Hood, knowing that, if he lost that road, he lost evcrything, for by no other route could be obin supplies, had previously posted his army for its defense. The result is given above. His mortification must be great, but that of

JEFF. Davis must be tenfold greater.
With the characteristic impatience of our pie, the question is already asked-What will SHERMAN do next? Think a little, reader, before you ask that question often. The army of General Burranas needs rest. It has been continually at work, marching and fighting, since the 5th day of May, just four mihs, and a glorious record it has made for itself. There is no brighter chapter in the history of any war of any age. From Chattaneoga to Atlanta! The world knows no such soldiering walor as that which those two words recall. Let the heroes rest. The nation owes them that and more. They have taken Atlanta! The President has very properly appointed next Sunday to, be observed ethroughout the United States as a day of thanksgiving for The glorious victory achieved by General SHERMAN and his brave army. He has also publicly returned the thanks of the nation to General SHERWAR and his army, and Admiral PARRAGUT and his hearts of eak, for their brilliant achievements at Atlanta and Mobile. Orders have also been issued requiring national salutes to be fired at every arsenal and navy yard in the United States, in honor of the same glorious events.

Lest Mr. Davis should lese his temper, it might be well for the Chicago Convention to hold a special meeting and pags a resolution assuring him that all such things as Ferragant's capture of Mobile Bay and Sherman's possession of Atlanta. The politicians who rule the opposition gravely demanded a dessation of hostilities at the very moment that one of our great armies was marching to violory; they declare the country humbled, weakened, unsble to continue the war at the precise time when our solders are demonstrating their superiority over the eremy in a pitched battle in the copn field. They see the nation's bitter enemy for a truce, and their humble plear resches Richmond on the same day with the news that the of the two great rebeli armies has been defeated and is figing, and one of the two great enems for the two great rebeli manes have been defeated and is figing, and one of the two great enems for a truce, and their humble plear resches Richmond on the same day with the news that the of the two great rebeli armies has been defeated and is figing, and one of the two great entires of rebelium has fallen been defeated and is figing, and one of the two great entire of rebelium has fallen been defeated and is figing, and one of the two great entire of rebelium has TO THE ENROLLED MEN OF TO THE ENROLLED MEN of the property of the pro ha coming draft.
