Pittsburgh Gazette.

SATURDAY, JUNE 18, 1864.

NATIONAL UNION NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT:
ABRAHAM LINCOLN,
of Illinois.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT:
ANDREW JOHNSON,
of Tennessee.

IMPORTANT telegraphic dispatches, concerning General GRANT's movement across the James River, will be found in our dispatches this morning.

How to Fill up our Armies.

No less than three editorial articles appeared in one column of the Pittsburgh Dispatch yesterday in advocacy of the policy of repealing the $300 clause of the present enrollment law. The Dispatch, while favoring this policy, plainly manifests a want of faith in any attempt that might be made to obtain recruits by volunteering.

Our position is different. We hold that the experience of last winter proves that the Government can obtain large numbers of recruits by offering bounties to volunteers, and we believe that it would be wise policy for the Government to return to that policy whenever another call for troops is rendered necessary. As the war is supposed to be drawing to a close, and as it is fair from probable that the term of service required under the next call will be for three years, it is at least a reasonable presumption, we think, that thousands of men would volunteer if offered a bounty of $300 by the Government in addition to the local bounty they would receive. The fear of a draft, to be enforced in the event of a failure to raise men by volunteering, would of itself induce many to accept the bounties offered. The Dispatch certainly cannot have forgotten the experience of three and four months ago. And if it has not forgotten this experience, we still cannot see the propriety of its recommendation that the Government should resort to a measure of the most extreme harshness and of doubtful efficiency in order to fill up our armies.

We submit that the necessity does not exist for borrowing an odious military policy from the Southern Confederacy; and we submit further that it would be in decidedly better taste for editors of loyal newspapers to aid in exciting among their readers some enthusiasm for the old flag, instead of taking it for granted, as our neighbors of the Dispatch seem to have done, that we have become a nation of cravens, and that love of country is no longer a sentiment of American freemen.

A Word to the Post.

The Post of yesterday contained the following paragraph at its lamb-like innocence:

"We will assure our singularly astute cotemporary, that when we alluded to the subject of drafting and volunteering in Tuesday's paper, we had no thought whatever of the coming Presidential election. The Gazette's comments, however, serve to show that party with it is uppermost in all its editorial labors."

Yes sir! Party with us is uppermost in all our editorial labors—the party of the country, the party that favors the war, the party of the Union. We wish to see that party successful at the next Presidential election, knowing that, if it is not, those who are opposed to it will patch up a miserable compromise with traitors. Such an issue of the war we would regard as the greatest calamity that could befall our country and the world. To prevent such a dire consummation, we are opposed to the adoption by the present Administration of any measure that will tend to defeat it at the polls next November. A draft, without communation would have this tendency, and the Post is not so blind as not to see it.

Jottings.

The sick and wounded have all been removed from the White House.——The Scotia brought a large amount of gold for parties in New York. It was sent out from London for speculation.——The 71st Pa. regiment has been mustered out of service; its time having expired.——Petersburg is twenty-two miles from Richmond by rail, and ten miles from James river at City Point. It is on the south bank of the Appomattox.——Fort Darling is about seven miles from Richmond.——The rebel General JONES, killed in HUNTER's fight for the possession of Staunton, was a Virginian, and a graduate of West Point.——Solicitor WHITING has decided that the owner of a drafted slave cannot have him exempted from service by the payment of $300, unless the slave desires to be so exempted.——The Spanish Government has disapproved the conduct of Admiral PIZZON in seizing the Chincha Islands. The European press generally condemned this act as one of manifest robbery.

DEDICATION OF THE SITE FOR THE BATTLE MONUMENT AT WEST POINT.—This ceremony took place on Wednesday. A large assemblage was in attendance. The only speech delivered was the dedicatory address by General MCCLELLAN. General ROBERT ANDERSON acted as Marshal. Gen. KILPATRICK and General MEAGHER were present; also Governor SEYMOUR. General SCOTT and Major General DIX were expected to be present, but the former was unable to leave his hotel from illness. The latter from some cause which did not transpire was unable to attend.

EX GOVERNOR WRIGHT, of Indiana, in a speech delivered at the LINCOLN and JOHNSON Ratification Meeting held at the Cooper Institute, New York, on Wednesday night, thus referred to our candidate for the Vice Presidency:

"I have known Governor JOHNSON intimately for twenty-one years. I served with him in the Twenty-eighth Congress. If I were to select a man of Roman, iron will, and of unbending integrity, I know of no man in the whole length and breadth of the land that has had but one policy, and has been animated with but one desire, and that is, love of country."

