergency, and to visit with tender care, and consolation throughout the length and breadth of our land, all those who, through the vicissitudes of marches, voyages, battles and sieges, have been brought to suffer in mind, body or estate, and finally to lead the whole nation through paths of repentance and submission to the Divine will, back to the perfect enjoyment of union and fraternal peace.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this 15th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, and of the Independence of the United States of America the eighty-eighth.

By the President, ABRAHAM LINCOLN.
WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

The Conscription

The act of Congress providing for the filling up of our Union armies by a draft is now being anxiously discussed, and its provisions subjected to the keenest investigation. All laws of a general character,—affecting masses of men, different in character, of various nationalities, and of every grade in the social scale,—will necessarily seem harsh in some cases, and unequally lenient in others. The Conscription Act is a general law, affecting every male adult in the United States, between the ages of 20 and 45. Those who are disposed to find fault with every act of government, however indispensable to the very existence of the government the act may be, here find ample scope, and a too willing audience.

We imagine that the class last named, together with those who are engaged in the "substitute" business, are the authors of most of the mis-statements which are now causing so much anxiety to many of our citizens, victims, perhaps, of the conscription. There is a large class of persons in this vicinity, of moderate means,—mechanics, small dealers, &c.,—who have been drafted for military duty, and who find no legal cause for exemption, under the act. The condition of their family or their affairs is such that it seems to them alike ruinous to both, should they undertake to render such military duty in person. They might, by an effort, and through a little assistance from their friends, raise the sum of $300, for which sum the government promises exemption from the operations of this draft. But the enemies of the government and the brokers in substitutes say: "If you do raise the sum of $300, and pay it over to the government, as your substitute, or penalty for your non-fulfillment of military duty, you may be drafted again next week or next month, and will then either have to go yourself, furnish a substitute, or pay another $300:—you had best engage a substitute now." But the interested person may not be able to find a substitute in time; or if found, the substitute may require too large a premium for his limited means.

Now we pretend to no more knowledge on this subject than is common to all. But we think that those of our citizens who have been drafted, and can, without great personal sacrifice to themselves and families, render that service which every citizen owes to the government, should promptly report themselves for duty. Those situated differently—and every citizen must judge for himself alone—should, if possible, procure an able-bodied substitute, who, for a pecuniary consideration, is willing to stand in his stead. And if it is not within his power to do either, as a last alternative, he should pay in to the Collector of Internal Revenue of his district, the sum of $300, for which he will get a receipt: this receipt, when exhibited to the Provost Marshal, will entitle the holder to a certificate of exemption, from this draft, "by reason of having paid to the government the sum of $300."

This three hundred dollar exemption clause, in our opinion, is the poor man's clause. We know that the copperhead press and leaders have tried to create a different impression. But what are the facts? Suppose Congress had inserted no provision for money exemption, and the only means of avoiding conscription had been the furnishing of a substitute; would not the price of substitutes have been about $1,000 or perhaps $1,500? And how many poor men would have been able to purchase at these figures? This is the case in the so-called Confederate States, where we see as much as $5,000 go begging for "an able bodied substitute." It was in order that the poor mechanic and small farmer should have the same chance with his more wealthy neighbor, that Congress inserted the three hundred dollar exemption clause—the POOR MAN'S CLAUSE. There are men, doubtless, drafted for military duty, who are too poor to pay this amount, and who would be subjected to peculiar hardship if compelled to serve. But such cases, happily, in an industrious and thrifty community like ours, are few indeed. Where such exist, let sympathizing friends and neighbors undertake to raise the sum as a loan, to be repaid in small weekly instalments without interest.

As to the probability of the same person being drafted over again, let us consider a little. The present draft is supposed to be for 800,000 men. To this is added 50 per centum for probable exemptions under the law. In these districts the draft is about one person in 3½ enrolled in the first class. This would show that there are now in the free States, persons enrolled subject to military duty between the ages of 20 and 35, about 1,676,000. The names of these persons, we may say, are all written upon slips of paper, and blindfolded men are drawing out 450,000 of them for military duty—of which number it is supposed 150,000 will claim exemption for cause. Now, after these Commissioners of the draft shall have completed their labors, and these 450,000 names are all drafted and enrolled, there will still remain in the wheels used by the Draft Commissioners 1,125,000 names of the first class which have not yet been drawn. It is scarcely a supposable case that those persons already drafted, who may have been exempted by the payment of $300, would be selected out and again put into the wheel with the 1,125,000 names not yet drafted. We do not consider such a construction of the law at all likely to be accepted as equity.

