THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1864.

The Cleveland Convention.

We have read the proceedings of the Cleveland Convention with interest, but without apprehension as to its results politically. It appears to have been what is popularly known as a "fizzle." There was quite a respectable number of people in attendance, but they represented no one but themselves. They called themselves "delegates;" but they were self appointed and without constituents. It would be perfectly easy to get together the same number of discontented politicians anywhere, at any time, and on almost any imaginable question.

Look, for instance, at the "delegates" from Pennsylvania. Who appointed them? Whom did they represent beside themselves? Were they appointed by the handful who responded to the call for the formation of a Fremont Club, in Wilkins' Hall, or did they go simply of their own motion, and with the satisfied consciousness that in representing themselves they represented enough self importance for a large party? We can safely say, from our knowledge of public sentiment here, that they represented no political organization of the slightest importance in this county; and the public will look in vain for any authority outside of it to act as delegates. They assumed, with that political modesty for which they are notorious, to speak for Pennsylvania; but neither the opposition to the Copperhead Democracy in this State, nor any portion of it, has ever made them its mouth-piece.

The old-time "Liberty Party" National Conventions were much more respectable gatherings, both in numbers and personnel. They were not, it is true, attended by Parker Pillsbury, Stephen S. Foster and Wendell Phillips, who were too pure, in those days, to defile their hands with politics. They contented themselves, then, with denouncing the Constitution as "a league with death and a covenant with hell," and all who voted under it as almost certain of eternal damnation. Now that they have got to voting under it they cannot consort with those who perilled their souls' salvation by persisting in voting when they thought it heterodox, and advised against it, but are fain to consort with men of such immaculate purity as Gen. John Cochrane.

We have read over the platform, and see but little in it to condemn. With the exception of the one term resolution there is scarcely any part of it that the Baltimore Convention might not reaffirm. In looking it over the reader wonders where the grievance of these men is. It is not one of principle, for every principle in it, or whatever is in it worthy of the name, will undoubtedly find expression at Baltimore. The grievance is a personal one. Evidently Jones C. Fremont is determined to run for President, and despairing of a nomination elsewhere, has this one manufactured to order; sundry discontented men, ambitious of notoriety, seek it through this channel, as seeming to offer the best opportunity for that purpose, while others, disliking Mr. Lincoln, seek this as the only way of venting their dislike.

The mass of those who supported John C. Fremont for the Presidency in 1856 will unite with us in the expression of a deep regret that he should suffer himself to be placed in this position. For some time past, however, it has been evident that he was bent upon one of two things—either to compel the Administration party to nominate him, or to create a breach in its ranks to secure, if possible, its defeat. The nomination at Cleveland is the result of his conviction that he was certain not to be nominated at Baltimore; and since he is determined to run, we are glad to notice that the self-created convention which nominated him contained no one of any note and represented no element of any political importance.

The "delegates" themselves appear to have been clearly of this mind, that the move was an utter failure. The nomination of John Cochrane for Vice President—a man without a particle of strength or character, and who lives in the same city with Fremont—shows that no one, even of them, was willing to be offered up with him as a fellow sacrifice, not a voice being raised even for this delegate who persisted in running double with Dayton for the same place in 1856. The same anxiety was shown to escape from all possible future responsibility for the affair in the appointment of the National Committee. The "delegates" from Pennsylvania gave the honor of a place on that Committee to the least distinguished of their number, and the delegates from other States seem to have acted from a like impulse.

We do not, as we stated at the outset, feel any apprehension as to the results of this Convention, politically. The masses of the friends of the Union and the Government will rally around the nominees of the Baltimore Convention, satisfied that its platform will be radical enough, and that every vote cast in opposition to its nominees, for a third candidate, will be, in effect, a vote for the Chicago Copperhead nominees.

Land Grants.

On year ago the Legislature granted the income of all the land scrip donated to our State by Congress—780,000 acres—to the Centre County Agricultural College, with the provision that the income might be diverted at any future time. At the last session of the Legislature a bill passed the Senate, after a full discussion of the subject by a vote of 22 to 10, repealing the act of the previous year, and dividing the land among six Colleges, among which was the Western University of our city. Although nearly all the leading members of the House and a good majority of all the members were in favor of a division, yet, owing to a pressure of business near the close of the session, the absence of the member who had the floor in opposition to the bill when it came up before that body, and some other circumstances, its passage was not secured. With such a decided expression of opinion, it cannot be supposed for a moment that the Commissioners will sell the scrip at a low rate before another session, when a division will be made.

From Charleston to Liverpool Direct.—The Liverpool Courier, of May 18, has the following:

The schooner Samuel Marsile, of Charleston, South Carolina, has just arrived in the Mersey from Charleston, with a cargo of one hundred and thirty-two bales of upland cotton. She is the first vessel which has arrived from Charleston for a considerable time, the blockade runners having of late chiefly turned their course to intermediate ports.

