Union Mass Meeting Last Night.

General Lippincott, headquarters of the Union party, presented a scene of indescribable enthusiasm from an early hour last evening until after mid-night. Hon. Thomas J. Bigham, the "irrepressible Bigham," acting as master of ceremonies, assisted by Thomas M. Marshall, Esq., and others. As the returns came in they were announced by Mr. Bigham, with his quaint and humorous remarks, and in his usually stentorian voice. In the meantime, the immense audience was kept in a continued storm of excitement by a succession of happy speeches, songs, jokes, and witticisms. There was no end to the shouts, cheers and kindred demonstrations of applause. Telegrams from Philadelphia, was received with tremendous outbursts of applause—shouting, waving of hats, etc., etc. The scenes beggar all description, and we need not attempt any. It was, to use the language of a waggish friend, "a grand political love-feast," which will not soon be forgotten.

EMIGRANTS to the South and West should be provided with OSGOOD'S INDIA CHOLAGOGUE. By the use of this remedy, during acclimation, or seasoning as it is called, the danger from attacks of Ague and Bilious Fevers, is entirely avoided. The stranger is peculiarly exposed to these diseases in their most fatal forms, and should not risk the change of climate without the protection which the Cholagogue affords.

Sold by all druggists and medicine dealers.

THE preventive powers of Osgood's India Cholagogue are among its most valuable qualities. Settlers in new countries, persons travelling through infected districts, laborers exposed to the miasma of stagnant water, or exhalations from new land, should not fail to use the Cholagogue as a preventive. It protects the system from fever and ague, fortifies against malaria, wards off bilious attacks, and keeps up healthy action of the liver.

Sold by all druggists and medical dealers.

Pennsylvania Soldiers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The following, it is said from Gen. Richmond papers:

The Richmond Enquirer of the 5th speculates on the probability of Sherman's marching on Savannah, and in case it is attempted, recommends the people of Black Roads to harrass his flanks, and says that on the success of such a movement depends Sherman's safety.

Gen. Hood has issued strict orders against straggling or plundering on the march, and says that all commanders will be held responsible.

The Richmond Whig of the 7th says: We have news that are very cheering from North Georgia, which for prudential reasons we decline publishing.

The Richmond Examiner says: President Davis returned to the Capital yesterday morning from a visit to the south and south-west. He returns in good health and excellent spirits, and speaks with confidence of the final result in Georgia.

The comments of Southern papers on Jeff Davis' speeches show that they accept generally results.

The Montgomery Mail says that the speech of the President at Macon was not such as the public had a right to expect at this critical juncture of our affairs at least.

Evidence accumulates that had Johnson been retained in command of the army of Tennessee, Atlanta would not only have been saved, but Sherman's hosts destroyed.

A Wilmington paper contains the particulars of the death of Mrs. Rose Greenhow. She visited Europe and published a book, she had written in Washington on war and her imprisonment. This she accomplished and was just returning to the Confederacy when she met her death. On saturday morning the steamship Condor while endeavoring to come over New Inlet Bar got aground. A boat from her was swamped and Mrs. Greenhow being a passenger on that boat, was drowned.

The rebels now acknowledge a heavy loss and that General Gregg was killed, General Beaton badly wounded and Colonel Haskell and Major Haskell, of South Carolina, also slightly injured.

General Gregg fell at the head of his command.

The Times special gives additional particulars of the battle on the 7th. The object of the rebels was to turn the right flank of our army on the James, and thus obtain possession of Darbytown on the Central Railroad, three miles of which is entirely for defensive works. The enemy aware that our right was the weakest part of our lines, supposed that by flanking us and holding these three miles of road their defences could be materially strengthened by putting another line of strong works outside of the present exterior limits of their fortifications. To accomplish their purpose, they under cover of night, moved Hooker's and Field's Divisions, numbering 4,500, down the Darbytown road to the position held by Kautz, fairly enclosing his 1,700. At daybreak, they were suddenly attacked fiercely both in the front and in the flank. Our troops fought bravely for more than an hour, until they not only found the enemy in the front and right, but also in the rear, when they then hurriedly, but not before they had lost nearly 300 men, and having to cross a marsh as the only line of retreat, and run the artillery into the mire, which they were forced to abandon, fell back. The enemy followed in splendid line. Field's Division being in front, was supported by Hake, crossing the interval in front of us at double quick, and with so full of confidence and impetuosity that they omitted the precaution of having skirmishers. Our troops were armed with repeating rifles, and the work of destruction was continued on the rebels, literally covering the ground with dead and wounded. This attack, which was made about nine o'clock, is as signal a repulse as has ever happened.

The Richmond Examiner of Saturday says: Some excitement prevailed at Gordonsville night before last, from the rumored approach of a raiding party. It was discovered necessary to remove the government stock and railroad stock from the place, and accordingly they were sent down the road.

A body of Yankee cavalry appeared at Rapidan station and burned the bridge there. It is not known that they have come to this side.

The Examiner, alluding to Sheridan's retrograde movement, says: "By another rail over the famous valley track, we have for some days expressed the belief that it would be the result of the valley campaign."

The Richmond Dispatch of the 8th, says: Several hundred Yankee prisoners have been sent to Salisbury, N. C., yesterday morning. Within the past week a large lot of rebel prisoners, amounting to thousands, who have been confined in Northern prison pens have arrived, and have been sent off. Accommodations are again being prepared for the many thousand Yankees expected to be captured the next few days.
