MONDAY MORNING.....OCT. 19, 1863.

Peace Remedies—In Chancery.

We have remarked, upon a former occasion, that after disfranchising the soldiers, the next step in the Judicial programme of the Copperheads, to be carried out by their pettifogging judges, was to drain away the life of the army, by means of the habeas corpus, and to prevent the Government from recruiting its thinned ranks, by an injunction—the Chief Justice applying the lancet here, while WOODWARD, with the whole Sanhedrim at his back, was to lend a hand in the bigger operation of cutting off the supplies in Philadelphia.

Our readers are aware that the Chief Justice, who had entered upon his task with as much relish as if he had just sat down to a plate of Philadelphia terrapin, has recently delivered himself, after a painful gestation of three weeks, of several heavy columns of twaddle, asserting his jurisdiction over the Federal officers—and was preparing to finish up his separate share of the job, when he suddenly found his locks shorn, and the minatory ferule wrested irreverently from his pedagogic hands, by the Proclamation of the President, commanding him to suspend, forthwith, his pious labors in that direction. How he looked—this little Jupiter of the State—when the descending bolt smote and withered his sacrilegious arm, as he reached it forth to the ark of our liberties, is not yet written in the chronicles of the times. Report said that he adjourned his work until after the election, and incontinently sought refuge in his Olympian solitudes beyond the Allegheny, which, "like Ida, look o'er Troy," to drown his sorrows in a chapter of Zimmerman or Boethius.

"Scotched but not killed," however, he turns up once more in the grand conclave of dignitaries assembled by his order in Philadelphia, to hear and decide upon the novel and ingenious question of heading off the national authorities, and ending the war by the pacific remedy of an injunction! How else was it to be stopped? The "trial by battle" had gone out about the time the lawyers came in, and was withal too strong a remedy for the nerves of a Copperhead Judge. It was clear that the "ha'porth of copperas" had failed in efficacy, and was but "a dead cock in the pit." But was there nothing else in the armory of the pleader? Yes! if the law had failed, why not bring "old Abe" into Chancery? Once there, there would be no escape for him. In the language of the ring, it is as dead a case with the man whose head is in chancery, as it is generally supposed to be, with the man whose estate has found its way into the same unhappy limbo of vanities. Brilliant and happy idea! "Put him in chancery," became the general cry of the Copperheads, and forthwith a pursuivant, armed with the dread summons of the redoubtable Chief Justice, and his associates, challenges "old Abe" to come forward, and do battle at Judge LOWRIE'S bar.

Well, the august synod meets in awful state, at No. 5 in the old building on Chestnut street—the Chief Justice in reverend sable, with the whitest of all possible neckchokers, and looking, for all the world, as if wisdom would die with him. The place is not a very sumptuous one, or we might have borrowed, for illustration, an earlier assemblage in Pandemonium—where

> High on a throne of royal state, which far
> Outshone the wealth of Ormus or of Ind,
> Or where the gorgeous East with richest hand
> Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold,
> Satan exalted sat.

But no matter for the poetry. The lists are duly set out. The herald sounds the trumpet, and four doughty Knights, endued in copper helmets, with green bags, full of devices which knight-errantry never knew, and attended by a score of trusty squires, trot out into the arena with visors up—waving their pennons—and ready to prove their valor upon the body of Old Abe. Expectation is on tiptoe, but old Abe does not come. A messenger is dispatched forthwith to notify his apparitors that all is ready, and Lowrie and Woodward waiting. The messenger returns with information Old Abe "can't come," that the apparitors are out of town, and that they may wait and—be hanged. The dignitaries are non-plussed. It will not do, however, to take a judgment by default. That would mar the ceremonies, and as the spectators must at least be gratified, it is "ordered and decreed" that two of the knights in attendance shall run a tilt for the amusement and edification of the expectant copperheads. They set their lances in rest, accordingly, and spur their coursers over the arena, smiting the air with lusty, murderous thrusts, the live-long day. Pit and galleries come down with thunders of applause. In pandemonium they ended in hisses. The wearied champions retire to refresh themselves, after the savage tourney. The Chief Justice, in solemn voice, pronounces the amusements at an an end, and promises to adjudge the rewards of chivalry, and distribute the honors, after consulting with his brethren and taking time to advise—until after the election. The curtain falls, and the masters of the sports skulk home, to bury their chagrin in oysters and champagne—usual and potent aids to judicial reflection. And now the election is over, and LOWRIE is hors du combat, and WOODWARD himself unhorsed, with his plumes drooping, and his banner, dragging in the mire. OLD ABE, with his trusty Pennsylvania yeomen—not "men in buckram," or with green bags either—but in honest "Lincoln green"—has stolen a march on them, taken them in flank, and tumbled them into the gutter. When will they decide? Has LOWRIE no Parthian arrows that he can send back over his shoulders, as he hears the shouts of the people on his retreating heels? Has WOODWARD no manhood, that he should think, in his sorry plight, of gathering himself up, and climbing into the saddle again? Why not follow his chief into retirement upon such an invitation as this? When—we ask again—when will he resign?

