The Glorious News from Maine.

The McClellan organ at Washington, the National Intelligencer, referring to the Maine election, on Monday, says:

Last year the Republican majority in the State was seventeen thousand five hundred. The vote of to day, it is supposed, will considerably diminish this majority.

This was the hope of the McClellanites all over the land. They not only hoped, but expected, to reduce largely the Republican majority, and to profit by it accordingly.

How beautifully they have been disappointed! In 1860 Lincoln's majority was only 1500. Last year we gained on this, and now it will run up to 20,000. How popular McClellan is proving to be!

This is the first election since McClellan's nomination. If he has any popularity it would have been shown here. The State has been thoroughly canvassed, the McClellan party put forward its best men as candidates, and they have had all the possible aid McClellan's name could give them; and yet the party is beaten by the largest majority ever cast in the State!

And this, too, without the soldiers' vote. Had the soldiers voted the majority would have been 30,000 or over.

We well remember what a decisive event the election in Maine was, in 1840. The Whigs carried the State, that year, for the first time, by the trifling majority of three or four hundred; but trifling as the majority was, it indicated the way the current was setting and contributed largely to Harrison's success by inspiriting the Whigs and dispiriting their opponents.

So in the year 1862. At the election two years ago we lost a member of Congress and carried the Governor by only 6,000 majority. This backset was followed by defeat in Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York, the Maine election indicating a reactioning drift in politics which more fully showed itself in the subsequent elections of that year.

The result in Vermont and Maine clearly foreshadows that of the elections to come. New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, in October, and the other States in November, will go as they have gone. The rising tide will not go back until it has reached its flood in the re-election of President Lincoln. Mrs. Partington M'Clellan with all her brooms, cannot sweep it back.

More Help.

We are much pleased to notice that the friends of the Union have nominated Hon. William M. Hiester, for Congress, in Berks county. Mr. Hiester is an old fashioned Democrat, who has enjoyed the confidence of the Democracy in that county for a long time. He was Senator for some years, and afterwards Secretary of the Commonwealth under Gov. Packer; and in all positions he proved himself a high-toned gentleman and thoroughly honest. It is gratifying to find such a representative man standing out against McClellanism and arraying himself upon the side of the country. It shows that the honest Democrats, the loyal men of that party who truly love the Union, cannot be deceived. They want to see the Rebellion put down, and they have to much sense too believe that McClellan and his backers have any corresponding desire.

Mr. Hiester occupies among the people of Berks, pretty much the same position as honest old John Swartz, who ran out J. Glancy Jones. He has their confidence, as that lamented man had, and we fully trust that the county is about to be redeemed, again, from the control of her rebel sympathising politicians.

There is no longer any room for doubt, as to Pennsylvania, when such men as Hiester, Cessna and Brewster come out from the Peace men and rally around the flag of the Union. They represent a very numerous class in the State, and their adhesion to the cause of the country, in this its hour of peril, is one of the most encouraging signs of the times.

What Does it Mean?

What is meant by the resolution of the Chicago Convention providing for a re-assembling of that body between the day of its adjournment and "the fourth day of March next?" Does it mean a re-assembling for the purpose of throwing overboard their candidate, in the event of his proving unmanageable, or is it designed as a threat that the party will resort to revolution if beaten at the polls?

We take the latter to be what is meant. The resolution was offered by that notorious traitor, Wickliffe, of Kentucky, and doubtless had reference to some treasonable scheme held in reserve until after the election.

But, while we take this to be the object of the Convention, we have no fears as to the threat it implies. The noisy peace orators talk about Julius Cesar, Brutus and William Tell, and would have us believe that Mr. Lincoln is to be assassinated, and the Chicago Convention turned into a Committee of Public Safety; but if these braggarts expect to scare the voters of the North out of the exercise of the right of suffrage, or into its exercise according to the dictation of traitors, they were never more mistaken in their lives, and that is saying a good deal. They lack the courage to say what they mean, although they leave it to infer it, and they are equally devoid of the pluck even to attempt, what they would have it suppose they threaten. The white-livered men who sport the white feather may talk about such things, but will never do them. The man who takes sides against his country is too big a coward to fight for anything.

The Popular Opening.

