The Fourth of May. It was on Wednesday, the 4th of May, oThe speculative mania which now in that Granz crossed the Rapidan and commenced that wonderful campaign which is menced that wonderful campaign which is filling the whole country with his praises and causing the hearts of all loyal men to rejoice with exceeding great joy. Already six pitched battles have been fought with the Rebal hosts, and the grand result is, that Lux has been whipped and driven hack, and Gaart is "on to Richmond." And such desperate and bloody fighting, occurring within the same number of days, has no parallel in history. Compared withit, Waterloo was but a skirmish. More man have been killed and wounded in this week of battles than were placed hors ducombat during the eight years of our Revolutionary struggle. The carnage on both sides has been indeed frightful. The killing and wounding of twice thirty thousand menfer that is the estimated loss in both armies—is an appalling fact. The nation—North and Bouth—will mourn now as it never mourned before. But if God give us victory, as we believe he will; if Richmond shall fall and the Rebellion shall die; if, after all the weeping of the night, joy shall come in the morning; if, after the scarifies of so many precious lives, this nation shall experience a new bit his direction, but we walcome with kindling emotions of a lung crop of oil companies are really based on a good foundation, and the stockholders will resilize stock (goes off like smoke.' If unfavorable, could the knowledge of that fact by our people have assisted or encouraged the successful Rebels? The country certainly couldn't see it. We have not the slightest doubt that Burlen is what he pretends to be, the "Major General Commanding." If his expedition should meet with a Red river defeat, these newspapers that are now attempting to belittle him would be the first to charge him with the sole responsibility for that defeat. Union journals would do well to leave to Copperhead papers the work of slandering our Generals in the field who are doing their whole duty.

Gens. Warren and Webb Not Kulled. It seems to have been a cruel blunder of the sleggaph in announcing the death of General Wanners, the commander of the 5th corps. He was reported to have died on Monday of wounds received in Sunday's fight. But we subsequently hear of him taking part in the battles of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The blunder appears to have arisen from a confounding of the name of Colonel Wanners with that of the General!
