TUESDAY, APRIL 18, 1865.

EVENING GAZETTE TELEGRAMS.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT.

Probable Escape of the Assassins

THEY TAKE REFUGE WITH MOSEBY.

NARROW ESCAPE OF PRESIDENT JOHNSON!

Condition of Mr. Seward.

WASHINGTON, April 10, 1865.

The Chief Justice administered the following to Mr. Johnson: I do solemnly swear that I will execute the office of President of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States. After receiving the oath and being declared President, Mr. Johnson remarked: Gentlemen, I must be permitted to say that I have been almost overwhelmed by the announcement of the sad event which has so recently occurred; I feel incompetent to perform the duties so important and responsible as those which have been so unexpectedly thrown upon me. As to an indication of any policy at such a time of the administration of the Government, what I have to say must be left for developments as the administration progresses.

The measure or declaration must be made by acts as they transpire; the only assurance that I can now give of the future is a reference to the past. The course which I have taken in the past in connection with this rebellion must be regarded as a guarantee of the future. My past political life, which has been long and laborious, has been founded as I, in good conscience believe, upon a great principle of right, which lies at the basis of all things. The best energies of my life have been in endeavoring to establish and perpetuate the principles of a free Government. I believe that the Government impressing through its present perils, will settle down upon principles consonant with the popular rights more permanent and enduring than heretofore. I must be permitted to say that if I understand the feelings of my own heart, I have long labored to elevate the great mass of the American people. Toil and honest advocacy of the Free Government have been my lot. Their duties have been mine.

In conclusion, gentlemen, let me say I want your encouragement and continuance. I shall ask and rely upon you and others in carrying the Government through its present perils. I feel that in making this request that it will be heartily responded to by you and all other patriots and lovers of the right and interests of a free people.

At the conclusion of these remarks the President received the kind wishes of the friends by whom he was surrounded. A few minutes were devoted to congratulations. Mr. Johnson is in fine health, and has an earnest tenor of the important trust confided on him.

W. M. Hunter, chief clerk in the State department, has been appointed Acting Secretary of State.

A special meeting of the cabinet was held at the Treasury Department at 11 o'clock this morning.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The Times' Washington special of 10 o'clock a. m., yesterday, says that Secretary Seward is decidedly better. Frederick Seward is still unconscious but is resting quietly as an infant sleeping. The pistol with which he was struck is very heavy.

Mr. Seward's throat and face were frightfully cut. In the terrible conflict, the wounded soldier clinging to the assassin, Mr. Seward threw himself from the bed upon the floor. When it was over he lay in a pool of blood.

The door bell was answered by a small colored boy who told the assassin he could not go up stairs, but he rushed by, and encountered Frederick at the head of the stairs. Augustus, Mr. Seward's oldest son, who interfered was severely cut, as was the wounded soldier, Henry, Mr. Seward's deaf attendant, who, hearing the cries, came to the assistant on the occasion, on entering his room was a murderer in the house who then he scanned did but feel at liberty to leave his post.

The Tribune special of 4:30 P. M. says: No hopes are entertained of Frederick Seward's life. The Secretary shows wonderful vitality, and there is no danger from his wounds. It is the prostration his system received from his first injuries which excites apprehension.

Secretary Stanton testifies to the idea that the murderer, Booths, is known in the city; but if he and his accomplice have escaped, it was across the Eastern branch.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The murderers have been tracked across Potomac, to Mosby.

The ball entered the head of the President, in the back part, near the base of the brain, and took a direct course towards the right eye, struck the left temporal bone, ricochetted and lodged several inches from the surface. The ball was flattened.

The following is a copy of a note sent to President Johnson last Friday, by which was only found on his table yesterday: "I do not wish to disturb you, but would be glad to have an interview. (Signed) J. WILKES BOOTHE.

Mr. Johnson was out at the time, and never saw the note till yesterday.

The wounds inflicted on the Secretary's face have greatly reduced the inflamation and pain caused by the fracture of his jaw by the accident, and the contrivance of adjusting the jaw is wire prevented the assassin's knife from severing the artery.

It appears by the Herald's account that Major Rathbone was not aware of the presence of the assassin in the box until he heard the pistol, when turning he saw the man within six feet of the President. The Major sprang towards and seized him, the man struggled and at the same time made a thrust at the Major's breast with a knife.

The Major received the blow on his left arm, near the shoulder and at once sprang for him, but only caught his clothing, which he partly tore from him. As he sprang from the box he cried, "Stop that man," and thinking it impossible for him to escape from the crowd below, turned to the President, who had not changed his position, except that his eyes were closed and his hand slightly bent forward. The whole time consumed by the assassin, from entering the box and escaping, did not consume 30 seconds.

