The Rebel Pirates—British Commerce.
We hear, every few days, of some new exploit of the rebel(British) pirates, in the capture of the trading vessels of the United States. Our merchants fall in with these depredations as a necessary consequence of the great injury of our commerce, which is taking foreign flags, to escape these ever recurring casualties. And yet, strange to say, although ship after ship has been sent out to search the sea, in search of these daring buccaniers, we do not find that they ever get a glimpse of them. They seem to give them as wide a berth, as if it were their studied purpose to avoid exactly "how best to do it." But how is it that they manage to keep of the way of these bold robbers, in a mystery to us?

From Missouri—Effects of the Law.
A letter from St. Louis to the N. Y. Central says:
The rebel sympathizers in Western Missouri have reason to regret that Quantrill, whom they fed and concealed, ever thought of invading Kansas. They are now trying to do so, to rouse the old border from its lethargy. The story of the old feud between the two States, in which the lancet of rebellion was used for the guilty—but such is the story of war, it is as old as the hills. The rebels are now trying to do so, to rouse the old border from its lethargy.

BEAUREGARD ON SOLICITARY CONDUCT.
The Major Beauregard, in his letter to Gen. Grant, recommending against his unprovoked and unwarlike march, marks upon what he calls "the turning of his guns against the old man, the women and children, and the hospitals of a sleeping city," as an act of "incalculable barbarity," and declares that it "will give him a bad omen in history—every history of this war."—and that such a mode of warfare "is atrocious and unworthy of any soldier."

THE ANGLO-REXEL FLEET.—Private letters from England state that the work on the two rebel iron-clad vessels is completed, and that those who are cognizant of the affairs of those who are making preparations to take charge of them, state that they are confident of getting out of English ports without much trouble, notwithstanding the blockade.

AS AN EXERCISE DAY'S WORK.—The Land Department of the United States Railroad Company are selling daily large quantities of their lands. Yesterday they sold to parties belonging to settle upon and improve them, five 40-acre, one 50-acre and two 100-acre tracts in the county of Morgan, Md. The five 40-acre tracts were sold for ten dollars, one for sixteen dollars, and one for eight dollars an acre. The 50-acre tract was sold for fifteen dollars, and the 100-acre tract for twenty dollars.

A REBEL THREAT.—John Taylor's son, Robert, has been arrested by the authorities for attempting to demonstrate in the streets of New York. He was charged with the purpose of the rebellion, and was found guilty of the same.

THE REBEL SYMPATHIZERS IN WESTERN MISSOURI.—The rebels are now trying to do so, to rouse the old border from its lethargy. The story of the old feud between the two States, in which the lancet of rebellion was used for the guilty—but such is the story of war, it is as old as the hills.