"The Democracy, though slighted and even insulted, have given not less than one-third of the entire proceeds of the Fair, which, considering the country, and its political complexion, is more than the shoddy party gave."—Post.

What are we to understand by this? That the Democracy constitutes "one-third" of the voters of the country? It means this or it means nothing. If the former, what is the use of going through the motion of nominating a Presidential candidate at Chicago? Room in our columns for explanation.

A NEW FEATURE OF THE GAZETTE.—We have completed arrangements for the daily receipt of an authentic report of the New York Money and Stock Market, down to the latest afternoon sales. This new feature will be incorporated with our morning commercial and financial report, a department of our paper which we have always taken especial pains to make as complete as the wants of our business community require.

The Campaign.

The New York Tribune thus concludes an article devoted to the consideration of GRANT's crossing of the James:

"South of the James River the campaign assumes, of course, a totally new aspect. Even were Gen. GRANT to cross the main body of his army at Fort Powhatan, as Mr. Stanton's dispatch asserts, the immediate result of its appearance would be the occupation of the Petersburg Railroad, to which Gen. Butler's lines are now so near that there could scarcely be much opposition to a serious effort by a great army to debouch from them and sit down across the railway. It is equally manifest that the line of the Danville Railroad must speedily be severed, whether by Sheridan's cavalry crossing the James far to the west and reaching the Appomattox bridge in its circuit, or by the extension of Gen. Grant's lines of investment on the south of Richmond; and what with the work of Sheridan north of the James, and of Hunter in the valley, there will then remain no avenue of supply to the Rebel capital, or to the army which defends it.

"If there be any apprehension of a movement upon Washington, now left uncovered, it is sufficient to say that Lee has no means of taking an army north of the Rappahannock. The Fredericksburg and Virginia Central Railroads are destroyed. The country between the James and the Rapidan is a desert, and the Shenandoah Valley not less thoroughly stripped by the passage of the armies. Lee could only advance in force upon Washington by loading supplies in wagons, and he has neither the wagons, nor the horses, nor the forage to feed the horses, for such an enterprise. As matters stand we regard any serious demonstration upon Washington as utterly impracticable. Lee has all and more than all he can attend to in the neighborhood of Richmond."

Washington and Lincoln.

In the course of his speech at the New York Ratification Meeting on Wednesday evening, Hon. HENRY J. RAYMOND related the following incident:

After this war had been going on about a year, you all remember that the hearts of a great many people waxed faint at the prospect before them. Mr. Lincoln had not shown, then as fully as he has done since his thorough adaptation to the crisis upon which his lot was cast. I happened to be in Washington at the time, and heard a remark made by one of the most distinguished members of the government (I don't feel at liberty to call his name) in a private circle, at which the general tone of remark was in disparagement of the President. The gentleman listened to the whole discourse, and then said: 'Well, gentlemen, I beg to make a remark to which I suppose you will not assent. I suppose,' said he, 'that you all believe that Washington was raised up by a special Providence to carry our country through the war for our independence.' They all said, 'Yes, they had no doubt of it.' Said he, 'Well, I have made it my business to study the character of Abraham Lincoln. I have done it thoroughly; I believe I appreciate it; I think I understand his weaknesses and his strength; I believe that I know every element that enters into his management of public questions, and I tell you to-day, as the result of that study, what you will not now believe, but which you will believe one year from to-day, and what the great body of the people will believe before his first term is over, that Abraham Lincoln was as truly raised up to carry this country safely through the perils of this rebellion as Washington was to carry us through our revolution;' [applause] and I believe that events will justify that sagacious and just remark.

Cotton.

We have already published some statistics concerning cotton, which go to show that the supply of this commodity for the English market has rapidly increased during the past year. Brazil, Egypt, East India and China contribute mainly to this supply. As a consequence, we hear that, with the increasing supply of cotton in England, the distress among the operatives in the manufacturing districts is gradually diminishing. On the other hand, supplies of cotton on this side of the Atlantic are rapidly dwindling away. The New York Shipping and Commercial List thus speaks of the prospect:

"The failure of the military expedition in the Red River country—one of the most prolific sources of supply in the South—the repeal of the trade licences in General Washburne's department, the rapid rise in gold, and the steady advance in the English markets, have combined to carry prices up to an altitude hitherto unattained, and with current rates of exchange favoring shipments, the prospect of manufacturers is anything but encouraging. The stocks in the hands of consumers are used up closer than usual; and as the chief reliance of manufacturers is now upon the decreasing receipts from New Orleans and Memphis, and the precarious supplies afforded by blockade runners, a further advance in prices would seem to be inevitable, unless there should be considerable abatement in rates of gold and exchange, of which there is, apparently, no immediate prospect."