Major Rathbone has suffered much from the loss of blood. He is, however, in good condition, and progressing rapidly.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The following incidents of the last days of Mr. Lincoln's life have been obtained from several sources: His son, Captain Lincoln, breakfasted with him on Friday morning, having just returned from the capitulation of Lee, and the President passed a happy hour listening to all the details. While at breakfast he said that Speaker Colfax was in the House, and sent word that he wished to see him immediately. He conversed with him nearly an hour about the policy as to rebelling, which he was about to submit to the Cabinet. Afterwards he had an interview with Mr. Hale, Hilliard and others, and several Senators and Representatives. At 11 o'clock the Cabinet and General Grant met with him in one of the most satisfactory and harmonious meetings held since his first accession. The future policy of the Administration was mainly talked upon.

Secretary Stanton said he felt that the Government was stronger than at any previous period since the commencement of the rebellion. In the evening the President had a long and pleasant interview with General Oglesby, Senator Yates and other leading persons of State. Mr. Colfax called again at his request, and Mr. Ashman, of Massachusetts, was presented to them. He spoke of our visit to Richmond and our visit north while at the rebel capital, for fear that some traitor might shoot him. He replied jocularly that he would have been alarmed himself if any other person had been President and gone, but that he did not feel any danger.

Turning to Mr. Colfax, he said: "You are going with Mrs. Lincoln and me to the theatre, I hope," but Mr. Colfax had other engagements, having to leave the city the next morning. He then asked Mr. Colfax "if Sumner has the game of the Confederate Congress, which he got at Richmond, to hand to the Secretary of War, but I insisted then that he must give it to you, and you give him for me, to hand it over." Mr. Ashman alluded to the paper which he still had, and which he had used at the Chicago Convention, and the President and Mrs. Lincoln, who was also in the parlor, rose to go to the theatre.

It was half an hour after the time they had intended to start and they spoke about waiting half an hour longer, for the President went with reluctance, as Gen. Grant had gone North and he did not wish the people to be disappointed, as they had both been advertised to be there. At the door he stopped and said: "Colfax, do not forget to tell the people in the mining regions as you pass through them, what I told you this morning about the developments, when I was gone I will telegraph you at San Francisco. He shook hands with both gentlemen with a pleasant good bye and left the executive mansion never to return to it alive.

MAXIMILLIAN IN TROUBLE.

THE REBEL GAMB IN VIRGINIA BLOCKED.

NO MERCY TO TRAITORS.

HOW BOOTHE ACTED ON FRIDAY.

NEW YORK, April 16.—The Herald's correspondent from the City of Mexico, of the 27th of March, says: Maximilian's subjects are much agitated over rumors that the Empire is shortly to be invaded by a large number of soldiers who have heretofore been fighting for Jeff. Davis' Confederacy. General Price is said to be one of the leaders of this movement, and it is expected that during the coming summer an immense rebel force will cross the Rio Grande, provided with arms, and march to the assistance of President Juarez, for the purpose of expelling Maximilian from the throne. Much indignation was manifested in Mexico by the publication of a statement that United States troops had crossed the Rio Grande and destroyed four thousand bales of rebel cotton on the Mexican soil.

The Times' Washington special says: I suppose that action took place here yesterday, affecting the reconstruction movement in Richmond, and particularly that "portion of it" proposing a session of the rebel Legislature in Richmond in the very face of thousands of real Union men, over whom they so long held evil sway.

Ronald Watkins and Boyle have been suspended from their actions. Secretary Stanton does not approve of General Sheply's order concerning the prayer in the Episcopal church in reference to the President.

The assemblage of the Virginia Legislature will be permitted only under liability of arrest for treason.

President Johnson, in a private conversation, said he would not commit himself to a policy which would prevent visiting or meting punishment on traitors.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Gen. Palmo, a rebel officer, and his two Adjutants and an Orderly, were captured in Virginia yesterday, and this afternoon brought to Washington. As they passed through the City, thousands of excited men and boys followed them, evidently expecting that they were in some way connected with the late assassination. Many exclaimed, "Hang them! hang them!" They were conducted to the office of the Provost Marshal, and after the necessary examination, ordered to be committed to the Old Capital. They were brought on the back way, and several companies of the Reserve Corps were ordered to the scene as a precaution against a riot. The excitement soon after subsided, no announcement having been officially made that those in custody were prisoners of war.

The Tribune's Washington special gives the following account of the movements of the President's murderer: Booth, on Friday, at about three men called at the office of the National Hotel and inquired for Boothe. The clerk, Mr. Merrick, on sending to his room, informed them that he was not in, after the earnest consultation was had between them, and after making enquiries of the probable time of his return, they left. Knowing Mr Boothe's acquaintances to be persons of respectable appearance Mr. Merrick was surprised that he should recommend a visit from these men, who were rather slightly dressed, and had, so he states, the general look of southern farmers. This circumstance struck him as rather singular, and for some time afterwards occupied his thoughts. Notwithstanding this, he omitted to read the cards which they finally left, but placed them in the box of the room occupied.

About 11 o'clock Booth was noticed in the office of the hotel, but nothing remarkable was visible in his appearance, except that he looked pale.

