ALLEGHENT CITY REPUBLICAN TICKET. FOR MAYOR. JOHN MORRISON. FOR DIRECTOR OF THE POOR: EMORY GLEASON.

THE DESPAIR OF THE REBELS. If the Richmond Examiner be good authority, the Rebels are already subdued. It eays that "when, in any crisis of a nation's fate, men seem to look at all around in wild alarm, it is proof that they are subdued"the Confederacy at the present moment The Examiner itself, a few days after thus ridiculing the wild alarm of others, joined In the general cry of terror, and endorsed the plea of Davis' organ, the Sentinel, that they must abolish slavery to secure foreign recognition, and that falling to obtain that cognition, they must pass under the yoke of England or France, rather than submit to the Yankees. When the Richmond or gaza talk in this way, it is plain that the Rebels have given up all hope of achieving their independence (of the North) without

It is clear, also, that the Confederacy has exhausted its resources; that it is out of men and out of money, out of all hope and confidence; and ready for any scheme that will rave them from the humiliation of subnission to the Yankees. They are roady to give up slavery; they are ready, even, to Affine colonists of England or France, and cat up all their fine words and extravats; all they ask is to be saved from the degradation of submitting to the government that has conquered them.

for them. England and France will have none of them. They would, if they dared; now, for a war with us. Recognition means war, and those nations are well aware what it involves. We hope, however, the Rebels: will carry out their threat and abolish Slavery. The act will not secure their recognition; but it will secure freedom to the Blaver, and the Rebels will get the credit of having done one good thing, even though the motive to it be a bad one.

The article in the Richmond Sentinel is so significant that we reproduce it this morn-It will repay a careful reading. The article is supposed to have been written by JEFF. DAVIS, and Mr. SEWARD has deemed it of so much importance that he has ordered copies of it to be sent to our foreign ministers to show that the rebel government is admitted by their own leaders to be a failure, and that already exhausted and worn out they are seeking a port of refuge; and

They not only submit, but make a merit of it. What has transpired at Savannah will

The people of the South are worn out, and glad of the chance of escaping from the horrors of war; all that is wanted is a fair opportunity, under cover of which they can plead that they acd to submit, and a few months will bring about that opportunity for them.

we think that our face reverses have done much towards preparing the minds of our people for the most extreme sacrifices, if they shall be adjudged necessary to the success of our cause. And in truth they are not sacrifices at all when compared with our situation. If subjugated, it is a question simply whether we shall give for our own uses, or whether the Yankees shall take for theirs.

Subjugation means emancipation and confiscation. All our servants and all our property, yielded up to assist in the defense of our country, would mean no more, but it would be far more glorious to devote our means to our success than to lose them as spoils to the enemy. Our situation, too, stripped of our property, but master of the Government, would be infinitely better than despoiled by the enemy and wearing his londs.

These views have long received the theoretical assent of our people. They are now our practical realizing conviction. A thousand projudices, a thousand consecrated dogmas, are now ready to be yielded at the bidding of necessity. Any sacrifice of opinion and sacrifice of property, any surrender of prejudice, if necessary to the defeat of our enemies, is now the watchword and reply. Subjugation is a horror that embraces all other lorrors, and adds enormous calamities of its own. The people see cuatraces an other 10 rrors, and adds enor-incus calamities of its own. The people see this. They have a vivid perception of it. They are ready on their part for the duties which it implies. Now our authorities, State and Confederate, rise to the level of the great recession. State and Confederate, rise to the level of the great occasion.

Troublesome times are upon us. Great exigencies surround us. We need all our strength and our wisdom. Let there be a conference of all our wise men. Let there be a calm investigation of our wants and a catalogue of our resources. Then, by commen consent, let all obstacles to the employment of these resources be removed.

the man of dollar to needed, let the can be licenored.

We must not raise difficulties; it is no time for that. I Shall we withhold our sons and thus reserve them as servants for the Yankers? Shall we spend our bod and refuse our money? Shall we spend our blood and refuse our money? Shall we withhold anything from our country when we should be but saving it for our foe? It is a disgrace to a garrison to surrender before its ammution is exhausted.

It would be adding disgrace to our misery, if we were overcome without having first exhausted every resource of defense. It would be doubly infamous so us, because, with contributions to our defense equal to

would be doubly infamous to us, because, with contributions to our defense equal to the spoliations we should suffer if conquered, our success would be assured. We should come out of the contest at least with that which would be worth more than all the rest, our liberties and our country. If we had thrown overboard the cargo we should thereby, have saved the ship.

Let the Government determine what it needs and what it can use, and if it be our lands, our houses, our negroes, our horses, our money, ourselves, it must have them. Strange that we should give ourselves and grudge property! Our patriotism must lay aside such selfishness.

It must be generous as well as brave. Our authorities must do more. They must take

This is the sentiment of our people. This is their conviction, and it is a wise conviction. Let our rulers remember it and heed it. Our Constitution was made as the development of our national life. It may not provide for all the various extigencies of war; questions of State may arise in our experience, as they have arisen in the experience of almost every other nation, when our best welfare will require of our rulers the exercise of a bold responsibility.

The acquisition of Louisiana in 1803 was justified only as a question of State, something over and above the Constitution. will.

What we ask now, in the name of the people, is that the Government strain every energy and develop every resource for the public defense. Remember that to hold lack anything is not to save it. The only question is shall we have the use of it, or shall our enemies. Such a question leaves no room to health a, upon such efforts and such devotion. Heaven will surely send its blessing. But if misfortune should still pursue us and our hopes all fail, let us have the election of throwing ourselves into the hands blessing. But if misfortune should still pursue us and our hopes all fall, let us have the circulon of throwing ourselves into the hands of those who are cold and indifferent rather than to fall under the yoke of malignant encinies raising the wolf 's howl for our blood.

We could not have avoided the struggle into which the North has forced us. Long ago Lincoln declared that the Ropublic could not exist half slave and half free. In various forms the people of the North pressed the issue upon us. Our anomies hedged us round and finally drove us to the wall "The worst that can happen to us in prosecuting our defense is the best that they designed for us in the beginning, and far better than they will accord us if they triumph in their aims. Providence has marked out our path, and both led and urged our steps. It has been to us the inevitable path of duty.

If in pursuing it we fail, this were to fail as nations never failed before. Providence will not suffer us to go down, if we show a proper devotion, a proper wisdom and a proper courage. Let our wise men plan, let our brave men fight, and let our good men pray. God will open up a way of escape for us, and will disappoint our enemies. Let our faith fail not.
