RYE—Holds the demand continues very high and the few parcels coming in sell and sell very local ly at the full quotations. Is firm and prices are well sustained. We note small sales from store at $12, $13 and $14 per bushel Family per bbl, according to quality. The stock on hand in this market is comparatively light.

MILLFEED—Is coming in more freely, but the demand appears to be fully equal to the supply Sales off car common Mill ffuns at $2,50 per cwt, and fine ones within the week ight by a dissatisfied—at $2,75. Bran may be quoted at $1,40@1,45, and Shorts at $1 80

Pittsburgh Petroleum Market.

JULY 19—The demand for Crude continues light and while the market may be quoted a shade firmer, owing to the favorable advices from New York, prices remain substantially as last quoted Some few small lots, amounting in the aggregate to about 3-0 bbls changed hands at 43, the return ended and 48¾, bbls for cold—. Refined is decidedly firmer but as there have been no sales it is impossible to give quotations. The stock on hand of both Crude and Refined is light and with little there is, is in the hands of speculators, principally, as those of our refiners who have not pounded positions are sold to up, and some of them for thirty days ahead There is consequently no inquiry for Petroleum and, with a very light shipping, the market may be quoted very firm at up. Naptha is dull and nominal at per Wines rate.

The receipts by the Allegheny river during the past sixty four hours ending this evening are as follows.

Naptha is dull and nominal at 42, for Refined.

The Weather and the Crops.

ILLINOIS.

The Woodstock Sentinel of July 14th says that the prospect of the crop is not good in Woodstock. Nearly two thirds of the potatoes are killed and still my local farmers look for a full crop. Some are also replanting. The wheat is small and will not average more than one-third the usual quantity. The oats have burnt away with the wind that has arrived, the chinch bugs are destroying. Farmers think that they would gladly take the price for the prospect of wheat. Oats are better Corn looks well around Woodstock and the south part of the county, but in the north and east is far below the average The crop of tame hay amounts to scarcely nothing; a single big crop, however A number of farmers are selling their hay for four dollars now Some are also rowing Timothy seed Broadcast.

The Sycamore Herald, this week says that, though in some parts of this county it will be impossible to make a full crop of corn, the prospect on the whole is encouraging. We have not seen for years the whole corn field in the best growing condition it is now in. The warm weather has just suited it, and the rains have come in time, coming to the hour a wilting and drooping. The corn was also quite backward and on account of the cooler June it looked and does look yet very unfavorable for a stand, owing to the five cut worms. Where but the late bountiful and timely rains have brought it along it is now fairly ahead, look promising in that it is clean. It matters little how small it may be on the 1st of July, provided the ground is in good order and the weather is after wards favorable. Before the month ends "early June corn" is good corn crop." Wheat will be better than we thought, as the heads are well filled. No worst that we have heard of. It will not, we think, fall much short of half a crop.

Boston Dry Goods Market.

The Boston Journal of the 18th says: Prices of cotton goods rest pretty much as before and the market is quiet, with a steady demand for some goods, on sale lots, have been sold the past few days at somewhat lower prices in consequence of a very light money market; but the supply of goods for jobbing or manufacturing is quite small. Heavy sheetings and shirtings and brown drills have advanced full 1-4@1-2c, and medium and light grades remain very firm, price of which, shipping, duck, threads quite firm, and the sales have been confined to small lots. Prints are in active demand, and sold up at 42 ; fancy prints 45@50c; thin fabrics are in demand and the Glasgow and Lancaster fabrics are selling at 45@50c per yard Delaines are selling at 47½@50c. In fair demand Goods are now generally sold short of yards. There is not a rush of workers on hand and prices of desirable goods are advancing. The demand is of a liberal character, and many of our manufacturers are troubled by the drought which causes a scarcity of water to run their mills. Fancy cassimeres, sackings, flannels, beavers and repellants are of quick sale.

The Markets and the Currency.