Are we likely to have another draft after this one? We think not. The Union armies now in the field, deducting liberally for all our losses, number not less than 700,000. The opposing rebel forces cannot number over 250,000. Since the first instant it is estimated that this force has been reduced—at Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Port Hudson, Tallahoma, Falling Waters, Little Rock, &c.—more than 80,000 men—nearly one-third their entire available force. The Mississippi, with all its tributary streams, and rich and productive valleys, is ours. BRAGG's army is driven into and through the mountains, while the victorious ROSECRANS and his veteran army are bringing the patiently-waited-for freedom to the loyal and patriotic East Tennesseans. SHERMAN has met and defeated the army of the Mississippi, under JOHNSTON. GRANT and ROSECRANS may now make short work of Mobile, Atlanta, Montgomery and Charleston, while ANDY JOHNSTON, Gens. BURNSIDE, HERRON and BANKS, reconstruct governments for Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana. MEADE defeated LEE's hitherto victorious legions in Pennsylvania, and the latter are driven back across the Potomac to meditate upon Vicksburg and Port Hudson and Gettysburg. With a united and patriotic acquiescence in the necessity and propriety of the conscription act, the government places an immense army of 300,000 fresh men in the field. Before this powerful army has ever fired a gun, a great moral victory has been achieved. The rebel States, already depleted by an unsparing and vigorous conscription, have nothing left but unconditional submission to the government, supported as that government is by such mighty armies, and such boundless resources.

We see nothing between us and peace, save the spirit manifested by the mobocratic ruffians and cut-throats in New York and elsewhere. The last remaining hope of JEFF. DAVIS and his tottering tyranny will fall when our government shall have completed the present draft for 300,000. Let us, therefore, arise to the responsibilities of the hour, and accept the bright omens of returning peace, inaugurated by victory.

Traitors at the North.

The investigation of a case of considerable interest has recently been going on in Philadelphia. From the testimony given it appears that certain parties in New York engaged in fitting out two vessels, one to carry contraband goods and a rebel mail to Virginia, and the other destined to cruise as a rebel privateer and prey on the commerce of the country. The ingenuity of the detective police enabled them to discover this plot in season, and to seize the vessels when nearly ready to proceed to sea, with the evidences of their guilty errand in their holds and on their decks. The names of the persons charged with conspiracy, or rather high treason, in this case are JOHN O'NEAL, JOHN BENEDICT and JOHN MOORE, alias JACOB HYLAND. But the rebel mail which was captured contains letters that implicate many others,—among whom we note the name of the F. F. V. ANDREWS, one of the leaders of the New York rioters, who was arrested in a house of ill-fame, in company with a colored woman, as our dispatches yesterday stated, after having headed a negro phobic mob in such a true Southern, chivalrous, plantation style as is described in the following paragraph by a reporter in a New York paper:

The mysterious "Mr. Andrews of Virginia," who addressed the howling mob up town on Monday, telling them that they must organize and "crush this damned Abolition draft into the dust," and offering to lead them himself, has been accepted, it seems, and throughout these three days of riot has hounded on his pack of savages to their deeds of violence. An apostle of carnage, he has marched at their head and incited them to do deeds at which the manhood of a free people should revolt. Where poor unoffending negroes were beaten dead, then hung, and their mangled corpses trodden in the mire by the feet of brutal men and women, where private houses of peaceable citizens have been sacked and burned, where widows and orphans have been turned almost naked into the street, where barricades have arisen; and every infamous outrage has been perpetrated, this self-elected Virginia "gentleman" has been foremost in the fray. Mounted on a horse, no doubt stolen from a private stable, clad in a red shirt and brandishing a sabre, he has been a chosen leader of the pack of robbers and murderers.

But it appears that we have even more detestable traitors at the north than any refugee Virginian ever could be. It came out in the evidence offered in this case in Philadelphia, that some one said to be well known in that city had in one of the letters found in the rebel mail aforesaid, sympathetically confessed to a "friend in the South" that "the cry in the streets that Vicksburg has fallen, is killing me by inches."

Many asked, no doubt, who can he be? when the first part of the report appeared in the Philadelphia papers; but this is no longer a secret. The proceedings of Wednesday contain the following, showing that the sympathetic traitor was Dr. DICKSON, Professor in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia.

In reply to a question of Mr. VANDYKE, counsel for the defense, Mr. COFFEY, representing the government, said:

I have treasonable letters here, found in the possession of O'Neal, and can show you some if you desire.

Mr. Vandyke—With your permission I would like to see some.

The District Attorney here very leisurely selected a few from the package and handed them to Mr. Vandyke.

Mr. Vandyke, having carefully read them over, said: Well, sir, we are ready to go to trial, because we can't go into the defence now.

Mr. Coffey—Well, sir, the letters, or some of them, had better be read, and then we can have a better understanding of the affair. We can have more light on the subject.

Mr. Vandyke (sympathetically)—Oh, these letters are letters from school girls in the State of Maine to their lovers, their relations and their friends; now, is it right to publish to the world such epistles? Let us save the feelings, I am frank to say, of indiscreet girls.

Mr. Coffey—I am not going to read the letters from indiscreet girls; I propose to read letters from traitorous men.

Mr. Vandyke (with a little warmth)—Show me one from a traitorous man.

Mr. Coffey (pleasantly, with a smile)—Certainly, sir; here is one, written by Dr. Dickson, Professor in the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia; he is the man who says that the cry that Vicksburg has fallen is killing him by inches. Read this letter carefully—observe the information it conveys to the rebel authorities.

Mr. Vandyke said it is not proved.

