I have read it carefully, and give full credit to your statements of the distress that will be occasioned read it carestay, and give this read; to year statements of the distress that will be occasioned by it, and yet shall not revoke my order; simply bettess my orders are not designed to meet the humanities of the case, but to prepare for the nature strungles in which millions, yes huadreds of millions of good people outside of Atlanta have a deep interest. Eve, I know the vind citive nature of our enamy, and that we may have many years of militage operations from this quarter, and therefore descrit wise and predent to prepare it time. The use of Atlanta for wardine purposes is in consistent with its character as a home for familias. There will be no manufactures, commerce, or agriculture here for the maintainance of families, and sooner or later want will compel the inhabitants to go. Why not go now, when all the writigements are completed for the transfer, instead of waiting till the plunging who to contending armies will reme at he scenes of the past month? Of course I do not apprehend any such taing at this mement, but you do not suppose that this arm will be here till the war is over ? I cheannet discuss this subject with you fairly, because I cannot impart to you what I propo to do, but I satert that my military plans make it necessary for the inhabitants to go away, and I can only range my offer of services to make their actions in may directly as asay and comfortable as possible.

You cannot qualify war in harsher terms than I will. The Tumble in Prices. With the prospect that the war is about drawing to a close, prices have commenced to With the prospect that the war is about drawing to a close, prices have commenced to give way, and a general depreciation may be anticipated. This will be a desirable change for the great mass known as consumers, but it will at the same time bear heavily upon careain classes, and especially upon these engaged in merchandising. The general bellef is that prices have now resched their highest figure, and hence further prevaled their figures are not the sole parties to biame. Consumers kept up the incessant cry, "Now is the time to lay in your stocks, as prices will be higher;" and sure enough, prices went up, week after week; and consumers ontined to purchase large supplies, feating a still further advance. The turning point has been reached, and we may now expect to hear theory, "Don't buy now-prices will be lower."

Under the cry of "higher prices," the merchants and shop keepers have hed their harvest and the baniers of "marking up will now have to be abandored for that of "marking down."

Those caught with large stocks on hand, should this down ward tendecor continus, will find themselves getting poor, by from week to week marking their stocks down, much set for the past year or two they have weekly grown richer by marking them up.