Capt. John C. Mitchell, of the 1st regiment South Carolina artillery, has superseded Col. Stephen Elliott as the commander of Fort Sumter. He is not yet 25 years old.

The Eleventh Hour.

When Congress assembled in December last, it was generally acknowledged that the first great duty to be undertaken and performed by that body, was, to make such provision to sustain the national credit by imposing increased taxes, as would, at the earliest practicable moment, strengthen the hands of the Government against both its open enemies, the rebels, and its equally malignant secret enemies, the gold-speculators and other depreciators of the national currency. Under the pressure of the circumstances which existed, and to meet the great exigences so incontrovertably stated in the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, less than even a month should have sufficed to pass some revenue measure, covering at least as much ground as was and must be beyond all reasonable dispute in the matter of taxation. Among the obviously indisputable articles to be subjected to a greatly increased rate of taxation, distilled and malt liquors and tobacco would confessedly stand at the head of the list; and if Congress had addressed itself in the right spirit to the work before it, an internal revenue bill imposing an adequate tax on these and a few other articles, chiefly articles of luxury, not of prime necessity, would have been passed in the month of December, so as to come into operation on the first day of the new year. But instead of appreciating its duty, and the responsibility which the state of the national finances devolved upon it, Congress, just after it assembled, resolved itself into a kind of general debating society—in which there was certainly displayed even more than sophomoric wordiness, and certainly no more than sophomoric ability or practical knowledge of affairs—and for six months we have had a vast amount of talk about taxation, but as yet not one tax actually imposed.

When the historian shall come to the chapter on legislation, writing of these months, during which the nation has been passing through one of the most fearful crises that ever threatened a nation's existence, we can well anticipate the terms in which he will hold this delay, and the men who are responsible for it, up to the scorn and contempt of posterity.

We would, however, even though it is now about the eleventh hour, implore Congress to endeavor to redeem the time that is left, if it be impossible to retrieve that which is past. Perhaps, like the laborers called into the vineyard, who had but an hour to work, if they now work as men who would bring forth fruits meet for repentance, posterity will deal gently with their former idleness and unfaithfulness—and their one hour will be reckoned for a full day.

Personnel of Louis Napoleon.

A Paris correspondent writes thus:

The Emperor seems to grow fatter and older in the most complete tranquility of mind and body. I saw him the other day at the private view of the annual exhibition of paintings, walking with his little boy, and showing him the paintings. He has become so corpulent that his figure is now quite short and rotund, giving him, with his long nose, a strong resemblance to Punch. He looked, as he generally does, very good-humored, with both his hands, as well as his cane, stuck into the pockets of his overcoat. I saw him take his son up to a painting of Napoleon I. on his return from Elba, and point out and explain to him all the incidents, but the boy did not display much animation. He is very like his mother, seems soft and sentle, and has not much life and vigor in him. Presently the Empress also came into the saloon to complete the family party, wearing the petticoats exceedingly short in order to display the pretty boots and tassels, reaching half way up the leg, which Parisian ladies now delight in. To see them all three standing together, made one think of the strange fortunes, past and present, of the parents, and wonder what would be the future destinies of the child.

A Daughter of Gen. Lee Within Our Lines.

A correspondent of the New York Times writing from General Butler's camp, under date of the 22d inst., says:

We have in our lines the daughter of General Robert E. Lee. She is stopping at the house of a relative, an old gentleman named Hill Carter, whose place is on the banks of the James River, just opposite our landing at Barmuda Hundred. Mr. Carter was very attentive to our wounded during the Peninsular campaign, and reaped a safeguard from Gen. McClellan. Beyond a military guard upon the plantation, to prevent communication with the rebels, Mr. Carter is now left in undisturbed possession of his estate by General Butler, and his young relative enjoys unlimited personal freedom."

A letter just received from Gen. Butler's headquarters, tells us that Miss Lee has been permitted to go through our lines to the rebel capital, under a flag of truce.

A Pun by McClellan.

If the following is genuine, it is the first "croak" we ever saw credited to the Chickahominy line:

Jeb Stuart had just made his successful circuit of the Army of the Potomac when McClellan was investing Richmond on the Chickahominy line. General Philip St. George Cooke then commanded a brigade of Union cavalry, and had been sent by Gen. Stoneman to interrupt his son-in-law, Jeb. Jeb, however, interfered with his father-in-law, by getting into his camp, which he rifled. In his father-in-law's tent, Jeb found a small box of specie in small change. It bored Gen. St. George considerably, but he was in duty bound to turn it off to the best advantage, so he reported to McClellan that he would "cut off Jeb with a shilling." "That may be," quoth Littlmak—"but it's certain you'll never cut him off with cavalry."

