Pittsburgh Gazette.

TUESDAY MORNING, MARCH 1, 1864.

TO OUR FRIENDS AND THE PUBLIC.

DISSOLUTION.—THE PARTNERSHIP heretofore existing between the undersigned under the name and style of S. RIDDLE & CO., was dissolved by mutual agreement on the 31st day of December, 1863. The GAZETTE establishment has been since the 1st of January, 1864, and will henceforth be in the hands and under the exclusive management of an Association organized under an act of Assembly, relating to Manufacturing, &c.

S. RIDDLE is authorized to use the firm name in settlement. All parties having claims against the late firm are requested to present the same at the Counting Room for settlement; and all persons knowing themselves indebted, will please call and settle without delay.

SAMUEL RIDDLE,
RUSSELL ERRETT,
JAMES M. MACRUM,
S. SCHOYER, Jr.,
ROBERT RIDDLE.

Jan. 1st, 1864.

The GAZETTE is now owned by THE GAZETTE PUBLISHING ASSOCIATION, by whom it will be hereafter conducted. The Association has been organized under the late act relating to corporations, and includes many of our most influential citizens—professional men, manufacturers and merchants. Among the stockholders will be found representatives of every department of our great industrial interests.

In the general policy and principles of the GAZETTE no change is contemplated: In the future, as in the past, it will be found ranged upon the side of the ardent friends of Human Freedom and Human Progress, aiding the friends of Law and Order, and combating all attempts to retard the Government in its efforts to re-establish and perpetuate the Union bequeathed to us by our Fathers.

It is the intention and it will be the constant aim of the publishers to maintain and, if possible, add to the character, influence and circulation of the GAZETTE, and so extend its sphere of usefulness. To this end no expense has been spared, and no efforts shall be wanting. Some changes have been made in the Editorial Staff, and the already liberal arrangements for procuring Special Telegraphic Correspondence from all the great news centres will be more widely extended. The publishers feel warranted in directing the attention of the readers of the GAZETTE to its Telegraphic News Department, which they think equal at least to that of any other journal of its class East or West.

The Commercial Department is in the charge of experienced and reliable Reporters, whose duty will be to furnish a faithful report from day to day of all transactions in the leading articles of our Domestic Products.

During the past year the cost of publishing the GAZETTE was not far from $50,000. On the other hand its circulation and regular income from subscriptions and advertising never were so great as at this time, fully justifying the publishers in maintaining the greatly enhanced cost of publication. It shall be their aim to merit a continuance of that liberal patronage, which alone will warrant them in continuing their efforts to render the GAZETTE a welcome visitor in the counting-room, the workshop, and the home circle.

The publishers deem it but proper that they should state that important improvements in the mechanical appearance of the paper are in progress and will soon be completed.

All communications intended for publication should be addressed to the "Editors of the GAZETTE, Pittsburgh, Pa." Correspondence of a business character, relating to subscription, advertising, &c., should be addressed to "Publishers of the GAZETTE."

JOSIAH KING, President,
E. H. ISHAM,
ROBERT ASHWORTH,
Executive Com. Board of Directors.

The Campaign Opened—The Situation in the Southwest.

The affair at Tunnel Hill, SHERMAN'S reported capture of Selma, the engagement at Olustee in Florida, the re-organization of the Army of the Potomac, and PECK'S preparations for active operations in North Carolina are fresh and simultaneous reminders that the Spring campaign against the Rebels has commenced in earnest. Our armies are certainly manifesting an activity unusual in this season of the year, and really there seems to be but one reason why thereshould not be an advance along the whole line. Most of the re-enlisting veterans have returned to their posts, and thousands of volunteers have recently been mustered into the service and are being rapidly sent to the Front. The weather is the only obstacle to the general advance we speak of, and it will not be long until even that will be removed. In the Gulf States it is no longer an obstacle, as recent events have satisfactorily demonstrated. By the time, then, that SHERMAN has accomplished his work, and GRANT has again engaged the enemy, it may be expected that the weather will have so far moderated as to permit the Army of the Potomac to strike its tents and once more assume the offensive.

