THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 23.

Interesting from Charleston--The Morris Island Fight.

The Chicago Tribune has the following graphic sketch of the recent attack on the Charleston forts by the iron-clad fleet under Admiral Dahlgren, copied from a private letter:

U. S. STEAMER CATSKILL, }
Off Charleston Harbor, July 11, 1863. }

On the 8th we came to Charleston and laid outside the bar all the 9th, but on the morning of the 10th, about 3:30, we were roused, and commenced preparing ship for action, and at 4:20 hove up anchor, after the Admiral had come on board, and steamed with the Weehawken, Nahant and Montauk from Morris Island, close to Folly. Our troops were on the latter. We commenced at the beginning of Morris Island and went all along the coast, driving the rebels before us, our troops following as fast as we cleared the way for them. During the day we fired 138 shot. The other vessels fired nearly as many.

We were flag ship on this occasion. Our flag staff was shot off about three feet from the top. The piece fell, but the flag still stuck on the end of the broken staff. When we hauled off, about 5:30 p. m., our troops had nearly the whole of Morris Island. I don't think we would have hauled off so soon as we did, only we were nearly out of shot and shell. We had about twenty rounds left. We silenced Fort Wagner, all but one gun. Once, during the night, our troops had possession of this fort, but Sumter opened on them, requiring them to retreat a short distance. During all this time, Sumter was peppering us. We did not heed her, but kept on shelling the rebel batteries.

This morning we were turned about 3:50, supposing that our troops were being shelled rather hard, for they had a skirmish, but we soon caused them to beat a retreat. Soon after, a vessel came along-side with powder, shot and shell. We took in about 50 shells. Yesterday we hauled off at noon a short time, for lunch, and then we spliced the main-brace.

This morning breakfast at 6:00; at 9:20 beat to quarters, steaming for Cumming's Point; at 10:05 fired our first shot; kept on firing all the morning till 12:15, when we hauled off just beyond range for dinner; at 1 spliced main-brace, and it was needed, for the berth deck, when we are in action, is awful hot and full of powder smoke. The fellows in the turret have the most and hardest work, yet have plenty of fresh air.

This morning we sent to one of the wooden vessels near, some of the men that were fired out, most of them firemen, and a boy that belongs in the turret. A piece of shell came in the port, striking him on the foot, cutting him some. Yesterday noon we sent away Mr. Simmons, our master, he having fainted, or it was the concussion of a shot striking against the turret, while he was leaning against the side of it.

This noon, about 2 p. m., we were all mustered on deck. The Captain wished to know if any of us thought we were not able to go in again, but they all seemed willing to try it once more. We have an Admiral this time that knows his business, and is not afraid of sinking the vessels. Our decks and sides, as well as turret and pilot-house, are cut up one foot nearly went through the galley, lading down day light, and water by the bucketfuls, and another over the engine room, the same way. We were struck yesterday forty-nine times, most of them pretty bad, and to-day some fifteen or twenty times more. Our smoke-stack also is badly torn, several shots having gone through it.

There was one solid shot lodged on our deck yesterday. The Captain has possession of it. Thousands of pieces are lying around. I can't tell whether we are going in this afternoon or not. The Admiral has gone ashore to see the General, and find out how he stands it. Sumter is still playing ball with them. All the batteries on Morris Island are taken but Fort Wagner. That, too, will soon be turned on Sumter, then good-bye for Charleston.

Morgan's Raid.

The Cincinnati Gazette of Tuesday says:

The National troops, with the assistance of the sturdy yeomanry of Southeastern Ohio, have finished the Morgan raiders. The great horse-thief; the man who has never shown a disposition to fight, other than small garrisons or unarmed citizens; the head of a gang of plunderers, has met an inglorious end. The intelligence in our columns this morning, by mail and telegraph, tells the story. All but fifteen hundred of the raiders, with their artillery, small arms, equipments, &c., have been captured.

Basil Duke is reported to be among the prisoners. We also hear that John Morgan is in our hands. But the latter statement is to be doubted; for Morgan is not the man to be captured if he could run away. He will not hesitate to desert his man and sacrifice everything to save his own body, and hence we expect to hear of him as disguised and a refugee in the woods, whence he may possibly escape, ultimately. The fifteen hundred raiders who escaped by flight on Sunday, can hardly get away. They were in a bad condition—worn out, without ammunition, broken down in spirits, and used up generally. They will fall an easy prey to the first two hundred Union soldiers they may run against.

Morgan has had a long run, but a disastrous one. It was an evil day for him when he crossed the Cumberland; and doubly so when he entered Indiana. With four thousand men and horses, and five pieces of artillery, he crossed the Ohio; all of which he has sacrificed, without accomplishing anything valuable or honorable in the line of regular warfare. But he has afforded our soldiers and people another opportunity to inflict a blow upon the rebels, and if they did not strike speedily they have finally accomplished the destruction of the raiders.

This will teach the rebels a new lesson on the subject of invasion, and we shall not soon again hear of the presence of armed rebels north of the Ohio. We suppose there were not less than one hundred thousand men in addition to the regular soldiery under arms in Ohio and Indiana, during the raid. This exhibition of our reserved resources will prove valuable.

Andrews, the F. F. V. Mob Leader.

A letter from Norfolk to the N. Y. Tribune says:

John U. Andrews is, as stated, a Virginian, being born near Smithfield, in that State. Some time ago he removed to Portsmouth, and practised law. Finding that he was unsuccessful, owing to unpopularity and lack of ability, he joined the Know Nothing party at the time of its agitation, and removed to this city as one of the leading members, and was remarkable for being always on hand to address meetings in the event of a failure to find another. As in Portsmouth, his career being brief, a short time afterward he left this city in company with a Miss ——, from Portsmouth, and a gentleman, who was "a victim of misplaced confidence," he having placed his treasure in his (Andrews') hands, and been swindled out of it. Since then he has not been heard of, nor yet thought of even by those with whom he associated.

It is due to the citizens of Norfolk that it should be known that he is not a citizen of that place, nor an associate with any of his profession.

He is a rabid Secessionist.

A DISPATCH from Boston says: The Hon. Wm. Whiting, Solicitor of the War Department, will leave in Wednesday's steamer as the accredited agent of the United States to the Courts of Europe, and as the commissioned legal adviser of our Ministers in England and France in reference to matters of great importance. A fleet of powerful iron-steamers is now being fitted out at Buttenwood in Great Britain, supposed to be intended for the Rebel navy, and his visit probably has direct reference to that fact.
