

The Two Servile Classes in the South. When this war began many people expected that there would be more or less of servile insurrections in the rebel States...

But there is more than that, sir; rising up higher than fear, endeavoring to stand upon some ground where men may be both Christians and philosophers...

I shall plead for Union, for confederacy. (Cheers.) For the sake of civilization, for the sake of the glories of the Christian Church...

It therefore comes to pass that the North and South are now in a state of civil war, divided circles and circles, with all those aspects and phenomena which belong to healthy national progress and change...

Up to the time of the Trent affair it is said that England was with the North, but after that event she was the other way...

But there is another class of people in the slave States, only a little oppressed, and perhaps more degraded than the negroes...

There are a number of slaves in the slave States, only a little oppressed, and perhaps more degraded than the negroes...

Remembrance of the voice that represented the great substantial heart of England. (Hear, hear, and applause.)

NATIONS ENDORSEMENT CHANGES.

laughter. It is an offence to have sought to catch you by your noble sentiments and noble facilities, than I am guilty. (Hear, hear, and cheers.)

I have sought to come on that side on which you were most good-natured, and I think it such of common sense would have attempted the same thing. I have scribbled nothing, however, for the sake of your favor—(cheers)—and you have permitted me to have any influence with you, it was because I stood opposite a man of strong convictions, but with generous impulses as well, it was because you believed that I was honest in my belief, and because I was kind in my feeling towards you—(cheers)—and now, when I go back home, I shall be just as faithful with our young folks as I have been with the old folks—(cheers)—hear, hear, and cheers; I shall tell them something of what I have said to their ancestors on this side.

As a PROGRESSIVE REFORMER. I shall plead for Union, for confederacy. (Cheers.) For the sake of civilization, for the sake of the glories of the Christian Church...
