THE PRESENT SITUATION.

Special Dispatch to the Pittsburgh Gazette.

Washington, May 27, 1864.

Mr. Swinton, correspondent of the New York Times, sends the following dispatch to that paper, dated "Headquarters Army of the Potomac, May 27, 1864."

After three weeks of marching and fighting, the Army of the Potomac is now in a position to cross the North Anna River.

The experience of the two weeks spent before the lines of Spotylvania, brought the Army of the Potomac to a position where it is now able to bring an expedition of blood out of all proportion to the results of a victory.

On these relations a battle that would have been a disaster to the Union Army, was avoided.

I think it is with some regret that Gen. Grant was especially compelled to abandon the hope of following such a battle.

SECRETARY STANTON'S BULLETIN.

Dispatch from Gen. Banks.

THE REBELS BEATEN IN TWO ENCOUNTERS.

Nothing Later from Grant's Sherman or Butler.

WASHINGTON, May 27, 1864.

My Gen. - A dispatch from General Banks, dated May 26, on the Mississippi River, was received to-day.

It details the brilliant engineering achievement of Colonel Bailey in constructing a dam across the falls of the Red river for the purpose of the general fleet, the particulars of which have already been made public.

The army, in going from Alexandria to the Mississippi, had two engagements with the enemy, one at Mansfield and one at Yellow Bayou, in both of which the rebels were beaten.

Nothing later from Grant or Sherman. (Signed) E. M. STANTON.
