NATIONAL UNION NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT:

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, of Illinois.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT:

ANDREW JOHNSON, of Tennessee.

Organization.

There was plenty of enthusiasm in the late canvass on our side, but not enough organization. The vote came out spontaneously, and not through organized effort, and the result was, that thousands remained at home or neglected to vote.

There were plenty of meetings, too; but it is the enthusiastic men who run to meetings, and they always vote. The sluggards do not go to meetings, and unless brought to the polls through a systematic effort to get out every voter, they remain at home. Meetings do them no good.

Allegheny would have done a very much better at the last election if there had been a proper organization in each district. Every man, almost, can tell, from personal knowledge of men who did not vote, because not properly looked after.

This must not be the case at the next election. We have before us three weeks for organization, and we must use them wisely. The result of Tuesday's election, although unquestionably in our favor, is not as decisive as we should have made it, and it must satisfy every loyal man of the need of strenuous and unremitting toil from this time until the close of November. We must have a more thorough organization all over the commonwealth. It should be our aim to reach every election district in the most effective manner, and to leave no stone unturned to achieve success in the great contest on which depends the fate of the nation.

We need and must have active, industrious local committees everywhere, and the first business of the present time is to provide these and set the machinery to work. Organization should be our earnest aim at once, and without delay.

The imperative duty pressing upon our friends everywhere is to ORGANIZE! ORGANIZE!

Wrong to Cry Out for the Union.

At the battle of Springfield, Missouri, Fremont's body guard dashed into and through the Rebel lines, carrying everything before them and scattering the enemy like chaff, under the battle cry of "FREMONT AND THE UNION!" And for this the Guard was disbanded; their trained horses were taken from the troopers; pay and rations were withheld from them; they finally were disgracefully dismissed from the service for—"repeating sentiments at Springfield, which rendered their continuance in the service of doubtful expediency."

If any one doubts it let him read the following correspondence:

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 11, 1861.

Major General Geo. B. McClellan, Commander in Chief, Washington, D. C.:

I would regard it as an act of personal courtesy and kindness to me if you will order my Body Guard to remain with me, subject to no orders but my own. It is composed of educated and intelligent young men, to whom the country and I owe more than the usual consideration accorded to the rank and file of the army.

J. C. FREMONT, Major Gen'l U. S. A.

To this request he received the following reply:

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
WASHINGTON, November 11th, 1864.

Major General John C. Fremont:—Before receiving your dispatch, I had given instructions that the cavalry corps known as your Body Guard should be otherwise disposed of. Official information has reached this city that members of that body had at Springfield expressed sentiments rendering their continuance in the service of doubtful expediency. With every desire to gratify your wishes, I do not see how I can violate every rule of military propriety. Please reply.

GEO. B. MCCLELLAN,
Commander-in-Chief.

To utter a battle-cry for the Union was, therefore, in 1861, deemed by McClellan a crime worthy of dismissal from the army. Who can longer doubt the ingrain disloyalty of the Copperhead candidate?

The Carnival of Lying.

The carnival of lying is just NOW in full blast in the Copperhead press. The Waterloo defeat their party experienced in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Indiana on Tuesday, has given it a great impetus in this line. The disheartened editors discredit the news from Ohio and Indiana, and they are trying their best to fix themselves into a majority on the home vote in Pennsylvania. They lie as if lying were their only hope, and as if there were no possible chance of detection and exposure. But it will not do. Lying will not save them; nor burnt brandy either. Their cause is gone up, past all hope, and they may as well surrender decently, at once.

The Soldiers' Vote.

We give below such returns of the soldiers' vote as have been received:

	Lin.	Dem.

This is only a beginning of the soldiers' vote. That to come will be equally edifying to the Copperheads.

The State Election.

The return judges met yesterday throughout the Commonwealth, and we shall soon be gathering in the official vote, from which there is no appeal. It will test the speculations of both parties, and we are content to wait for it, confidently believing that we have carried the State by a decisive majority.

As the late election in Vermont her soldiers in the field were allowed to vote for Members of Congress, as they are also privileged to vote for Presidential electors. The returns from the army vote show that 1,238 ballots were cast for the Republican candidates; 155 for the Democrats, and 62 scattering. Republican majority, ONE THOUSAND AND TWENTY-ONE.

Ex-SENATOR BRADBURY, of Illinois, who has been very extensively claimed as a supporter of McClellan, has written a letter denouncing the Chicago platform and the whole Copperhead party. He comes out squarely and fairly for Lincoln and Johnson.

After the Battle.