It is difficult to form a correct opinion of the probable destination of SHERMAN'S column. It is said that he has already taken the town of Selma, where the Rebels had large manufactories of ordnance and other munitions of war. Montgomery, the capital of Alabama, is forty-five miles east of Selma, and it is safe to infer that SHERMAN can capture the place if he should make the attempt. Beyond the cutting of the railroad at that point we cannot see what other advantage would be gained, while the disadvantage of being still farther removed from a permanent base of supplies would certainly follow. That Atlanta is his final destination, Montgomery being merely taken on the way, seems equally improbable, as the distance from Selma, where he is now reported to be, to Atlanta is about two hundred miles into the very heart of the Confederacy, while the chances of having a great battle to fight would increase with every mile that he would travel and finally culminate in the certainty of vigorous resistance at Atlanta itself. The only other supposition that is left us as to his destination takes him to Mobile, and to this theory there is the objection that, if Mobile is his destination, he would not have gone so far east as Selma on his way to it. But is Selma taken? It is not yet proved that it is. And if SHERMAN should not receive his supplies from Mobile, is it to be expected that he can always subsist upon the country through which he passes? His movement is certainly a mysterious one. Our own impression, which we give for what it is worth, is, that SHERMAN is going to Mobile. It is certainly high time that somebody should take that city. With Mobile in our possession, we have a water base of operations against the whole of Alabama and part of Georgia, while the immediate advantages which would result from the capture of the city are apparent to all.

In this connection it may be well to state that the failure of Gen. SMITH'S expedition to form a junction with Gen. SHERMAN will not, it is supposed, interfere with the purposes of the latter. One object of Gen. SMITH was to prevent the Rebel cavalry from harassing SHERMAN'S rear, and this object has been successfully accomplished. The tearing up of the Memphis and Ohio railroad, and the destruction of a vast amount of the enemy's stores, are of themselves sufficient cause for gratulation to compensate for the failure to unite with SHERMAN. SHERMAN is, however, now beyond all danger of annoyance from the Rebel cavalry.

It does not seem so difficult to fathom the plans of Gen. GRANT. He is going to Atlanta, if SHERMAN is not. Late advices report his army within three miles of Dalton, which is distant about one hundred miles from Atlanta, the two places being connected by railroad. The recent reconnoissance to Tunnel Hill and beyond developed the fact that JOHNSON was still in force at Dalton, and the additional fact is now well authenticated from Rebel sources that LONGSTREET'S army, lately in front of Knoxville, is moving South to co-operate with JOHNSON. But before any union of these two Rebel armies can take place, we look for GRANT to attack JOHNSON at Dalton and drive him flying toward Atlanta.

The importance of Atlanta to the Rebels cannot be overrated. It is their workshop. It will be defended with all the determination and force the Confederacy can command. It may be that the great battle of the war—the Waterloo of the Rebellion—will be fought at or near Atlanta.

Desperate Measures.

The Rebel Congress have passed three acts in secret session, which, as the New York Tribune remarks, are as good evidence of the condition of the Rebellion as was supplied by the Address to the People of the Confederacy which the same Congress adopted before its adjournment. A Confederacy which is forced to summon into the field every man between 17 and 50, to lay a tax on capital equal, and in many cases superior, to its probable income, and to repudiate a currency of which $700,000,000 are in the hands of the people, is about as near the bottom as it can be before the final crash comes.

We state the provisions of these acts generally in a single sentence, but there really is not much qualification to be made by a more exact summary. The Conscription bill with its few exemptions from universal levy has been in substance understood before, though the rebel papers have not, until lately, been permitted to print it. Nobody is exempted unless in the judgment of the rebel leaders he can do better service elsewhere than in the field. All the men whom the South can put into the field, or whom her present masters can force into the ranks of their armies, will be there this spring. There is no doubt whatever that the coming campaign, if disasterous to them, will be the last they can attempt to carry on in considerable force in the South.

The Tax bill puts five per cent. on all property in addition to the heavy taxes previously imposed. On many descriptions of personal estate the tax is much heavier. Gold, silver, and exchange, pay taxes on their market value in Confederate paper—that is, every four or five dollars of specie is taxed as $100. The income tax is ten per cent; additional, like the rest; and all taxes are payable on or before June 1.

The Currency bill is a modification of Memminger's scheme. Treasury notes are to be funded in twenty-year four per cent. bonds within six weeks, or must be thereafter surrendered for new issues, at the rate of three of the old for two of the new. The $ 00 notes, if not funded, will be taxed 33 per cent., and ten per cent. a month subsequently! All notes outstanding at the end of the year are taxed 100 per cent.—which is a very neat method indeed of repudiation, and shows how far Mr. Jefferson Davis' genius has developed since the days when he swindled the creditors of Mississippi. New six per cent. bonds at thirty years are to be issued to the amount of $500,000,000, interest on which is secured by pledge of the customs receipts—a security which, considering the present condition of the blockade, will scarcely be very tempting to capitalists. Yet this is the financial basis on which the leaders of the rebel Confederacy would persuade their subjects that they mean to carry on a war for independence till the resources of the United States are exhausted. Who does not see the inevitable and near result?

The Union Reaction in North Carolina.

