How, Thomas M. Howe, chairman of the committee; then read the following rejort:
The people of Allegheny county, in town meeting assembled, humbly bowing in devoul subsision to the will of Almighty foot,

However, That language is landagaste to express the reprobation of this meeting of the negation number of our belowed Freatheat, it is abborrence of its miserable perpetrage; the wretched instrument of a most acrotions conspiracy—and its anxious desire for the speedy arrest, trial and condigo punishment of the cowardly assassen, his abottors and accomplices.

Hardeed. That the spontaneous abandonment by the people of all their ordinary avocations, and the closing of their places of business from Saturday morning until Monday night, indicate the neitwester regard and respect for the lamost the neither of account of the great, national loss which we deplore, and that the cliftens be requested to reremme their ordinary avocations, leaving the badges of mourning strucky exhibited on the public buildings for the space of thirty days, and on all private dwellings until after the funeral, and that the cliftens generally be requested to wear an appropriate badge of mourning for thirty days.

arther Secretary of State.

Referred, That the Hon. Thos: Williams be replacted at as early a dayles may suit his convenience, to deliver an enlogy upon the life, character and public services of Abraham Liacols, the late President of the United States.

Resolved, That the Chairman of this mactini transmit to the widow of the deceased a copy of these proceedings, and assure her of the sympathy feit by the citizens of Allegheory consty for her late hereavement, and of their ardam desire for the prosperity and happiness of herself and family.

Resilved, That this meeting has full confidence in the stelling of Fresident Andrew Johnson.

Hon. Thomas Williams, member of Congress from the Twenty-third District, was then intro-duced and delivered a brief but elequent and ing to the green annaces on nearly saw are not giving spirit which Mr. Lincoln had evinced even towards the bitter foce of the government, the speaker declared that those desperate men, in their folly and wickconeas, had driven away the angel of mercy, and now their decids would be indered by another. The decree seems to have good forth that justife shall follow crime.

Gen. T. M. Hite, of Kestucky, was next introduced, and delivered a very effective speech. He stated that the Forest need expect no mercy from Andrew Johnson. Abraham Lincoln had sared the Government from destruction, and now it becomes the daty of another to indica the pinishment due to traitors. The speaker, was strongly in favor of the severest measures being simployed by the Government in the apprehension and junishment of the leading spirits of the rebellion. A friend had anycosed to him the hope that Andrew Johnson ground protective to the first of the rebellion. A friend had anycosed to him the hope that Andrew Johnson would go a step further, and profit by the experience of Gen. Jackson, whose dying regret was that he had see hanged the traitions of his day. He thea alined to the terrible crimes which the rebellion had engendered, and attributed than rebellion had engendered, and attributed than all to the accursed and hell-torn institution of alavery—an injustify a loathsome and disgustrating in itself that is he had sworn henceforther to speak and fight against it so long as God gave him life and strength to do so.

Colonel flawkins, of Tennessee, was next announced, and delivered as short but telling address. He favored the policy of visiting wife, stern and infextibely justice upon the heads of God gave him life and strength to do so.

Colonel flawkins, of Tennessee, was next announced, and delivered as thort but telling address. He favored the body of the South. There was no danger of his signing a passport for J. ff. Gen. J. K. Moorhead, member, of Congress from the Twenty-second District, was next in-troduced. He had hove the President so well, and had become so endoared to blus, that he could not trust himself to speak of his and and terrible death. He had gone to the grave, is-mented by every loyal heart throughout this great ration, and had left behind him a record as enduring as time itself. He cantioned the people against harboring thoughts of vengene-towards hullviduals, or giving way to feelings which might lead to tumult and disorder. Let overy may stand firmly by the lay and the contowards individuals, or giving way to feelings which light lend to tumult and disorder. Let overy man stand firmly by the law and the constitution, and aid in the stern and inflatable administration of Jastice. He had known Andrew Johnson as a fearless champion in the United States Senate, standing almost alone in the midst of traitors, and telling them to their faces that, had he the power, he would hang them high as Haman. He had the power now, and there were no fears for him. He would discharge his whole divit, and shrink from no responsibility which the execution of the laws might devoire upon him. The General gave his hearty assent to the tone and spirit of the address and resolutions which had been read, and remarked that he had nothing to add thereto.

Hun. Thomas J. Bigham then myle an address, denouncing, in his usually foreible manner the assassination of the President, and giving his voice in facer of a rigid execution of the law against traitors. He quoted largely from the speech of Andrew Johnson, in Washiucton, on the receipt of the news of the capture of Rileinmond, as indicating the course of policy which he would be likely to pursue, now that he had been called to the high station of President, and Commander-in-chief of the Aruy and Nacy.

At the close of Mr. Bigham's address, the limmence antience was dismissed by Dr. Allisoa, who repeated the Lord's Prayer, and closed with the benefiction.

The same was the same with the same of the