The occurrence of the past few days in the produce and money markets show pretty conclusively how completely we may rely, after all, on the operations of the laws of trade to protect the public against the machinations of the speculators. For many weeks back almost all the necessaries of life have been bought up in enormous quantities, and "held for a rise," by a number of large operators. Prices did rise accordingly, and the consumers, and especially the poor, who have to make their purchases from day to day, suffered accordingly. As is usual after a period of great speculation, there followed what is termed a tightness in the market—that is, difficulty in borrowing money at all, or at any but high rates of interest The banks, bound themselves obliged to contract their loans partly as a measure of self defence, and partly of necessity The enormous flow in point of fact called for a greater quantity of currency to do the work of exchange, and the failure of the speculators naturally lead great curtailment in dealing with them. Between the price of things double see, it of course needed more than the quantity of the circulating medium for the quantity required depends partly upon the quantity of the articles, or, in other words, the activity of trade. Hence the demand for more money than before, to enable people to carry on their business. The speculators in this case contributed on having their profits added from supplied by the Treasury in the shape of a fresh issue of legal tenders. But this relief cannot come in other words, it has of course been left to take their course It is hoped to be able to borrow in order to enable them to continue to hold, and they relied on a fresh expansion of the currency to carry the prices up to the point which they desired to sell they have been disappointed in both cases, and have been forced to get out of it at the old days of specie payments. Like all speculators, they have suffered themselves with more goods than they were able to pay for and finding it impossible to borrow in order to meet their engagements, there is nothing left but to sell out Once the price begins, a panic of course sets in, and prices fall with a daily access sing rapidity, and solely because the necessities of the Government compel him. The "light money market," is the check provided by the laws of trade for the prevention and punishment of the shaving operations of the banks. At intervals these have been accustomed to call off, and thus put a stop to their natural level—the level fixed by the real supply, and real demand, and real prospects of supply

In ordinary times, when the volume of the circulating medium can neither be increased nor diminished by the action of the Government, these results can submit to the consequences of their mismanagement with the best grace in the world. But when they come to commence the practice of helping them out of their difficulties, it would commence a stupendous undertaking. A fresh batch of greenbacks would, of course, relieve the stringency in the money market, but it would also give a fresh impetus to speculation. When one issue has been made, everybody is inclined to believe there will be an other and another, and that after such there will be a fresh rise in prices. So everybody buys and holds for a rise, until the market again "busts," and so on to an infinite series—a loss required "to get the rise!" too much greater each time, owing to the steady diminution in the value of the paper

It may as we have said, be necessary for Mr Fessenden to make some additional issue to the volume of the currency, but if, at all, it should be done in such a manner as to hope that any further addition will ever be made to it by the Government, the forcing everybody to settle his calculations upon a steady specie basis, and solely with reference to the ordinary course of trade. This will compel an examination of the means of the people—if Times.

Chicago Market—Wheat Report.

JULY 18—The wheat market to-day was again firmer, and the market advanced fully per bush I under a good demand. No 1 spring sold at an advance from $2,23 3,25, and from $2,14@2,15½ for No 2 spring, closing firm at the outside figures. The new crop red winter wheat is coming in quite freely, but there is little or no demand for it, and no sales can barely obtain the price of spring wheat of a corresponding grade. No 1 red sold at $2,21@2 25, and No 2 at $2,16.

Holders of flour were firmer in their views, and a fair demand for an advance of 10@15c per barrel, but the demand was not active, and no sales were reported. Spring wheat flour is in good demand and steady at $6 50@7 50 per bbl, with sales of the former at $7,00@7 50, and of the latter at $6,75@7,00 Coarse corn meal was active and quietly nominal.

Oats were firm and steady, with a fair demand at 70@72c for No 1, and 68@69c for No 2 spring at the outside figure.

Rye was more active at $1 06 for No 1 in store. Barley was neglected

Hay was more in better request and steady at $1,65@1,85 according to quality at the price

There was a better feeling in the provision market, and sales of 90,000 lbs of mess pork to 5 p. Washington, D. C., confirmed "Proposals for Flour." Captain and C. S. V. Washington, D. C., July 14, 1864. 1y15:d1