From late Southern papers it appears that the Union movement in North Carolina is rapidly spreading. The Wilmington Journal of the 15th, treats at length on the agitation in North Carolina. It says: "The agitation commenced as soon as the State of North Carolina seceded—but we say here that we only state what we know, when we affirm that the movements now endeavoring to be made in North Carolina, are the cause of the deepest apprehension, not simply in Richmond, but throughout the Confederacy—not simply in official circles, but in the army and among the people. They discourage our brave defenders; they encourage our ruthless assailants."

The Raleigh Standard of the 12th contains the proceedings of meetings held in Johnston, Rutherford, Chatham, Wake, Cabarrus, Moore, Bevard, Transylvania, and Rockingham counties. Resolutions were passed at all the meetings, calling upon the Legislature to submit the question of a convention to the people. The Governor is also called upon to take measures to have a convention called. The meetings all breathe a spirit of defiance toward the Davis Government, and are decidedly in earnest in asserting their State rights.

Omissions in McClellan's Report.

General McClellan's official report omits all those despatches that he sent to Washington, and which were published during his pursuit of the enemy from Yorktown. One dated May 4th declared with beaming confidence: "I shall push the enemy to the wall." Another to Mr. STANTON, same date, declares "the enemy's rear is strong, but I have forces enough up there to insure all purposes." No complaint here about want of troops. The very next dispatch, however, dated the next day, when it was apparent he had lost his opportunity, declared that Johnson's army had made a stand, that his force was inferior, that he would "hold them in check until he could resume his original plan." The dispatch immediately prior to this says nothing about the original plan, and declares: "I am now satisfied of the correctness of the course I have pursued. The success was brilliant, and you may rest assured that its effect will be of the greatest importance. There will be no delay in following the enemy." Quite a different thing from holding them "in check."

The Whisky Question.

There is no greater bore to the public mind than the excitement which is constantly kept up by the army of "our own correspondents" at Washington by means of special despatches upon the condition of the Whisky Tax in Congress. If there was a whisky insurrection under full headway, it could create no greater stir. The future historian, in searching among the newspapers of the present day, will be puzzled to understand how, in the midst of a gigantic civil war, grave legislators could consume so much valuable time, extending over some months, upon the miserable question whether a handful of whisky speculators should be taxed or not for the material which they had on hand.

Schofield on DAWSON.

On the same day that JOHN I. DAWSON, delivered his set speech in Congress, Judge SCHOFIELD, of this State, administered to him a brief but pointed rebuke in the following words:

"Mr. Chairman, my colleague [Mr. DAWSON] who addressed the House this morning informed us that it was just eight years since he had spoken here before. I know that, not because I have followed his personal history, but I knew it by the tenor of his speech. He must have turned down a leaf just eight years ago, and begun to day where he left off then. The speech might have been appropriately made during the earlier years of the administration of General Pierce. I wish to remind him that the question involved in the struggle now furnishing so many sad pages for history is a question of division: 'Shall the great Republic be divided into two small ones?' That is the question now before the country.

The Award of Contracts.

The further publication of the award of contracts at the office of the Army Clothing and Equipage Office in this city, has been stopped, in deference, as we were told by an officer of the Government, to the request of contractors. The successful applicants for contracts have alleged, as a reason for the non publication of their names, that they are run down by ward beauty-fund committees and collectors for patriotic and charitable objects generally, who presume, and very naturally, too, that men who make so largely out of their sales to the Government could easily afford to give material aid to the filling up of our armies, and the comfortable maintenance of our sick and wounded soldiers. In other cities, contracts are regularly published, and the information thus given goes far to establish the market prices of the articles contracted for. It is to be regretted that in Philadelphia it has been found convenient to yield to the wishes of the contractors in this important particular.—Philadelphia Press.

IS SELMA 41 OR 70 MILES FROM MONTGOMERY?

IS PITTSBURGH 356 OR 623 MILES FROM PHILADELPHIA?

HUNT'S GAZETEER

Has the distance from Selma to Montgomery, the Capital of Alabama, 41 miles. The Pittsburgh Gazette, of Saturday evening, gives the distance about 70 miles. The question naturally arises, "Which is the correct distance?" as the discrepancy is very great. It is claimed for that 41 miles is the proper distance, or from two to three days' march for the army, (and not nearly twice as far,) for proof of which consult any School Map.

HUNT'S GAZETEER is sold at the low price of 50 cents. It has a fine Colored Steel Plate Map, which of itself is worth more money. Bound in cloth, price 75 cents; in leather binding, with tuck for carrying in the pocket, $1. 5,000 copies have been published, and the demand is still unsupplied, so anxious is every intelligent person to keep posted in the movements of our brave troops in the great theatre of war for the preservation of the Union.
