WEDNESDAY MORNING—FEB. 17, 1864.

THE GAZETTE THIS MORNING

We think we are amply justified in calling the attention of our readers to the quantity and quality of reading matter in the morning edition of our paper. For many months we have given every morning a greater amount of reading matter than was ever before presented to this community by a Pittsburgh daily newspaper. Frequently of late the Gazette has gone to its morning readers with fifteen columns of telegraphic, selected, and original news and miscellany—much of it specially transmitted to us from Washington and elsewhere at a very heavy cost. This morning the Gazette, we think, will bear comparison with most of its leading cotemporaries, east and west, in the freshness and variety of its general news, while its local and commercial departments show that the immediate interests and the local intelligence of Pittsburgh and its vicinity are faithfully cared for and fully reported.

A RIVAL OF VANDENHOFF.

The Washington National Intelligencer indorses the suggestion that General McCLELLAN'S Report should be read in public meetings throughout the country. Its editors "do not doubt that the public curiosity would be gratified and the public intelligence promoted by such readings as are proposed."

We too indorse the suggestion. By all means let us have the "readings." And, if it be possible, let Little Mac himself be the reader. We would go to hear him ourself. We think we see the American Napoleon, with that thoughtful look of his and with those folded arms, "gratifying the public curiosity" by explaining the wonderful strategy which secured the brilliant and bloodless victory of Ball's Bluff; which managed with only 150,000 brave men to keep Washington City "safe" from rebel hands from September, 1861, to March, 1862; which so successfully drove the rebel enemy from Manassas and captured his guns, without losing a man or a knapsack; which captured the hills back of Alexandria and held them for weeks against the scowls and mutterings of all the Secesh in that dirty city; which took Williamsburg by storm the day after reaching it, and without the thought of investing the sacred spot by a single "parallel" or any of those "gradual approaches" so often resorted to by other Generals; which followed the retreating rebels with such vigor that they were entirely "pushed to the wall" and through some parts of it; which led our army through the swamps of the Chickahominy up to the very gates of Richmond, and then, finding that the city was not worth taking, led it back again to that pleasant spot on the banks of the James. And then, as the Napoleonic reader reaches this "third period" in his military career, we imagine we see him rising to his full hight—his voice swelling with the vastness of the thoughts he is about to utter—and reciting those patriotic words which taught the President his duty, and told him just how the backbone of the rebellion could be broken in several p'aces. Yes, more: we fancy we see this "idol of the soldiers" telling us in tones of the most moving pathos how, when Pope's little army was in danger of being utterly destroyed, and Washington was placed in real jeopardy, he shoved his own army with unheard-of celerity to the rescue of Pope and the relief of Washington; how he afterwards, moved by pure compassion, saved the rebel army at Antietam from utter annihilation by simply keeping Porter from smiting that army hip and thigh with a great slaughter; and finally how, acting from the same generous impulse, he refrained for six weeks from following that army into Virginia.

Yes, let us have the "readings," and let General M'CLELLAN be the reader. Let the public curiosity be gratified" with a sight of this vainglorious Nobody, and let the "public intelligence be promoted" by a recital of the manner in which magnificent advantages were thrown away, and one-half of the finest army this continent has ever seen was buried for naught in nameless graves. Inaugurate the "readings," Messrs. Editors of the National Intelligencer; push upon the platform your favorite, and we venture the opinion that Gen. M'CLELLAN will be glad to return to his original obscurity before he has completed the tour of even the disgraced and disloyal City of New York.

LOUISIANA.

On the 22d inst. Louisiana is to elect a Governor and other State officers, in accordance with General Banks' proclamation with which our readers are already familiar. It is also known to our readers that the Free State Convention, recently called to nominate a State ticket, split upon the nomination of a candidate for the Governorship. A letter from New Orleans, dated February 7th, gives us the following additional intelligence:

"A conservative Union ticket was nominated last evening, with Christian Roselius at its head for Governor. Its constituency is composed of the semi-Secesh and Pro Slavery Unionists. Its hopes for success are based upon the split in the Free State party, but the friends of Mr. Hahn are confident of beating both it and the ticket nominated by the bolters from the regular convention."

By the same mail we also have the following high y

IMPORTANT ORDER FROM GEN. BANKS.

HEADQUARTERS, DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF, NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 3, 1864

GENERAL ORDER, No. 23.—The following general regulations are published for the information and government of all interested in the subject of compensated plantation labor, public or private, during the present year, and in continuation of the system established January 30, 1863:

I. The enlistment of soldiers from plantations under cultivation in this Department, having been suspended by order of the Government, will not be resumed except upon direction of the same high authority.

II. The Provost-Marshal-General is instructed to provide for the division of parishes into police and school districts, and to organize from invalid soldiers a competent police force for the preservation of order.

