NATIONAL UNION NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT:
ABRAHAM LINCOLN, of Illinois.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT:
ANDREW JOHNSON, of Tennessee.

SPECIAL ELECTION, TUESDAY, AUG. 2, 1864.

SHALL SOLDIERS VOTE?

On our fourth page this morning will be found the telegraphic dispatches received on Saturday afternoon, including the interesting particulars of Gen. Rousseau's raid upon the rebel communications with Atlanta.

The extreme length of Governor Johnson's letter, accepting the nomination for the Vice Presidency, prevents us from giving our usual variety on this page. The space occupied by it could not, however, be better filled. Every word of that letter has the ring of the true metal, and proves abundantly, if any proof were necessary, that the Union party made no mistake in placing its author on the ticket with Honest Old Abe.

THE GAZETTE.

We print the Gazette, to-day, upon our new four cylinder press; and the occasion seems a fit one for indulging in such reminiscences, of the past as compared with the present, as are suggested by the rapid progress made in newspaper printing within the compass of a few years.

When the Gazette was first started, it was printed upon a small Franklin press, such as the old printers about town may remember to have seen. From the wooden press to the iron one, larger in size and easier worked, marked a decided progress in newspaper printing; but the demand for reading matter was too limited to stimulate invention, and the iron hand press remained for a long time the only reliance of newspaper men. When the Gazette was first commenced as a daily paper, (and it was the first in Western Pennsylvania if not in the Mississippi Valley) now nearly thirty years ago, it was printed on a hand press, and continued to be printed in that way until the great fire of 1845. The great demand for the paper containing the account of that fire, and the inability to print papers fast enough on a hand press to meet that demand, suggested to D. N. White, Esq., its then editor and proprietor, the necessity of obtaining a steam press.

When, accordingly, after the fire, he removed the Gazette office to Third street, adjoining the old Postoffice, he obtained a one cylinder Taylor press. This was the first steam press used in this city in issuing a daily paper; and many a time did the Journal of that day indulge in, at the Gazette, for wasting capital in such a silly adventure! It was regarded as unnecessary, unremunerative, and altogether foolish. It was not very long, however, before the Journal swallowed its own words, and contented itself with following in the wake of the paper it had sneered at, by sinking capital in a single cylinder press of its own.

The Gazette continued to be printed for several years upon its single cylinder press, until about the time it purchased the Times Press; and then, in consequence of the steadily increasing circulation, a double cylinder had to be obtained, upon which it has, until now, been printed. Our circulation, however, has for some time been beyond the capacity of a double cylinder press, and to-day we issue it upon a four cylinder press, which can print 10,000 sheets an hour. We shall now be able to supply our customers in season; and henceforth we hope to be equal to all demands upon us.

The change from the old Franklin press, which might work a hundred sheets an hour, to the four cylinder press, with its ten thousand sheets an hour, marks the progress of less than a century; while that from the iron hand press of 1845, upon which a good workman might print 250 sheets an hour, to the present rapid style of printing, shows the progress of less than a quarter of a century. But only comparatively: for the four-cylinder press, huge and powerful as it is, is but a pigmy beside other presses which can double or quadruple its capacity.

The Gazette was the first paper printed west of the Alleghany mountains; it was the first daily paper in the city, and we believe the first in the western country; it has ever been first in keeping up with the advancement of the times, and it hopes to remain in the foremost rank in enterprise and energy, and to occupy the first place in the hearts of its many and ever increasing patrons. No expense has been spared in trying to make it not only a desirable but an indispensable newspaper to the public. With a full and competent corps of reporters, and fuller telegraphic reports than any other paper in the city, its conductors hope to be able to make it equal, under all circumstances to the demands of the times, to maintain its proud pre-eminence as the outspoken defender of Right, Truth, Justice and Freedom to all; and to earn the plaudits of the good and the true by meeting faithfully the high responsibilities which attach to an untrammeled press.

Gen. Meigs, to whom the Secretary of War assigned the duty of selecting a proper place in which to inter the bodies of those who fell in the defence of Washington during the late rebel invasion, has selected an acre of ground on the battle field, about six hundred yards to the right of Fort Stevens, and about fifty yards from the Seventh street road, in the immediate vicinity where the severest fighting took place. The duty of disinterring and removing the bodies has been intrusted to Capt. J. M. Moore, Assistant Quartermaster, who has already properly interred all those who fell near Fort Stevens. The ground has been laid off in a square, and will be provided with a handsome railing fence. The bodies are being interred in a circle, in the centre of which it is the intention of the authorities to erect a monument bearing a suitable inscription. Each grave will be provided with a neat head board, bearing the name, rank, company and regiment of its occupant.

Judge Stephen Vail, of Morris, died on Tuesday, at the age of 84 years. He was the oldest machinist in New Jersey, and one of the most successful in the country. He built the engines of the Savannah, the first steamship that ever crossed the Atlantic, and was the assistant of Prof. Morse in bringing the telegraph to perfection.