We think we know enough of the returns from the States of Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania to enable us to say that the Union party has achieved a grand triumph. Pennsylvania held the centre of the great column, and against Pennsylvania every device that energy or desperation could suggest has been used. We have stood the burden of the assault, and have triumphed, although with a greater loss than of the other columns. We are rather proud of the honor the enemy has done us, for we ask no higher duty than to guard the flag. We know that in our State the enemy has done the uttermost. All that money, and daring, and audacity, and misrepresentation could do has been done. The flag still floats, and Pennsylvania is true to the Union.

We must not be content with this triumph. It will do, but we can do better. Lancaster and Crawford, and Erie and Chester, must not be satisfied with reduced majorities. There is no reason why these counties should not have held their own, even with the absence of the soldiers in the army and the militia doing service as hundred days men. We are convinced that, if there had been a proper organization—even if our friends had appreciated the moral importance of the contest as it effects the great contest of November—we would have surpassed Gov. Curtin's majority in 1863, and had the soldier's vote to spare. We perfectly understand the suggestion that many thousands of the voters of last year are now in the army, and will be counted eventually; but we still think that proper organization would have enabled us to retain the old majority. In the city of Philadelphia we see what good management has done. Here, and here alone, let us say with deference and with no desire to criticise, has the campaign been properly managed. This we may attribute to the magnificent exertions of the Union League, the local committees, and the presence of General Cameron and his committee. All these agencies that operated against the interior counties were most powerful in Philadelphia. Since the last election we have sent ten thousand men to the war, and yet the the places of those men have not only been supplied, but the majority has been increased. Now, why has not this been done in the State?

Let this pass. We have the State on the homes as well as the soldiers' vote. "It is not to despair as well, nor so much as to church quarrel; but 'tis enough—'twill serve." November is coming, and the great battle—a battle compared with which the contest of Tuesday was a mere skirmish—is at hand. We must take no breathing time. Let the battle open at once along the whole line! We must begin immediately the work of organization. The enemy has shown its full strength, and we know where to concentrate our fire. See what has been done in Indiana and Ohio! Surely Pennsylvania can do better, and she must do better! It is not enough that we defeat this New Jersey politician, McClellan; but we must utterly overwhelm him. We must, if possible, prevent him from having a single vote in the Electoral College. We want not merely victory, but triumphant victory, and Pennsylvania must lead the column.

Friends, let us strike hands and join in this duty. You appreciate the cause at stake—you know how dear and precious this war to publish is to all true men—you know that if we fail in the civil contest, all that armies and navies have gained will pass away like the frosts of spring. You do not need words of instruction; is it possible you need any word of entreaty? We point you to the goal; positive compulsion you to take the path? All we need to gain an overwhelming, joyous, annihilating victory, is confidence, energy, and courage. Above all, let there be organization. We have fifty thousand Union majority in Pennsylvania, and the campaign can be managed that this majority will elect the Union electoral ticket in November. To do this, we must begin at once.—Phila. Press.

The Efforts of an Agent of Foreign Princes and Foreign Bankers to Control the Pennsylvania Elections.

It is now fixed beyond all contradiction, that the money which the Copperhead State Central Committee disbursed during the canvass for the election held on Tuesday last, came directly through Mr. Augustus Belmont, as a contribution of the Princes, Aristocracies and speculators in Europe, who have so long been plotting the overthrow and extinction of civil and religious liberty in the United States. The fact is well established, that Mr. Belmont sent one check of a hundred thousand dollars to the city of Philadelphia, while his agents in the counties bordering on the New York State line, were busy distributing money to corrupt the masses wherever that means was deemed necessary to carry a candidate." The money used by the copperhead leaders, in the late campaign in the State, was originally intended for disbursement in the South, to support the rebel arms, but was attracted from that purpose, in the hope that its expenditure in Pennsylvania would effect more important objects for the foreign holders of Confederate securities, by securing a political triumph for the treason sympathizers in the north.

These facts should at once arouse the spirit of every freeman in the State of Pennsylvania, to meet the further attempts of Mr. Belmont, as the agent of Foreign Brokers, to secure the corruption of the people of the North, in order that political victories may be won favorable to the cause of treason in the south. The game being thus uncovered, the Union men of the State know exactly what to do to counteract the influence of foreign gold in free American ballot box. Failing in the south, to uphold the rebel cause—failing on the ocean to secure the sway of rebel pirates—failing in a fair fight, to overwhelm the freemen of the Union battling for the safety of the Government, these miserable foes of the Union have also failed in their attempt to control and corrupt the ballot box. It will require but one more effort, and we will have conquered our enemies alike all over the world.—Har. Tel.

At an early hour Tuesday morning we received a dispatch from New York, by the Associated Press, giving us the opinion of a newspaper, called The World, on the election in Pennsylvania. What there should be in the statement of a paper published far away from here, and without any special sources of information that do not exist in any of our country newspaper offices, that they should be sent all the way to Philadelphia, we cannot imagine. The opinion of The World on Tammany Hall politics, or gold stocks, or the price of a Republican editor who finds himself in the market with his starving newspaper, would be valuable—and the Associated Press will have our thanks whenever it can extract an opinion on these subjects from The World. But we think all dispatches of the kind referred to impertinent. When there is an election in New-York, or New England, we shall welcome any statement that the New York journals may make, but we do not care to leave home to know what is going on in Pennsylvania.—Phila Press.

