We shall give you a hun-dred guas in the morning. The entrance by way of New Inlet is so situtead and guarded by heavy artillery that ressels attempting to go in or rin by the forts would be subjected to a tremendous cross fire. 'Heavy frigates whose draft of water precluded their crossing the bar, would, of necessity, anchor outside or sail up and down the beach; or perhaps they will sail in a circle, as did Dupont's fleet at the capture of Port Royal. By this method they would be enabled to keep their guns-cool, the men fresh, and at the same time-seriously interfere with the accuracy of the rebeltire. The ground over which the heavy ressels would fight is a trifle over two miles from Fort Fisher, yet it is within effective mage at a moderate elevation of the guns. The cturn of these twelve thousand, who, scatment that "the exchange is completed" was not made by the authority of the War Department we feel assured ; but that department owes it to itselfand to the country, and still more to the friends of the unfortunate men who are yet pining in captivity, to contradict it, and say when the work is to be resumed. When the work of exchange was going on rapidly, the friends of all the inisoners were filled with high hope of soon welcoming their loved ones home About one-third of them were gratified, but the other two-thirds were sorely, bitteriy disappointed; and the horrible words "The exchange is completed." sent an unuiterable pang to many a noble, loving and pathiotic heart. It is a fearful thing to trifle with the affections of such families as those noble,

In the year 1648 Lord Morpeth became Earl of Garlisle, being the seventh possessor of that juide, which he held multi the 5th of December of the present year, when he died, aged sixty-two. He had been for a number of years Secretary of the British legation as St. Petersburg; he had repre-sented the West Riding of Yorkshire in the House: of Commons; he had been, under Lord John Russell, commissioner of Woods and Zorests, and under the Palmerston ministry, in 1853 lord Heutenant of Ireland, which office he held at the time of his death, we believe. He wrote a sories of lectures on the writings of Pope, a "Diary in Turkish and Greek Waters," and one or two other works which were published and widely quoted. He gathered around him lovers of literature and art in preference to all other classes of men; and a distinguished American artist, who has traveled in Europe, dwelt, in con-veration with us, especially on the beauty of the art-treasures which were gathered at the, London mansion of the Earl of Car-lisle. - Such men as he give real dignity to their titles; their "kind hearts" are nobler than their "coronets," and their faith in and love of humanity are grander by far-than their "Norman blood."
