Our Relations with France.

While there is throughout the country a general disinclination to express any difference of opinion with the government which might lead to embarrassment in itsmanagement of our relations with France, there is also a manifest conviction, which cannot be suppressed, that it would have been much better if the Government had not shown the haste which is apparent in the dispatch from Mr. EWARD to Mr. DAYTON, which we published a few days since—that it would have been much better, in fact, if that dispatch had never been written.

The unanimous adoption of a resolution by the House expressing a thorough disapprobation of the course pursued by France in establishing an empire in Mexico, was but an echo of the public will. That resolution expressed the undivided feeling of the entire country. On that there is not a dissenting voice to be heard, the people being as unanimous as their representatives. The dispatch of Mr. SEWARD admits this; but while advising France that the people are united as one man on that subject, it destroys the whole effect which the knowledge of that fact ought to produce upon the Government of LOUIS NAPOLEON, by adding that the resolution has not yet passed the Senate, and that if it had the President has still his veto power left, with which to annul it. There is not to be sure any intimation that he would annul it; but the citation of the fact that he has the power to do so would seem to encourage the hope, by the French Government, that he might do so.

We appreciate to the full extent the anxiety felt by our own government to avoid foreign complications while we have the Rebellion on hand. We do not, for ourselves, regard a war with France or England, at this juncture, as any great calamity; on the contrary, we are, individually, so eccentric as to believe that such a war would hasten the extinction of the Rebellion. But we know that we almost stand alone in this view, and therefore express it simply to put ourselves right and not to discuss it. The country feels, just as the government feels, that it is our policy to avoid all possible causes of quarrel with European governments, and especially with England and France, until we get this war off our hands.

In that attitude the people stand firmly by the President and his Secretary of State. But, while the people are thus anxious to avoid all foreign entanglements at such a time as this, the anxiety applies only to the time of the complication, and not to the complication itself. There is not in the public mind, any fear of France, or of a war with France, but the fear is that it may come upon us at a time when we have our hands tied, and will find us, therefore, unable to do full justice to it. That a war with France must come, sooner or later, if the French maintain their present position in Mexico, is a foregone conclusion. Every one has made up his mind to that; and our present policy is merely to stave off what is inevitably to come, until we can meet it with stronger hands.

The objection to Mr. Seward's dispatch, therefore, is that, by being a voluntary tender of explanation, before explanation was asked, it displays a fear which the people do not feel, and leaves the door open to an inference by the French that they can do as they please in Mexico without fear of opposition from us, no matter what our people may think or say.

We honor the government for its fidelity to the popular will in striving to prevent a rupture with France at the present time; what we object to is the way adopted for that purpose. It places us in a seeming false position—a position which carries a sense of humiliation with it. With the blessing of God we shall have to whip France out of Mexico, some day, sooner or later, and we do not care how soon France knows that the American people feel that they have that task imposed on them.

The Pennsylvania Reserves.

Just about the time when General GRANT undertook his grand movement against the Rebel Capital, the time of enlistment of the 9th Regiment of Pennsylvania Reserves expired, and the two or three hundred remaining members of that organization were ordered from Culpepper back to Washington, preparatory to being mustered out of service. The regiment was a three years' regiment, and had participated in nearly every battle in which the army of the Potomac had been engaged. It was never in the rear—never held as a reserve—but, with the other regiments of the gallant division to which it belonged, was always relied upon to do as hard fighting as American valor is capable of performing, and it always did it. Its decimated ranks and shattered battle-flag tell a story of suffering and devotion of which any regiment from any State might well be proud.

And yet, when this three years regiment—we mean the remnant of it—was mustered out of service because it had honorably and bravely fulfilled its contract with the Government, the Chicago Tribune, and other prominent journals for which we have great respect, saw proper to rail out their condemnation of it because it did not remain with Gen. GRANT and assist him to take Richmond—the expiration of the regimen's term of enlistment not being regarded by these journals as entitled to any consideration whatever under the circumstances. The comments of the Tribune were especially bitter, and to a Pennsylvanian needlessly irritating.