Mr. Coffey—I have the witness ready to prove it. Just read it.

Mr. Vandyke now read the missive in silence. When he finished he handed it back to Mr. Coffey, and said: "I must confess, sir, my surprise, that the District Attorney has possession of a letter of this kind, and has not arrested its author. It is strange, to say the least, that the Professor has not been arrested."

At this stage of the proceedings Mr. Vandyke had a private interview with his clients for a few minutes, after which he turned towards the Commissioner and said:

"I waive all hearing and ask that the parties be admitted to bail."

Mr. Coffey—I have made the charge of high treason and am ready to go on with the evidence; therefore I oppose the suggestion that bail be taken.

Mr. Commissioner—I cannot take bail on the charge of treason. I shall take a little time to weigh the matter over in my mind and to look at the authorities.

Lee's Escape.

A letter from Mr. CROUSSE to the New York Times says:

The people of Williamsport assert that the rebels were in a great state of trepidation on Monday, for fear that their movement would be discovered, and their divided army attacked and thoroughly beaten, as it could have been.

It is instructive to remark that Lee's order, announcing to his army that they came "about to meet their old enemy again," was concocted for our special benefit. He printed it in Hagerstown on Saturday, and on Sunday morning half a dozen copies of it had found their way into our lines. I am sorry to say that some of our General officers were hoodwinked by the trick.

Thus ends the invasion and the campaign north of the Potomac. Though both armies may yet make some further movements, there seems to be a strong impression that there will be no more fighting for thirty or forty days.

Another correspondent of the same paper makes the following remarks:

It is true the enemy had a formidable position, but when we consider that we had nearly two men to his one, even supposing he had ready for action his usual amount of artillery, no one can doubt that the result would have been in our favor. Why any one General should have consented to postpone the attack for a single hour, and recommend the digging of trenches, under the circumstances, seems strange.

Possibly an order may have emanated from Washington delaying the movement until reinforcements should have arrived. It has been stated in official circles that such was the case. To-day the road from Frederick was covered with troops going to the front, but if Meade had waited for all of them to reach the line, the attack would not have been made for three days at least.

The feeling among the troops at thus losing what they considered a sure prize, may be easily imagined. Many of them do not hesitate to openly denounce the tardy method of warfare that has been pursued for the past ten days.

—The testimony of several intelligent persons returned from the army fully corrobates the last statement, that the army has been disappointed, and feels bitterly over the result of the "tardy method" of pursuing the flying enemy and improving the Gettysburg victory, which Gen. MEADE saw fit to adopt. The statement that any order, or interference from Washington, restrained Gen. MEADE is strenuously denied by parties there that ought to be well informed.

THE capture of Chattanooga by General Rosecrans is a matter which has attracted very little attention, yet it is almost as important an announcement as the surrender of Vicksburg. The latter gave us the Mississippi, but Chattanooga is the key to the whole internal railway system of the South. East Tennessee now becomes ours as a matter of course, and the mountain region which split the South like a wedge passes naturally into our control. Chattanooga, in its way, means as much as Vicksburg.

AMONG the persons drafted in Boston are Rev. M. D. Conway, editor of the Commonwealth, and Wendell P. Garrison, son of William Lloyd Garrison. Several Quakers were drawn in the Nantucket quota.

SEMPLE, St. LOUIS, MO. CLAY.

Having accepted the Agency for the sale of the SEMPLE CLAY, mined near St. Louis, Mo., I invite the attention of Glass and Steel Manufacturers to the Analysis given above, as reported by Profs. A. A. Hays, of Boston, and J. G. Rood, of Philadelphia, which, together with the test of actual experience by manufacturers in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis, determines it to be the purest and most valuable Clay now known, whether Fuvel gas or American. Pots made from it have stood in the Glass Furnace from six to 9 months.

The Analysis is of the Clay as taken from the mine, without any washing or preparation whatever. It possesses great adhesiveness and plastic qualities, which are not shown by the Analysis, and which admit of the admixture of a large proportion of shall or burned clay.

I am now prepared to fill orders for the above Clay, to be shipped from St. Louis or delivered here.

Commencing THURSDAY, July 16th, and ending December 17th, 1863.

JAMES H. PRENTICE

Will sell by Auction, at his Warehouse, corner Raymond and Willoughby streets, Brooklyn, L. I., on every Thursday during the season, the entire product of his manufactory, commencing on THURSDAY, July 16th, 1863, at 11 o'clock, when he will offer a full line of

FUR AND WOOL HATS,

Of every description, in lots to suit purchasers. In calling the attention of the trade to the above announcement, the undersigned begs to state that in the sales for this season the same principles that have characterized those of the past will be strictly observed. They will not only embrace his entire production, but those of other manufacturers of well-known reputation, thus securing to each sale a varied and complete assortment of styles adapted to the season.

Orders will be received from those not able to attend, and will be filled satisfactorily.

The Hats will be prepared for inspection by Catalogue on the morning of the sale.

The entire offerings will be sold without reserve.

☞ Consignments of Hats, Hatters' Trimmings, and Straw Goods, are solicited, and will be sold on favorable terms.