The great demonstration on Saturday evening in Independence Square opened the political campaign for the Union with a widespread enthusiasm and earnestness which we find it impossible to adequately record, but which the people will long remember. Greater manifestations of the popular patriotism are yet to take place, for the canvass in favor of the re-election of Abraham Lincoln promises to exceed all other Presidential campaigns in the unmingled rejoicing of the true and zealous friends of the Union and the Constitution, and the noble war in defence of the national honor and safety. From now till November the great honest heart of the nation will celebrate its continual victory over the foes of the Union.—Phila. Press.

Letter from "Occasional."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10, 1864.

"Believing that the views here expressed are those of the Convention and the people you represent, I accept the nomination." These words are contained in the last paragraph of the letter of acceptance of Major General Geo. B. McClellan. Are they true? That is the question. When we reflect that the man who writes these words was educated at West Point, and claims to be, on that account, one of "the chivalry," and especially a soldier and a gentleman, we may well wonder at an assertion like this. He "believes" that the views he expresses are those of the Convention that nominated him, and, as he does not reject the platform, it is a fair presumption that he approves the resolution of that Convention which demands that "immediate efforts be made for the cessation of hostilities." In other words that he sanctions the monstrous idea of an armistice between the Federal Government and the rebel traitors. But how are these two positions to be reconciled? The Convention practically declares in favor of an armistice. Gen. McClellan declares in favor of continued war for the preservation of the Union; and in view of the fact that the one position defeats and rebukes and destroys the other, he coolly tells us that he believes his opinions expressed in his letter of acceptance are those of the Convention that nominated him! We remember nothing in the interpretations of party politicians so discreditable as this. General McClellan certainly could not have meant to say that the Convention declared in favor of an armistice and for an immediate cessation of hostilities, and yet approved his letter. Can he believe, as he says? If it be so, then the Convention was a fraud, or General McClellan himself has violated the truth. Now mark the difference between McClellan and Lincoln. When the resolutions of the Baltimore Convention were presented to Abraham Lincoln, he said, in a single sentence, "The nomination is gratefully accepted, as the resolutions of the Convention, called the Platform, are heartily approved." No qualification here; no false and dishonest front, but an earnest and emphatic endorsement of the work of the men who had put him before the people for re-election. He heartily approves the Baltimore platform, because in that platform there is not a word nor a sentence that has not been inspired by earnest attachment to the Government, by gratitude for our brave men in the army, by a desire to conclude peace on the basis of the restoration of the Union, by hatred to slavery as the cause of the war, by a determination to maintain the national faith inviolate, and to redeem the public debt, and by an utter ignoring of all heats or parties until the war is happily concluded and the Republic vindicated. But it would seem that Gen. McClellan does his platform, and yet, while fearing it, and doubting it, and while writing a letter which he desires the people to understand as in opposition to it, he yet coolly says in his letter of acceptance that he believes the views he expresses in that letter are the views of the Convention itself! I think no man, in or out of public life, and no soldier, in or out of the army, has ever deliberately placed himself in a more inextricable dilemma.

OCCASIONAL.

Now to Duty and Labor.

[From the Buffalo Express.]

The time has come when the loyal men of the nation—the men who do not believe in the right of rebellion against the Union, the Constitution, and the old flag—should take their stand, firmly determined to save the country in the coming election. A vote for the Democratic platform and candidates is a vote in favor of rebellion. Democratic success is the success of the rebellion. In no word did the Democratic National Convention condemn rebellion—on the contrary, its denunciations were aimed at the men who have labored to crush it. The measures of the Government that are most bitterly assailed are those which have proved most damaging to the cause of the insurgents. All this is proof positive that Democracy have closed hands with rebellion, not to save, but to destroy the Union.

The time has come, therefore, when men must take sides and prepare for work. Those who would save the nation's integrity and preserve the Union, must indicate their good faith to such a purpose, by opposing by every laudable effort the consummation of the purposes of the rebellion. Fidelity to the national integrity now calls more loudly than ever on the patriotic to enlist in the work of resisting at the ballot box the purposes and plans of a party which seeks to establish the "sacred rights and principles all over the North that are contended for by the rebels, and which incite them to take up arms against the Government. The pledges of these men to maintain the Union in peace, are but the sugar that is placed on the exterior of their rebellious purposes, to deceive and mislead the unwary.