We refer to this subject here not with the view of defending the 9th Reserves, for they need no defense at our hands, but that we may, in a spirit of frankness and fair play, inquire of the Tribune, and the other unduly critical journals to which we have alluded, why it is that the return home, within the past two weeks, of three years' regiments from New York, Massachusetts and Ohio have not called forth their patriotic indignation as did the mustering out of the 9th Reserves? If it was wrong, unpatriotic and all that for the Reserves to leave the front before the passage of the Rapidan, was it not much worse for these New York, Massachusetts and Ohio regiments to leave after the fighting commenced, and before the victory was achieved? To be consistent, the Tribune and its assistants in the work of abusing Pennsylvania soldiers should have been fairly boiling over with rage and indignation as they beheld the veterans from the States we have named returning home, with bronzed cheeks and brows bedewed with the sweat of a battle not yet ended. But they have made no sign of this indignation, and we are left to the conclusion that they are keeping their wrath bottled for a generous outpouring upon the heads of the next corporal's guard of Pennsylvania soldiers who may be mustered out after they have fulfilled all the conditions of their contract with the Government.

The Cleveland Convention.

To day the Convention of Radical Republicans assembles at Cleveland, in the language of one of the numerous calls which have summoned it together, "for consultation and concert of action in respect to the approaching Presidential election." It is not yet definitely known what action the Convention will take—whether it will adopt a platform and place a Presidential candidate upon it; or, whether it will only entitle itself to be placed in the same category with the little girl's preachers "and he talked, and he talked, and he talked." Most likely the latter, as the movement has recently had a liberal quantity of cold water thrown upon it by the refusal of the Radicals of Missouri to send delegates to the Convention, which circumstance has had the tendency to effectually dampen the ardor of those hotheads who would put a separate ticket in the field even if they knew it could not carry a contraband camp in the District of Columbia. But it is little matter what the Convention may do or may not do. Its deliberations can have no effect whatever upon the final result of the Presidential canvass.

THE telegraph yesterday morning committed the ridiculous blunder of stating that BRECKENRIDGE was at Hanover Court House with from thirty to one hundred thousand men. It should have stated from three to ten thousand.

From the New York Tribune.

A New Relic of General Andrew Jackson.

Through the kindness of Mr. Coventry Waddell, of this city, a personal friend of General Jackson, we are enabled to lay before our readers the following interesting letter, which has never before been printed. We print the letter in full, notwithstanding its personal character, certain that all will be glad to read it who revere the memory of its writer, and to those among them—and there are many—who deny the principles which he cherished, we especially commend the injunction which he here inculcates of devotion to the Union. Copperhead papers are expected to copy:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19, 1837.

MY DEAR MADAM: By a letter received to-day from your dear husband, is communicated to me the joyful intelligence that you have presented him with a lovely son, and that you intend honoring me with his name by calling him Andrew Jackson. I duly appreciate the honor you bestow upon me; a greater could not be conferred, as it gives evidence of your confidence and esteem. I shall duly cherish it.

I sincerely regret that I cannot be personally present and act as godfather when he is presented to his God and Saviour in the holy ordinance of baptism; but I trust my friend, Samuel Swartwout, Esq., will have the goodness to represent me, as my proxy, on this solemn occasion; and I have to request that you and your dear husband present this my request, to him, and afterward I shall entrust my obligations to this dear boy to your maternal care and that of his dear father, as my debility at present admonishes me that I will never have the pleasure to see him, unless I should be honored with a visit by you and him and his father at the Hermitage. I can only offer up my daily prayers for him.

I enclose herewith the usual gifts to this namesake that I have bestowed on all my others—it bears the impress of the Eagle of his Country, displayed on all-her banners, and as the child grows in years and in wisdom I have to depend upon you to explain to him, with this injunction of his godfather, that when he arrives at the years of manhood he will always be found sustaining the Eagle of his Country from the insult, or grasp, of a foreign foe, and the still more dangerous enemy, the intestine Traitor who may engage in the wicked scheme of severing our glorious Union upon which depends the perpetuance of our happy Government, which will endure as long as our unrivaled system lasts, and no longer. Instill in his mind that our Federal Union must be preserved. To the patriotism of his dear parents I trust this lesson will be early impressed, with all moral virtues, on his mind.

I beg you to kiss the dear boy for me, and present him with my blessing. My prayers will be constantly offered up for him, that he may have a long and useful life; that he may be a blessing to his parents in their declining years, and gain a happy immortality. With my sincere prayers for you and your dear husband's welfare and happiness here and hereafter, and that of your amiable family,

I am, very respectfully, your friend,

ANDREW JACKSON.