A Smart Lie Nailed.

The first resolution in any Copperhead platform ought to be as follows:

Resolved, That a lie, well stuck to, is as good as the truth.

The Copperheads never tire of repeating the stale and oft contradicted lie that McDowell's corps of 40,000 men was withheld from McClellan," and that this caused the failure of his Peninsula campaign. Now, this is a lie. Those who tell it know it to be a lie. They tell it because it is a lie, and on the principle that a lie, well stuck to, is as good as the truth.

McDowell's corps was made up about equally of three divisions, under Franklin, McCall, and King. Franklin, with one-third this force, joined McClellan at West Point, prior to the battle of Williamsburg, and McCall's third joined him prior to the seven days' fight, in which they took a conspicuous part. The force withheld, therefore, was not McDowell's corps of 40,000 men, but King's division of some 12,000.

They were withheld because Gen. McClellan, before going to the Peninsula, had given his opinion in writing to the President that he should retain 40,000 men for the defense of Washington. The 12,000 thus retained, with the 18,000 left by McClellan at Washington, still left the capital defended by 10,000 less troops than McClellan had certified to be necessary. These facts all appear by a careful analysis of McClellan's own report, which is one of the very few particulars in which that report is reliable.—Chicago Tribune.

Eloquence of Andrew Johnson.

The following is one of the most truly eloquent passages ever spoken. It is from a speech delivered by ANDREW JOHNSON in April last to a mass meeting of the people of Knoxville and vicinity:

My countrymen! my heart yearns toward you; I love you; I am one of you. I have climbed yonder mountains that you have climbed, yonder mountains rock-ribbed and glowing in sun-shine, in whose gorges, in whose caverns, your sons, hunted like wild beasts, have fallen to rise no more. I do not speak of these things to draw your tears! It is not the time for tears, but for blows. I speak of them that I may fire your heart with holy indignation, and nerve your arms, for unconquerable fight. And I speak of them because the mountains seem to talk to me. My home is among the mountains, and though it is not far away, I cannot go to it. It is the place where I met her, and loved her, and married her who is the mother of my children. Do I not love the mountains, then? And if liberty is to aspire, if freedom is to be destroyed, if my country, in all its length and breadth, is to tremble beneath the oppressor's tread, let the flag, the dear old flag, the last flag be planted on yon rocky heights, and upon it let there be this inscription: "Here is the end of all that is dear to the heart and sacred to the memory of man."

President Lincoln's Tribute to Owen Lovejoy.

The Princeton Republican, (Ill.), for the current week, is nearly filled with the report of the proceedings and speeches of the recent meeting in that town to inaugurate an Owen Lovejoy Monument Association. Among the numerous letters read on the occasion was the following from the President:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, May 30, 1854.

Hon. John H. Bryant:

MY DEAR SIR: Yours of the 14th inst. enclosing a card of invitation to a preliminary meeting contemplating the erection of a monument to the memory of Hon. Owen Lovejoy, was duly received. As you anticipate, it will be out of my power to attend. Many of you have known Mr. Lovejoy longer than I have, and are better able than I to do his memory justice. My personal acquaintance with him commenced only about ten years ago, since when it has been quite intimate; and every step in it has been one of increasing respect and esteem, ending, with his life, in no less than affection on my part. It can be truly said of him that while he was personally ambitious, he bravely endured the obscurity which the unpopularity of his principles imposed, and never accepted official honors, until those honors were ready to admit his principles with him. Throughout my heavy and perplexing responsibilities here, to the day of his death, it would scarcely wrong any other to say, he was my most generous friend. Let him have the marble monument, along with the well-assured and more enduring one in the hearts of those who love liberty unselfishly for all men.

Yours truly,
A. LINCOLN.

Popular Economy During the War.

The following is an extract from a letter from Richard Cobden, dated Midhurst, Sussex, April 4, 1864:

"We are looking anxiously for the news from your side of the next campaign. For myself, I have never considered that the result of your terrible civil war was to be decided by fighting alone. It is the disorganization of the South, through the operation of the war on the African race, that I have always regarded as the real source of the weakness and danger of the Confederates. But for this cause to have full effect requires time.