IN HIS message, the new Governor of Vermont (Hon. J. G. Smith) says that the State, in all its industrial interests, is in a healthy and prosperous condition. The amount of funded and current liabilities is stated to be $1,584,201, being an excess of liabilities over resources of $276,672. The expenses of the ensuing year are approximately estimated at $1,336,663. Vermont has sent into the service of the United States sixteen regiments of infantry, one of cavalry, three companies of sharpshooters, and two batteries of light artillery, in all 19,224 men. Of these, there remain in the service 7,824 men, of whom 5,150 are on duty, six regiments having returned at the expiration of their term, and there having been heavy losses by the casualties of war.

The Military Situation in the West from a Rebel Standpoint.

The following remarkable and highly significant article appears in the Atlanta (late Chattanooga) Rebel, of the 9th instant. It will be seen that it takes a gloomy view of the situation, and admits that General ROSECRANS obtained and holds the prize for which he crossed the Tennessee,—and not only so, but it very plainly intimates that he will continue to hold it, and that as a result, even if ROSECRANS should not strike a blow, BRAGG will be compelled to fall back from his present position. The whole article is well worthy of a careful reading, and not the least significant portion of it, surely, is that which speaks of the election of a "Peace Democrat" to the Presidency, as a result which would follow the defeat of ROSECRANS, and which would also insure the establishment of the Southern Confederacy. The Rebel, it will be recollected was the paper that first nominated VALLANDIGHAM for Governor of Ohio, and pronounced him "a man of our (their) own sort."

[From the Atlanta Rebel, October 9th.]

Upon reaching the Tennessee river from the field of Chickamauga, Rosecrans addressed his troops. "Fellow soldiers," said he, "the object of our expedition was the possession of Chattanooga, and here we are." Brief, and to the point; forcible and adroit. Thus far the campaign, whose mysterious surges are rolling above us, has no clearer, as it certainly cannot have a more laconic history. The few words of the Federal General illuminate the whole page as a ray from a dark lantern, and no man can close his eyes to the somewhat painful glare which they throw full upon him.

Not even General Bragg himself can contradict them, except with his sword, and such strokes as it may please heaven to send us through his hands in the few days of fair weather just before us. Unless we hasten to make hay when the sun shines, the story as thus told, will hold good through all time; the spring will open untoward dangers to our arms; the cane which now turns upon the pivot of its orisis, will drop like a flower which has been untended; and the end must fade out of sight in a rolling torrent of disasters—in fogs and gloom. God forbid it!

At present the case stands about in this wise: We have lost the gate to lower East Tennessee, the river, which was our base, and the facilities which these afforded for progressive movements into East Tennessee and Kentucky. We have gained a hand-to-hand fight; we have repelled a powerful invasion; we have preserved Georgia, and secured a commanding position against the enemy. Rosecrans, on the other hand, has acquired all that we have lost. He has reached Chattanooga and fortified it, taken up the river line as his base, and now prepares quietly to winter in his new quarters, leaving us uncivilly out in the cold to take care of ourselves as best we can or must. Physically, and to all appearances, in the aggregate he is the gainer, for, after the prisoners, standards and artillery taken at Chickamauga are counted, our victory is told whilst our deficit, in the long sum total, glory included, does not make up for any results yet achieved.

In a word, we have lost ten or twelve thousand men without gaining an equivalent in producing territory. The whole question, therefore, turns upon the situation, and what we will do with it. In military circles, it is generally believed that Rosecrans has blundered into a position which, improved by an adversary of genius, might be turned in three adroit movements to his eternal ruin. If this be so and the movements speculated, but by no means explained, are made, the victory of Chickamauga will be complete and the many lives there sacrificed will become as so many trophies to a noble work. But if this opinion be false, and the movements suggested as possible fail to be made, and we continue to gaze listlessly from the bold knobs of Missionary Ridge upon comfortable barracks of the blue varlets below, then may we tremble for the next campaign; for as sure as there is any surety in the future, the Spring of '64 must see us far from the borders of Georgia, or near to the verge to destruction. Nail it to your door post, men of the South, and refuse to be deluded into any other belief! Food and raiment are our needs. We must have them. Kentucky and Middle Tennessee can only supply them. Better give up the sea coast, better give up the Southwest, aye, better to give up Richmond without a struggle, and win these, than lose the golden field, whose grain and wool are our sole hope. The enemy has just one army too many in the field for us. We must crush this overplus; we must gain one signal, Stonewall Jackson campaign. Destiny points the very place. Be Rosecrans the victim. Defeat him, pulverize him, run him to the Ohio river, and then close the war with the next summer. And how? Nothing easier. The bee which has really stung our flank so long, once disposed of, our triumphs and legions have a clear road before them. Fed sumptuously through the winter, well shod and clad, they have only to meet a dispirited foe, retake the valley of the Mississippi, secure the election of a Peace Democrat to the Presidency in the fall, and arrange the terms of treaty and independence.