How English Soldiers are Treated.—An English paper says the following case was heard at East Retford recently:

James Brown, a retired soldier, pleaded guilty to stealing a quantity of barley, and made the following extraordinary statement: "I stole it, and I did it to get transported. I have served my Queen and country eleven years. I was in the 28d regiment of foot, and served at Alma and through the Crimean war. I was afterward sent to the East Indies. I was at the seige of Delhi, and also at the recapture of Lucknow, under General Havelock. I was also at the capture of Bareilly under Colin Campbell. I enlisted for ten years, and having served that time came home wounded. In January I was discharged at Portsmouth, and having been presented with a sovereign, was turned upon the world. I have committed this and other robberies to get myself out of the country." Committed for trial at the sessions.

By the appearance of Breckinridge at Hanover Court-house we are warned that Lee is calling in his forces from all directions. Breckinridge was in the Shenandoah Valley, where he checked Sigel. Our own force there are perhaps still under the impression that Breckinridge is in front of them, but if there are any rebel troops there they can only be a few cavalry regiments under Imboden.

Prisoners at Fort Delaware.—There are at present nearly eleven thousand prisoners confined at Fort Delaware. They occupy ground on the outside as well as the inside of the fort, and a strong guard is maintained. Thirty guns bear upon the quarters of the prisoners on the outside of the fort, and every precaution is taken to prevent an escape.

No Immediate Call for Troops.—A dispatch to the New York Evening Post, dated Washington, May 31st, says: "It is believed that it will be some time yet before another call for troops will be issued. If volunteering is brisk it may not be necessary."

J. SIBON FOSTER,
Capt. and Provost Marshal, 22d Dist. Pa.

PITTSBURGH, MAY 28th, 1864

We, the undersigned, being appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions from the Insurance Companies and Agents of the Sanitary Fair, would most respectfully report that they entered upon the duties entrusted to them, by issuing printed circulars, and addressed them to the several local institutions and Agencies doing business in our city, enclosing duplicates to each of the Agencies which could be forwarded to their parent institutions, asking their co-operation and aid in our patriotic endeavors and undertaking. After a sufficient lapse of time being afforded for replies from the more distant Institutions, we calls personally on all the local companies and the agents for those contributions. The nine local companies all responded favorably, and in a spirit of liberality to our noble cause, as they had so often done before since the commencement of this rebellion. But your Committee regret that from many of the agencies who are doing business and dividing the profits of insurance with our local companies, we were met with the oft repeated reply—we are instructed by our parent institutions to say that they give their contribution as at "Home," therefore, must decline giving any here to your noble and charitable endeavors To this reply there are honorable exceptions. In order that no injustice shall be done to any and our citizens may know all who have contributed we ben with give a list of the Agencies, and also of our local companies doing business in our city, together with the amount severally paid your Committee, and which amounts we have paid over to your Treasurer, N. Holmes, Jr., Esq., should any further contributions be paid us by any of the Agents, after the publication of this report, they will be duly acknowledged by your Committee.

10-40 BONDS.

These bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 8th, 1864, which provides that all Bonds issued under this act SHALL BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date, and until their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTEREST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of not over one hundred dollars annually, and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.

As these Bonds, by Act of Congress, are EXEMPT FROM MUNICIPAL OR STATE TAXATION, their value is increased from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate of tax levies in various parts of the country.

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay OVER EIGHT PER CENT. INTEREST in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. Bonds. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties or stock companies or separate communities only is pledged for payment, while for the debts of the United States the whole property of the country is holden to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.

These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums from $50 up to any magnitude, on the same terms, and are thus made equally available to the smallest lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.

The Funded Debt of the United States on which interest is payable in gold, on the 3d day of March, 1864, was $768,965,000. The interest on this debt for the coming fiscal year will be $45,637,128, while the customs revenue in gold for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1864, has been so far at the rate of over $160,000,000 per annum.

It will be seen that even the present gold revenues of the Government are largely in excess of the wants of the Treasury for the payment of gold interest, while the recent increase of the tariff will doubtless raise the annual receipts from customs on the same amount of importations, to $150,000,000 per annum.

The authorized amount of this loan is Two Hundred Million Dollars. Instructions to the National Banks acting as loan agents were not issued until March 26, but the amount of Bonds reported sold at the United States Treasury up to May 31st was $54,564,000.

Subscriptions will be received by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, and the Assistant Treasurers at New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, and by the First National Bank, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Third National Bank, Pittsburgh, Pa.

And by all National Banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country, (acting as agents of the National Depositary Banks,) will furnish further information on application, and afford every facility to subscribers.