No man who believes this Union and Government worth saving will remain idle for one moment now that the enemy is in the field with his disloyal flag flying. With a platform, and a candidate, according to Democratic authority, still more to be condemned and abhorred than the platform on which he stands, the Democratic party has no hope or prospect of success. We go to the people in the fullest confidence that their verdict will lay this party and its platform very deep in the dark waters of defeat. It only requires nerve and labor to make the task easy and the victory overwhelming. Let the long roll be beat in the Union camp, let our forces rally, for the day of final triumph is at hand. Delay to let M'Clellan is defeat to rebellion. We must bury them in common grave.

Rebels Fighting for M'Clellan.

The Richmond papers, which are nearly the only papers now remaining to the rebels, are clear and unanimous on two points, viz:

1. The very existence of the rebellion is staked on the success of the Democratic party at the coming election.

2d. It is the duty of the rebels to aid the election of M'Clellan by defeating Grant if possible before November.

So clearly are these points exhibited in their columns, and so closely are they accompanied by the reports of the withdrawal of parts of the rebel forces under Early to reinforce Lee's right at Petersburg, and against Grant's new position on the Weldon railroad, that it is evident the rebels have made up their minds to fight a pitched battle in order to elect M'Clellan. Here is a new system of Democratic electioneering. An army formerly of a million of Democrats now whittled down to a tenth of that number, holds up the flag of rebellion against the government. A Convention representing the "Democratic" party meets and declares that the "Democratic" party has no other principle than that these rebels shall not be whipped. The rebels, to strengthen the hands of this party, are preparing for a mighty struggle in which the blood of thousands of our friends and brothers will flow, for the immediate purpose of electing M'Clellan, and with the ultimate end of dissolving the Union.

Does it not make the cheek of some "Democrats" tingle with shame that their leaders have thus bound them to the car of secession and made them accessories to the crime of rebellion?—Chicago Tribune.

The Animating Sentiment.

"When you wish to know what the policy of a party will be, you must learn the passions, sentiments and feelings which animate that party. Contending parties will be judged not alone by their declarations, but also by those principles which are supposed to animate and govern the great mass of their respective organizations."—Horatio Seymour to the Chicago Convention.

The passions that animated the copperhead convention were apparent to the whole world. For one week it boiled over in every possible exhibition of treason and open-mouthed sympathy and bold defense of the Southern rebellion. The Constitution makes it the duty of the National Government and the President to enforce the supremacy of the Constitution and the laws of Congress, and to suppress domestic insurrection. Such an insurrection, bold and formidable, was then in progress. It originated in wanton wickedness, without cause or justification.

Yet the sentiment that animates the Convention is denunciation of the attempt or the right to suppress and put down the insurrection. The insurgents are defiant and unrepentant, but neither the Convention nor one of its speakers—nor even Seymour himself—had one word of condemnation of the stupendous crime. It is all palliation, excuse or open justification. It is a pusillanimous and cowardly cry of peace, when peace means nothing but submission to rebellion.

We are justified by Mr. Seymour's own rules of judgment, in branding the Convention and its purposes with treason, and regarding it but as the merest tender to Jeff. Davis and his Richmond insurrectionists.—Chicago Tribune.

There is a report, not fully authenticated, that still another of the rebel guerrilla leaders, Mosby, has been killed. The story is that he fell in a duel with one of his own officers on Friday last.

A private letter from General Wool contains the following passage:

"Nothing, for aught that I can discover, will save the Union and its government but the successes of Grant, Sherman, Farragut and Sheridan. These successes may rouse the people and preserve the country; but nothing else, from present appearances, will save it from the danger with which it is threatened. The perils of the Union were never greater than at the present moment. The conspirators have secret associations, whose members are scattered over the land, using every means in their power to alarm and frighten the ignorant and timid. They are also distributed throughout the armies and navy of the United States, and exerting all their powers to induce those who have the privilege of voting to cast their votes for McClellan, who is represented to be popular with the rank and file. At a future day I may present facts which will substantiate all I have said in regard to this dangerous conspiracy and their convention, and their candidate for the presidency."

Getting Frightened.—A New York butter speculator a few days ago sent orders to his agent in Potsdam, New York, to sell a thousand tubs of butter which he had been holding for higher prices for the most he could get. The splendid condition of the fall feed, taken in connexion with the reduced consumption of butter, will disappoint many farmers and speculators who are holding their butter for higher prices. It was selling in New Hampshire last week for from thirty to forty cents a pound.—Boston Jour.