"During that time I fear you will be incurring an enormous expenditure, and accumulating a terrible debt. This is not all; I am afraid, whilst the Government is necessarily spending vast sums, your citizens are individually giving way to extravagant private habits. This is lighting the candle at both ends. If persevered in it will lead you to terrible financial difficulties. The only way in which you can continue to furnish extraordinary supplies to the Government is by the rigid practice of economy on the part of individuals. Let every patriot preach this truth to the people.

"I have full faith in the ultimate triumph of your cause, because it is the cause of justice, civilization, and humanity.

R. COBDEN."

A GENERAL WITH AN IDEA.—When Gen. GRANT first came to Washington, an old friend who happened to meet him there, exclaimed, "Well, General, so you are going to take Richmond?" Grant replied, briefly, but significantly, "I'll try to whip Lee." General Grant has shown from the beginning that he understood the true value—or relative unimportance—of Richmond. His answer involved the alternative that if Lee's army were routed Richmond must fall of course, and of itself, and every movement of the present campaign has been made with that result in view.

TO RETAIL GROCERS OF PITTSBURGH.

FRENCH COFFEE.

The advertisers are manufacturing wholesale the celebrated FRENCH COFFEE, made, as in Paris, from pure coffee and coffee malt in a peculiar manner. It has no drugs to flavor or color: it does not affect the nervous system, and is extremely nourishing and healthy: invalids derive great benefit from its use; it has all the aroma and fragrance of the Java: since its introduction into the United States, a few months ago, it has given universal satisfaction, and is to be sold by every prominent Grocer in all the large cities. We are desirous that the Grocers of Pittsburgh should try this celebrated Coffee. Once they try it they will never cease it.

It is no common substitute. We have challenged all the coffee manufacturers in the United States to 1,000 boxes (the proceeds to be given to hospitals) that the French Coffee is superior to all others.

It is pure, (nutritious and healthy)

It has all the aroma and taste of pure Java;

It is about on-third the price.

The FRENCH COFFEE does not require coffee to be mixed with it in any way. Sufficient pure coffee is mixed in its manufacture. Its fine qualities and extreme economy will make it the beverage of families on being known. The testimonials of its good qualities are innumerable. We give a few only:

From the Baltimore American, Clipper and Gazette — "We have used the justly celebrated French Coffee, and in justice to the manufacturer, we say it is the best coffee we ever used."

From Grocers in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, St. Louis and Chicago — "Our customers are much pleased with your French Coffee. It will certainly supersede all other coffee when known, and we desire an additional supply."

From Hospitals in Baltimore and Washington — "We have used your French Coffee in our hospitals, and we are pleased to inform you that it gives great satisfaction; in fact since its introduction, our patients will drink nothing else."

The manufacture of the FRENCH COFFEE is known but to ourselves. Any one can have it analyzed; its preparation is a wonderful discovery. The Grocers of Pittsburgh are respectfully requested to make a trial of it.

TESTIMONIALS

IN FAVOR OF THE

GROVER & BAKER'S

Celebrated Premium

SEWING MACHINES.

"I take pleasure in recommending it as every way reliable."
Rev. Dr. LEAVITT,
Editor New York Independent.

"I have used Grover & Baker for two years. Garments have been worn out without the giving of a stitch."
Rev. GEO. WHIPPLE, N. Y.

"We are using Grover & Baker's Sewing Machine, and with pleasure testify to its b autiful and elastic sewing, and its simplicity."
GEORGE F. MORRIS,
Editor Home Journal.

"After trying several good machines, I prefer the Grover & Baker, and feel competent to recommend it for every variety of family sewing."
E. P. SPOONER,
Editor Brooklyn Star.

"We know of none more deserving of public confidence and patronage than the Grover & Baker."
Philadelphia Press.

"For family purposes the Grover & Baker Sewing Machine is infinitely superior to any other in use."
Philadelphia Press.

"The Grover & Baker Machine runs with no more noise than the purr of a gratified kitten. There is no complicated machinery in it to get out of order."
Philadelphia Times.

"The Grover & Baker Machines are vastly superior to all others in use. It is conceded by all who have applied a practical test, that the famous Grover & Baker Stitch is infinitely the most durable."
Philadelphia Bulletin.

"After having tried all the principal Sewing Machines, we must accord to Grover & Baker the premium since."
Rev. Dr. STRICKLAND,
Editor N. Y. Christian Advocate and Journal.

"We have tested the Grover & Baker Sewing Machines in our house, and strongly recommend them to our subscribers."
Godey's Lady's Book.

"There is no branch or system of Sewing known to science, either practical or ornamental, to which the Grover &