These results can be accomplished nowhere else than in this Department. The Northwest is our real adversary.

No matter how often we whip the East, the effect is still born in the end. Let us quench the true contestants a lesson of peace and soberness, and the difference will be seen as speedily as our need calls for the deed!

FROM NEW ORLEANS—THE TEXAS EXPEDITION.—We have several days later news from New Orleans by the steamer Columbia. The only news of importance is from the Overland Texas Expedition. The forward march had been resumed, with continual skirmishing between our advance cavalry and that of the enemy. A general engagement was expected soon. Gen. Banks left New Orleans on the 8th to join the expedition.

The 19th army corps reached Vermilion river, a few miles south of Vermilionville, on the 9th. It was thought at New Orleans that there would be no delay in crossing. There was sharp skirmishing and seven prisoners were taken from the enemy. Their loss is not known. Lieut. Col. Cowan, of the 2d Texas cavalry, was wounded.

EX-GOVERNOR PACKER, A COPPERHEAD.—We learn from a friend that when Ex-Gov. Packer visited the polls at Williamsport, to vote, he boastfully held up his ticket, exclaiming: "Here is a ticket which is copper all over!" Immediately behind Packer came a jolly Hibernian, also in the act of voting, who cried out in a lusty voice, "Be jabers here is a ballot to kill your snake!" We do not envy William F. Packer the feeling while we despise the motive which prompted him to his vote and his exclamation. The honest Irishman is the better man and the purer patriot of the two citizens.

THE English steamer Spaulding was captured by the U. S. supply steamer Union while endeavoring to run the blockade off Wilmington, on the 11th inst. She has aboard a valuable assorted cargo. This is the second time this steamer has been captured—the first time being last April, while attempting to run into Bull's Bay, S. C. She was taken to Boston and sold to parties belonging to St. John, N. B.

THE effort of the President to colonize 500 persons of color on the southwest coast of Hayti has proved a failure. Though unusual precaution was taken to contract with responsible parties to convey these people to their destination, many of them died of disease, while others fled to more desirable localities. An inquiry in the facts of the case will be instituted.

JOHN M. BOTTS, who was paroled by the rebels and permitted to live at his residence near Culpepper, has been carried to Richmond to be imprisoned, no doubt as a hostage for several of his secession neighbors who have been taken to Washington.

THERE was one place in Ohio where Vallandigham received an almost unanimous vote. The rebel prisoners at Camp Chase took a vote for Governor and the result was, Vallandigham 1,081, Brough 2.

THE Fifty-Sixth North Carolina Regiment was recently sent home to put down Union demonstrations, but the men obstinately refused to fight against their neighbors, and were sent to Charleston.

ELECTION RETURNS.
How the Ladies have Voted.

We are enabled, through our "special," to give the public, even at this early date, the result of the Ladies' vote on a very important question, a result, too, while showing the soundness of their judgment, speaks louder than words for the popularity of the WHEELER & WILSON SEWING MACHINE.
The three leading Sewing Machine Companies in the country are the "Wheeler & Wilson," "Singer & Co.," and "Grover & Baker," and their sales for the quarter ending June 10, which we subjoin, show how the ladies voted:

Wheeler & Wilson	7,137
Singer & Co	4,214
Grover & Baker	3,073

Showing that the Wheeler & Wilson Company sold, during the quarter named, nearly double the amount made by either of the others.
Over 121,000 of these Machines have been sold, and the demand for them is greater than ever. This should be regarded as a test by those who desire to buy the BEST FAMILY SEWING MACHINE.

GOTTSCHALK TO MASON & HAMLIN.—"I congratulate you on the introduction of a new musical instrument, long wanted, and sure to find its way into every household of taste and refinement which can possibly afford its moderate expense. Your CABINET ORGAN is truly a charming instrument, worthy of the high praise it has received, and far superior to everything of its class I have seen. I take pleasure in commending it most heartily as everywhere worthy a place beside the Piano, to which it is a fine complement, from its capacity for rendering much delightful music, sacred and secular, classic and popular, all which the Piano is not adapted. GOTTSCHALK."
A splendid lot of
Mason & Hamlin's Cabinet Organs
Just received by the subscriber.