Mrs. JACKSON, of the city of New York.

Clippings from our Exchanges.

THE first of a new line of steamers to New York from France is expected to arrive in June. The vessel, which is named the Washington, is of 900 horse power, and is now fitting up at Havre. The company owning her, the Campagnie Atlantique, and which arose out of the Credit Mobilier in France, has already two lines in successful operation, one of which performs mail service between Europe, the West Indies and the Gulf of Mexico. In addition to the steamers for the New York line, which have been built in Scotland, the company has two fine vessels in progress at Nazaire, the Empress Eugenie, and the Empress Charlotte.—N. Y. Express.

A WHITE SLAVE, named John Cassimer, has been brought to Connecticut by a mechanic of that State who was lately employed as master of construction at Fort Pike, near New Orleans. Cassamer is an old man, and was the illegitimate offspring of the daughter of a wealthy French planter named Bisan, in Southern Louisiana. The family disowned him, turned him over to the negro cabins on the plantation and had him taught a trade, and after many years of suffering he now finds freedom and full employment in a factory at Collinsville, Connecticut.

THE official records at Washington state that upward of 160 female recruits have been discovered since the commencement of the war. It is supposed that nearly all of these were in collusion with men who were examined and accepted, after which the fair ones managed to substitute. Over seventy of these martial ladies, when their sex was discovered, were acting as officers' servants. In one regiment there were seventeen of them in this capacity.

IN Lowell, Mass., there is an apple tree which never blossoms, and yet is loaded every year with fruit. Grafts from it blossom. The seeds are frequently partially or wholly exposed to view at the outside of the "blow" and of the fruit, while the centre of the fruit is as compact as that of a turnip.

NEITHER of the gas companies of New York furnished gas free to the Metropolitan Fair in that city. The bill of one company alone was $2,799 50.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

U. S.

10-40 BONDS.

These bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 8th, 1864, which provides that all Bonds issued under this act SHALL BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date, and until their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTEREST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of not over one hundred dollars annually, and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.

At these Bonds, by Act of Congress, are EXEMPT FROM MUNICIPAL OR STATE TAXATION, their value is increased from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate of tax levies in various parts of the country.

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay OVER EIGHT PER CENT. INTEREST in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. Bonds. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties or stock companies or separate communities only is pledged for payment, while for the debts of the United States the whole property of the country is holden to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.

These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums from $50 up to any magnitude, on the same terms, and are thus made equally available to the smallest lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.

The Funded Debt of the United States on which interest is payable in gold, on the 30 day of March, 1864, was $768,985,000. The interest on this debt for the coming fiscal year will be $45,837,120, while the customs revenue in gold for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1864, has been so far at the rate of over $150,000,000 per annum.

It will be seen that even the present gold revenue of the Government are largely in excess of the wants of the Treasury for the payment of gold interest, while the recent increase of the tariff will doubtless raise the annual receipts from customs on the same amount of importations, to $200,000,000 per annum.

The authorized amount of this loan is Two Hundred Million Dollars. Instructions to the National Banks acting as loan agents were not issued until March 20, but the amount of Bonds reported sold at the United States Treasury up to May 21st was $54,564,000.

Subscriptions will be received by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, and the Assistant Treasurers at New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, and by the First National Bank, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Third National Bank, Pittsburgh, Pa.

And by all National Banks which are depositari s of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country, (acting as agents of the National Depositary Banks,) will furnish furth r information on application, and afford every facility to subscribers

LATE PUBLICATIONS,

AT HENRY MINER'S.

THE GREAT NOVEL

HAUNTED HEARTS.

By the author of "The Lamplighter"

Price, cloth, $2 00

Seven Stories, with basement and attic. By Ike Marvel, author of "My Farm at Edgewood," "Dream Life," etc. Cloth.....$1 75

The Springfield Republican says: "The Seven Stories are all charming—a happy blending of truth and fiction—foliage of fancy trained upon a trellis of fact. The Basement and Attic are neatly drawn sketches. The 'Wet Day at an Irish Inn' is a romance in miniature. The 'Account of a Consular' is full of quiet humor, &c., and the whole pleasant book commends itself."