The National Union Executive Committee will meet at Congress Hall, Saratoga Springs, on Thursday, 28th inst., at 12 o'clock noon.

Hon. Andrew Johnson's Letter of Acceptance.

The following is the letter of Hon. Andrew Johnson accepting the nomination of the National Union Convention for Vice President of the United States:

Nashville, Tenn., July 2, 1864—Hon. Wm. Dennison, Chairman, and others, Committee of the National Union Convention—Gentlemen: Your communication of the 9th ult., informing me of my nomination for the Vice Presidency of the United States, by the National Union Convention, held at Baltimore, and enclosing a copy of the resolutions adopted by that body, was not received until the 26th ult.

A reply on my part had been previously made to the action of the Convention in presenting my name, in a speech delivered in this city, on the evening succeeding the day of the adjournment of the Convention, in which I indicated my acceptance of the distinguished honor conferred by that body, and declined the grounds upon which that acceptance was based, substantially saying what I now have to say. From the comments made upon that speech by the various presses of the country to which my attention has been directed, I considered it to be regarded as a full accept ance.

In view, however, of the desire expressed in your communication, I will more fully allude to a few points that have heretofore been presented. My opinion on the leading questions at present agitating and disturbing the public mind, and especially in reference to the rebellion now being waged against the government and authority of the United States, I presume, are generally understood. Before the Southern people assumed a belligerent attitude (and frequently since) I took ground in their conventions, and in my place in the Senate I denounced it as treason, worthy the punishment of death, and warned the government and the people of the impending danger. But my voice was not heard or my counsel heeded until it was too late to avert the storm. It still continued to gather over us without molestation from the authorities at Washington, until at length it broke with all its fury upon the country. And now, if we would save the government from being overwhelmed by it, we must meet it in the true spirit of patriotism, and bring traitors to the punishment due their crime, and by force of arms crush out and subdue the last vestige of rebel authority in every State. I felt then as now that the destruction of the government was deliberately determined upon by wicked and designing conspirators, whose lives and fortunes were pledged to carry it out, and that no compromise, short of an unconditional recognition of the independence of the southern States, could have been or could now be proposed which they would accept. The clamor for "southern rights" as the rebel journals were pleased to designate their rallying cry, was not to secure their assumed rights in the Union and under the Constitution, but to disrupt the government and establish an independent organization based upon slavery, which they could at all times control.

The separation of the government has for years been the cherished purpose of the southern leaders. In 1851, in 1852, by the stern, patriotic heroism of Andrew Jackson, they were quietly acquiesced, only to mature their diabolical schemes, and await the recurrence of a more favorable opportunity to execute them. Then the pretext was the tariff, and Jackson, after following their secret schemes of nullification and disunion, with prophetic perspicuity, warned the country against the renewal of their efforts to dismember the government.

In a letter dated May 1, 1833, to the Hon. A. J. Crawford, after denouncing the nullifiers insincerity of the southern nullifiers, he said:

"Therefore the tariff was only a pretext, and disunion and a southern confederacy the real object. The next pretext will be the negro, or slavery question."

Time has fully verified this prediction, and we have now not only "the negro or slavery question," as the pretext, but the real cause of the rebellion, and both must go down together. It is vain to attempt to reconstruct the Union with the distracting element of slavery in it. Experience has demonstrated its incompatibility with free and republican governments, and it would be unwise and unjust longer to continue it as one of the institutions of the country. While it remained subordinate to the Constitution and laws of the United States, I yielded to it my support, but when it became rebellious and attempted to rise above the government, and control its action, I threw my humble influence against it.

The authority of the government is supreme, and will admit of no rivalry. No institution can rise above it, whether it be slavery or any other organized power. In our happy form of government all must be subordinate to the will of the people, when reflected through the Constitution and laws made thereto—State or Federal. This great principle lies at the foundation of every government, and cannot be disregarded without the destruction of the government itself. In the support and preservation of these principles we can never reach a point of success; and by rigorously adhering to them results will and must follow. Upon this great fundamental truth, the end will be the preservation of the Union and the overthrow of an institution which has made war upon and attempted the destruction of the government itself.

The mode by which this great change—the emancipation of the slave—can be effected, is properly found in the power to amend the Constitution of the United States. This plan is effectual, and of no doubtful authority, and while it does not contravene the timely exercise of the war power by the President in his Emancipation Proclamation, it comes stamped with the authority of the people themselves, acting in accordance with the written rule of the supreme law of the land, and must, therefore, give more general satisfaction and quietude to the distracted public mind.

By recurring to the principles contained in the resolutions so unanimously adopted by the Convention, I find that they substantially accord with my public acts and opinions heretofore made known and expressed, and are, therefore, most cordially endorsed and approved; and the nomination, having been conferred without any solicitation on my part, it is with the greater pleasure accepted.