Drowned in a spoonful of water.

A Colonist of this city sauntered into a group of rebel deserters, forty-one in number, on the corner of 18th and Ist reets, Washington, last week, and was edified to learn from the whole of them that the fighting temper in Lee's and Early's armies, was maintained wholly by the hope that McClellan would be elected President. They declared, too, that if this hope was disappointed; the rebel soldiers would generally feel their cause was gone, and would desert to us by battalions. One of the lot, was stormy in his denunciation of M'Clellan. He said, had that General walked into Richmond when he saw its church spires, as he could have done, and as thousands were praying he would do, much of the subsequent misery and bloodshed would have been spared "but he so feels mah," perorated Hans, "I drown him in one spoonful water."

Death of Cardinal Bedini.

Intelligence from Rome announces the death of Cardinal Bedini, who visited this country during the administration of Mr. Pierce. He came here with the unpleasant reputation of having aided in suppressing free speech and liberal sentiment in Rome, and during his travels in the western states was the object of much ill-feeling, which in Cincinnati and Pittsburgh took the form of popular outbreaks. His visit to this country was much shortened by the rather unpleasant welcome given him by the populace—a feeling which also extended into Canada.

The object of the cardinal's visit to this country was never made public. He was accompanied in his travels here by Archbishop Hughes, but, unlike him, was a man of very reserved and formal manners. Since his return to Europe, Cardinal Bedini has not been prominent in affairs public. He died on the 9th of September, aged fifty-eight years.

Rebel Finances.

The Richmond Enquirer, of Saturday last has a leading article on the condition of the Confederate finances, which opens in the following lively strain:

"Money has ceased to be a standard of value in the Confederacy. The promissory notes of the Government cannot buy supplies or labor. Great manufacturers hold out such inducements to purchasers who will pay in produce, that ever the stringent orders of the War Department, forbidding detailed farmers to barter their crops for indispensable machinery, have become powerless. Mechanics refuse to work for anything but provisions. Teachers demand a pittance in eatables or a small fortune in Treasury Notes. Worst of all, Government itself offers an immense premium on all taxes paid in kind by assessing provisions furnished for that purpose at the highest market rate. It floods the country with certificates of debt," etc.

The Enquirer is anxious to know what will be the upshot of this condition of affairs. We do not wonder that it finds it impossible to discover.—N. Y. Trib.

The distinguished Democrats who helped us in the State canvass, are rewarded as greatly as they desired by its success; they have the consciousness that they labored for a cause worthy of all labor; they have the thanks of a loyal people. Now that the battle is won, we must acknowledge the great value of their disinterested aid. Col. Carpenter, of Kentucky, and John Cochrane, of New York, did noble service. Gen. McCall, Wm M. Meister, of Berks, John Cessna, of Bedford, Judge Shannon, of Allegheny, Gen. M. Kline, of Dauphin, John Scott, of Huntingdon, are all Democrats, some of whom have hitherto taken no active part in favor of the Union cause. In this city we have had the aid of N. B. Browne, Daniel Dougherty, Mr. Thomas Fitzgerald, who also thoroughly canvassed the Western counties; Benjamin H. Brewster, Enoch Green, of the Sunday Transcript, Thomas Coleman, of the Ledger, and others whom we regret to wrong by thus omitting their names. But the roll of honor can not be included in the brief mention of a newspaper, though it is not too long to be kept in the memory of patriotic Pennsylvanians.—Phil. Press

CHANGE OF BASE.—General Price, it seems, says he has come to Missouri this time "to stay." The very same observation was made by Forrest, some weeks ago, when he entered Tennessee with sixteen thousand men. "I have come north of the Tennessee river to stay," he remarked to one of our officers who had an interview with him. He did stay—but not long. When Rousseau got after him he decamped out of Tennessee, and considered himself lucky to get away with only two-thirds of his command. We expect an attempt at the repetition of the same manœuvre on the part of price, when Rosecrans gets his forces fairly in motion against him; but we hope "Rosy" will compel old Price to stay.—N. Y. Times.

THE Rebel Receiver of Arkansas reports that he has received, under the law confiscating Northern indebtedness from merchants and others, due to the people of the United States, $1,370,000, and sold confiscated goods belonging to the Northern people for $225,681; also sold confiscated steamboats for $212,390, and confiscated real estate for $730,165.

Will the opponents of confiscation of Rebel property please denounce this confiscation of loyal property.