III. Provision will be made for the establishment of a sufficient number of schools, one at least for each of the police and school districts, for the instruction of colored children under twelve years of age, which, when established, will be placed under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Education.

IV. Soldiers will not be allowed to visit plantations without the written consent of the Commanding Officer of the regiment or post to which they are attached, and never with arms, except when on duty, accompanied by an officer.

V. Plantation hands will not be allowed to pass from one place to another, except under such regulations as may be established by the Provost Marshal of the Parish.

VI. Flogging and other cruel or unusual punishments are interdicted.

VII. Planters will be required, as early as practicable after the publication of these regulations, to make a roll of persons employed upon their estates, and to transmit the same to the Provost Marshal of the Parish. In the employment of hands the unity of families will be secured as far as possible.

VIII. All questions between the employer and the employed, until other tribunals are established, will be decided by the Provost Marshal of the Parish.

IX. Sick and disabled persons will be provided for upon the plantations to which they belong, except such as may be received in establishments provided for them by the Government, of which one will be established at Algiers and one at Baton Rouge.

X. The unauthorized purchase of clothing, or other property, from laborers, will be punished by fine and imprisonment. The sale of whisky or other intoxicating drinks to them or to other persons, except under regulations established by the Provost Marshal General, will be followed by the severest punishment.

XI. The possession of arms, or concealed or dangerous weapons, without authority, will be punished by fine and imprisonment.

XII. Laborers shall render to their employer, between daylight and dark, ten hours in Summer and nine hours in Winter, of respectful, honest, faithful labor, and receive therefor, in addition to just treatment, healthy rations, comfortable clothing, quarters, fuel, medical attendance and instruction for children, wages, per month, as follows, payment of one-half of which, at least, shall be reserved until the end of the year:

For first class hands, per month.....$8 00
For second class hands, per month.....6 00
For third class hands, per month.....5 00
For fourth class hands, per month.....3 00

Engineers and foremen, when faithful in the discharge of their duties, will be paid $2 per month extra. This schedule of wages may be commuted by consent of both parties, at the rate of one-fourteenth part of the net proceeds of the crop, to be determined and paid at the end of the year. Wages will be deducted in case of sickness, and rations, also, when sickness is feigned. Indolence, insolence, disobedience of orders and crime, will be suppressed by forfeiture of pay, and such punishments as are provided for similar offences by army regulations. Sunday work will be avoided when practicable, but, when necessary, will be considered as extra labor, and paid at the rate specified herein.

XIII. Laborers will be permitted to choose their employers, but when the agreement is made, they will be held to their engagement for the year, under the protection of the Government. In cases of attempted imposition, by feigning sickness, or stubborn refusal of duty, they will be turned over to the Provost Marshal of the Parish, for labor upon the public works, without pay.

XIV. Laborers will be permitted to cultivate land on private account, as herein specified, as follows:

1st and 2d class hands, with families, one acre each.

1st and 2d class hands, without families, one half acre each.

3d and 4th class hands, with families, one-half acre each.

3d and 4th class hands, without families, one-quarter acre each.

To be increased for good conduct, at the discretion of the employer. The encouragement of independent industry will strengthen all the advantages which capital derives from labor, and enable the laborer to take care of himself and prepare for the time when he can render so much labor for so much money, which is the great end to be attained. No exemption will be made in this apportionment, except upon imperative reasons, and it is desirable that for good conduct the quantity be increased until faithful hands can be allowed to cultivate extensive tracts, while returning to the owner an equivalent of product for rent of soil

XV. To protect the laborer from possible imposition, no commutation of his supplies will be allowed, except in clothing, which may be commuted at the rate of $3 per month for first class hands, and in similar proportion for other classes. The crops will stand pledged, wherever found, for the wages of labor.

XVI. It is advised, as far as practicable, that employers provide for the current wants of their hands, by perquisites for extra labor, or by appropriation of land for share cultivation, to discourage monthly payments so far as it can be done without discontent, and to reserve till the full harvest the yearly wages.

XVII A free labor bank will be established for the safe deposit of all accumulations of wages and other savings; and in order to avoid a possible wrong to depositors, by official defalcation, authority will be asked to connect the bank with the Treasury of the United States in this department.

XVIII. The transportation of negro families to other countries will not be approved. All propositions for this privilege have been declined, and application has been made to other departments for surplus negro families for service in this department.

XIX. The last year's experience shows that the planter and the negro comprehend the revolution. The overseer, having little interest in capital, and less sympathy with labor, dislikes the trouble of thinking, and discredits the notion that anything new has occurred. He is a relic of the past, and adheres to its customs. His stubborn refusal to comprehend the condition of things, occasioned most of the embarrassments of the past year. Where such incomprehension is chronic, reduced wages, diminished rations, and the mild punishment s imposed by the army and navy, will do good.

