Mr. Holman, of Tulians, said this amendment could not be adopted without being followed by more radical measures. If in the judgment of our fathers, slavery was inconsalent with a Republican form of government, they would have abolished it. The Democratic party was opposed to the amendment because they want the Constitution preserved as it is. He denied that because of slavery, our country had become a hissing and reproach; our the contrary, it had grown in population and weath, and commind-di the respect of the world. If three-fourtine of the States pass such in simendment, and Rhoue Island alone thould be the discerting State, she would have the right, and it would be hot and yo resist by force, and her caute would be sacrad. The amendment would not be binding in moral hav, and therefore void. One part of the States cannot determine affairs for others. The Constitution must be our only grilde.