In accepting the nomination I might here cease, but I cannot forego the opportunity of saying to my old friends of the Democratic party proper, with whom I have so long and pleasantly been associated, that the hour has now come when that great party can justly vindicate its devotion to true democratic policy and measures of expediency. The war is a war of great principles. It involves the supremacy and life of the government itself. If the rebellion triumphs free government, north and south, falls. If, on the other hand, the government is successful, as I do not doubt, its destiny is fixed, its basis permanent and enduring, and its career of honor and glory just begun. In a great contest like this for the existence of free government the path of duty is patriotism and principle. Minor considerations and questions of administrative policy should give way to the higher duty of first preserving the government, and then there will be time enough to wrangle over the men and measures pertaining to its administration.

This is not the hour for strife and division among ourselves. Such differences of opinion only encourage the enemy, prolong the war, and waste the country. Unity of action and concentration of power should be our watchword and rallying cry. This accomplished, the time will rapidly approach when their armies in the field—the great power of the rebellion—will be broken and crushed by one gallant officers and brave soldiers, and ere long they will return to their homes and firesides to assume again the avocations of peace, with the proud consciousness that they have aided in the noble work of re-establishing upon a surer and more permanent basis the great temple of American freedom.

I am, gentlemen, with sentiments of high regard, yours truly, Andrew Johnson.

The correspondent of the New York Herald with the Army of the Potomac assigns the following as the reason why Gen. Baldy Smith was relieved of his command: "The removal was relieved of his command: "The removal of Gen. Baldy Smith from the command of the 18th army corps has caused considerable speculation here among army officers, since it became known and is understood to be the handwriting on the wall presaging the retirement of all who subordinate the public good to selfish schemes for personal aggrandizement. Gen. Smith has long been notorious for a restless ambition that was continually overleaping itself. His appetite for promotion was only whetted by his advancement to the command of a corps. Since then he has been dissatisfied with everything and everybody to a degree that made his longer retention of so important a command incompatible with the interests of the service. General Martindale is left in temporary command of the corps.

☞ LYON'S KATHAIRON.

Kathairon is from the Greek word "Kathro," or "Kathairo," signifying to cleanse, rejuvenate and restore. This article is what its name signifies. For preserving, restoring and beautifying the human hair it is the most remarkable preparation in the world. It is again owned and put up by the original proprietor, and is now made with the same care, skill and attention which gave it a sale of over one million bottles per annum.

It is a most delightful Hair Dressing.
It eradicates scurf and dandruff.
It keeps the head cool and clean.
It makes the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents the hair falling off and turning gray.
It restores hair upon bald heads.

Any lady or gentleman who values a beautiful head of hair should use Lyon's Kathairon. It is known and used throughout the civilized world. Sold by all respectable dealers.

MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.

The parties in St. Louis and Cincinnati, who have been counterfeiting the Mustang Liniment and perverting of proprietorship, have been thoroughly stopped by the Courts. To guard against further imposition, I have procured from the United States Treasury a private label and steel-plate revenue stamp, which is placed over the cork of each bottle. Each stamp bears the fac-simile of my signature, and without which the article is a counterfeit, dangerous and worthless imitation. Examine carefully, and see that you get the genuine. Sold by druggists everywhere. Principal depot, 48 Park row, New York. The Mustang Liniment is the only reliable remedy ever known for man or beast. Every family should have a bottle of it in the house. It is the best liniment in the habitable globe that does not contain an evidence of its wonderful merits. It is the best liniment in the world. With the present improved ingredients, its effects upon man and beast are perfectly remarkable. Sores are healed, pains relieved, lives saved, valuable animals made useful, and untold illnesses cured. For contractions, strains, rheumatism, swellings, bites, scratches, galls, stiffness, sprains, colds, &c., it is a Sovereign Remedy that should never be dispensed with. It should be in every family. Sold by all Druggists.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

LORING'S NEW BOOK.

Margaret and Her Bridesmaids,

BY THE AUTHOR OF

"The Queen of the County."

One handsome 12 mo. volume.

PRICE.....$1.75.

The London Athenæum says:

"We may save ourselves the trouble of giving any lengthened review of this work, for we recommend all who are in search of a fascinating novel, to read it for themselves. They will find it well worth their while. The story is very interesting. It is the history of four school fellows. Margaret, the heroine, is of course a woman in the highest state of perfection. But Letty—the little, wilful wife, brave, fascinating Letty—is the gem of the book, and as far as our experience in novel-reading goes is an entirely original character—a creation—and a very charming one."

The London Observer says:

"There is a great deal in a name, and the title of this charming novel suggests a gentle beauty for merely as a fascinating novel, to read it for the sake of the interest it gratifies. Margaret—La Marguerite—is and interest it gratifies. Margaret—La Marguerite—is and deservedly, the pet flower of us all; immortalized by so many poets. The Margaret of this story is beautiful many poets. The Margaret of this story is beautiful sentiments, goodness, affection, and love, glorious qualities, goodness, affection, and love, glorious qualities, those of the tender sex to