XX These regulations are based upon the assumption that labor is a public duty, and idleness and vagrancy a crime. No civil or military officer of the Government is exempt from the operations of this universal rule. Every enlightened community has enforced it upon all classes of people by the severest penalties. It is especially necessary in agricultural pursuits. That portion of the people identified with the cultivation of the soil, however changed in condition by the revolution through which we are all passing, is not relieved from the necessity of toil, which is the condition of existence with all the children of God. The revolution has altered its tenure, but not its law. The universal law of labor will be enforced upon just terms, by the Government, under wise protection the laborer rests secure in his rights. Indolence, disorder and crime will be suppressed. Having exercised the high est right in the choice and place of employment, he must be held to the fulfillment of his engagements until released therefrom by the Government. The several Provost-Marshals are hereby invested with plenary powers upon all questions connected with labor, subject to the approval of the Provost-Marshal General, and the commanding officer of the Department. The most favorable and discreet officers will be selected for this duty, and the largest force consistent with the public service detailed for their assistance.

XXI. Employers, and especially overseers, are notified, that undue influence used to move the Marshal from his just balance between the parties representing labor and capital will result in immediate change of officers, and thus defeat that regular and stable system upon which the interests of all parties depend.

XXII. Successful industry is especially necessary at the present time, when large public debts and onerous taxes are imposed to maintain and protect the liberties of the people and the integrity of the Union. All officers, civil or military, and all classes of citizens who assist in extending the profits of labor, and increasing the products of the soil, upon which, in the end, all national prosperity and power depend, will render to the Government a service as great as that derived from the terrible sacrifices of battle. It is upon such consideration only that the planter is entitled to favor. The Government has accorded to him, in a period of anarchy, a release from the disorders resulting mainly from insensate and mad resistance to sensible reforms, which can never be rejected without revolution, and the criminal surrender of his interests and power to crazy politicians, who thought by metaphysical abstractions to circumvent the laws of God. It has restored to him in improved rather than impaired condition his due privileges at a moment when, by his own acts, the very soil was washed from beneath his feet.

XXIII. A mere majestic and its elementary human history does not exhibit. The liberal and just conditions that attend it cannot be disregarded. It protects labor by enforcing the performance of its duty, and it will assist capital by compelling just contributions to the demands of the Government. Those who profess allegiance to other governments will be required, as the condition of residence in this State, to acquiesce, without reservation, in the demands presented by the Government as a basis of permanent peace. The non-cultivation of the soil, without just reason, will be followed by temporary forfeiture to those who will secure its improvement. Those who have exercised, or are entitled to the rights of citizens of the United States, will be required to participate in the measures necessary for the re-establishment of civil government. War can never cease except as civil governments crush out contest, and secure the supremacy of moral over physical power. The yellow harvest must wave over the crimson field of blood, and the representatives of the people displace the agents of purely military power

XXIV. It is therefore a solemn duty resting upon all persons to assist in the earliest possible restoration of civil government. Let them participate in the measures suggested for this purpose. Opinion is free and candidates are numerous. Open hostility cannot be permitted. Indifference will be treated as crime, and faction as treason. Men who refuse to defend their country with the ballot box or cartridge box have no just claim to the benefits of liberty regulated by law. All people not exempt by the law of nations, who seek the protection of the Government are called upon to take the oath of allegiance in such form as may be prescribed, ascribing to the public good, and the restoration of public peace, whatever scruples may be suggested by incidental considerations. The oath of allegiance, administered and received in good faith, is the test of unconditional fealty to the Government and all its measures, and cannot be materially strengthened or impaired by the language in which it is clothed.

XXV. The amnesty offered for the past is conditioned upon an unreserved loyalty for the future, and this condition will be enforced with an iron hand Whoever is indifferent or hostile must choose between the liberty which foreign lands afford, the poverty of the rebel States, and the innumerable blessings which our Government confers upon its people.

May God preserve the Union of the States.

By order of Maj. Gen. BANKS
GEORGE B DRAKE, A. A General

Germans in the United States.

The Baltimore Wacker publishes the following statistical table showing the per centage of the natives of Germany in every State of the Union, according to the census of 1850:

Wisconsin	9.97	Oregon	2.06
Indiana	4.94	The Territories	1.86
Minnesota	10.59	Connecticut	1.81
Illinois	7.37	Delaware	1.61

Kansas	4.03	New Hampshire	0.13
Louisiana	3.48	North Carolina	0.06
Texas	3.40	Vermont	0.17
Kentucky	2.30	Maine	0.09

The total foreign-born population of the Union was 4,136,175, or 13.15 per cent. of the aggregate population. The English formed 1.37 per cent., the Irish 5.12, and the Germans 4.14. The number of the natives of Germany was 1,301,136. The correspondent who furnishes this table estimates the number of Germans (including the children born in this country) at four millions.

Ten planters on the lower Mississippi are returning readily to their allegiance, under the President's Amnesty Proclamation. Deserters from the rebel armies were also coming in freely.
