

Pittsburgh Gazette.

MONDAY, MAY 3, 1864.

It is said that Congress will not adjourn before the last of June.

The news in New Jersey is to commence to-morrow. The deficiency is to be supplied amounts to $8,500,000. Owing to the policy of paying negro troops the same wages, bounty, &c., as white soldiers is about to be adopted by Congress.

The President has "approved" the joint resolution temporarily increasing the duration of imprisonment by four years, & it is therefore now a law.

Treasury at the San Francisco Custom House on Wednesday last, was $270,000 more than those of the single day before. The receipts for April will reach a million.

A despatch to the N. Y. Tribune, dated Washington, Friday, says: The impression has gained me that established that the Senate will certainly reject the House tax on whisky by a large majority.

The House of Representatives has appointed a committee of nine members to investigate the charges of Faustin Blair and others against the Secretary of the Treasury.

"Our Master,"—Our cause, we hope, will not carelessly rest or easily forget the benignant appeal on our first page in behalf of silly orphan children from East Tennessee.

Cleveland Convention.—The Neo-
Englanders say that the People's Convention will be held at Cleveland on the 31st of May, and announces that a call for the same is "expected to be publicly made" on Monday (5th).

It is understood that the National Committee have commenced arrangements for the Ultimatum Convention and that none of the members have in any way advocated its postponement. The railroad delegates bring the delegations to a reduced force.

The State Central Committee.
We note with great satisfaction the appointment of Hon. Simon Cameron as Chairman of the State Central Committee. It was an appointment eminently fit to be made, and the President of the Convention, Hon. G. V. Lawrence, deserves the thanks of the friends of freedom for having made it. Gen. Cameron is well known throughout the Union, and his energy, tact and influence will come well into play in the position to which he has been assigned. He is the right man in the right place, and in his appointment we have the guarantee that the campaign will be an active, vigorous and successful one.

PENNSYLVANIA AND THE PRESIDENCY.
Address and Platform of the Union State Convention.

The address and resolutions adopted by the late Convention at Harrisburg are as follows:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference. In doing so, we claim no right to state that the ardent purpose to which he devoted himself in the cause of the Union, the Union of the States, is now so far advanced that the Union is controlled by no party.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the extension of power and engage the confidence of the nation, is keeping in view the welfare of the people, who are to be the chief beneficiaries of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

In presenting the name of Abraham Lincoln, who is the representative of our fellow citizens of Pennsylvania and of the other loyal States, we constrained by a high sense of what is due to the principles of our country, to whom we owe our existence, and to those principles which impel us to this preference.

We invoke the co-operation of our fellow citizens of this and the other loyal States.

Resolved, That we regard the election of Abraham Lincoln as the final triumph of the national cause, and the enforcement of the national authority, and the suppression of all objects which should now claim the chief benefits of his administration.

Resolved, That our confidence in the policy of the National Administration, and the means employed for the suppression of rebellion and the restoration of the Union, is so great, that the life of the Republic may be prolonged, the hope of the world once more animated, and the down-trodden of all countries and colonies filled with joy and gladness.

RESOLUTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Geo. Stearnes, from the Committee on Resolutions and Address, submitted the following:

To the People of Pennsylvania.

</