About four o'clock in the afternoon he again made his appearance at the office and inquired of Mr. Merrick if any letter had been left for him. On being answered in the negative he seemed greatly disappointed and with a nervous air he called for a sheet of paper and envelope. He was about to write when a thought seemed to strike him that some one might overlook his letter, and approaching the door of the office he reconnoitered a little, and returning to the patriot and stateman under whose wise and successful administration the nation was just emerging from the civil strife which for four years has afflicted the land. When the terrible calamity fell upon the country, to him our gratitude was justly due, for to him, under God, more than any other person are we indebted for the successful vindication of the integrity of the Union and the maintenance of the power of the Republic.

The officers of the navy and of the marine corps will, as a manifestation of their respect for the exalted character, station and position, and estimable public services of the late President, and as an indication of their sense of the calamity which the country has sustained, wear the usual badge of mourning for six months. The department further directs that upon the day following the receipt of this order, the commanders of squadrons, navy-yards and stations, will direct the colors of every vessel in their command to be hoisted at half-mast, and a gun to be fired every half hour, beginning at sunrise and ending at sunset. The flags of the several navy-yards and marine barracks will also be hoisted.

(Signed,) GIDEON WELLES,

Secretary of Navy.

BOOTHE CAPTURED!

HE IS DETECTED AT ALTOONA!

ARRESTED BY CAPTAIN CUTHBERTSON.

HIS ACCOMPLICE ESCAPES!

A man who answers the exact description given of Boothe, the assassin, was arrested this morning on the accommodation train between Altoona and Greensburg, by Provost Marshal John Cuthbertson, of the 24th District.

The circumstances leading to the arrest, as detailed to us by Capt. Cuthbertson, are as follows:

The Captain left the sleeping car when the train arrived at Altoona, and going into another car, at once saw Boothe, having recognized him by the description given. He at once noted his actions carefully, having been all day struck with the restless and uneasy manner of the culprit, who seemed to be ever on the alert for some danger, looking all around him with a scared expression. He saw him take a copy of the Washington Chronicle and look over its columns. Taking from his pocket a picture of Boothe, the Captain compared it with the man before him, and found it to be an exact and truthful resemblance.

He compared the description given of Boothe, a copy of which he had with him, and found it to coincide in every particular, as to height, complexion, color of hair and eyes, and general appearance. The captain, being sure of his man, placed guards at each door of the car. He then stepped up to the man, and told him he suspected him of being Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln. Boothe's answer was: "I did not expect to get this far without being arrested. It was arrested in Washington on the same suspicion."

Provost Marshal Parson came up to where the Captain and the prisoner were talking, and claimed to know the person. He shortly afterward left the car, leaving his in charge. The Captain asked Boothe where his friend had gone to. He replied, "He will be back soon; see, he has left his coat." But, on inquiring and searching afterwards for him, he was nowhere to be seen. The coat left behind has been recognized as the one which the assassin of Seward wore. The man also answers the description of Surratt, and it is much to be regretted that he was not watched more closely.

The Captain telegraphed from one of the stations between Altoona and Greensburg, to Harrisburg, and received an answer to retain the prisoner at Greensburg, and forward him on the departure of the next train.

On arriving at Greensburg, Capt. Cuthbertson gave his prisoner over to the military authorities, and he will at once be taken on to Washington. The Captain has no doubt whatever, that this man is J. Wilkes Booth, as his appearance answered every particular of the description given the assassin.

At Greensburg great excitement prevailed. The Captain, being afraid the crowd would seize the assassin, told them that it had not been thoroughly established that this was Boothe, and should they attempt to seize him and use him with violence, they might be punishing an innocent man. He succeeded in appeasing the crowd, who would have undoubtedly lynched him if they had not thus been persuaded.

Capt. Cuthbertson, Provost of the 24th District, is stationed at Beaver. He had just returned from business in the east. The country is under a lasting obligation to him for the important services rendered, if this is really the assassin.

Meeting of the Bar—Resolutions on the Death of President Lincoln.

An adjourned meeting of the members of the Bar was held on Monday morning, at ten o'clock in the District Court Room, to hear the report of a Committee previously appointed to prepare suitable action in reference to the death of President Lincoln.

The Committee having been called upon, announced through Hon. A. W. Loomis, that they were ready to report.

The report of the Committee was read by M. Swartzwelder, Esq., as follows:

Whereas, Information had appalled by the frightful news of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, and of the bloody attempt on the life of William H. Seward, Secretary of State, we have met, "whelmed in mighty woe" to give it utterance, and to manifest by decent outward observance, the magnitude of our loss, the poignancy of our grief, and our abhorrence of the enormity of the crime and its cause. Therefore do we

Resolved, That while it becomes us to submit with reverence to Him "who maketh darkness His pavilion," yet do we unfeignedly mourn this most illustrious martyr to liberty, sacrificed for the national life.

Resolved, That in the universal gloom which now shrouds the Republic, we recognize the depth of the nation's love for him who had justly secured its confidence by his probity, wisdom and moderation in the successful conduct of a civil war unparalleled; and that like most great benefactors of our race, he was violently put to death by those whom he was about to serve.

Resolved, That though dead, his patriotic example is the heritage of the people for the preservation of the nation—consecrated by his blood, and hallowed by his virtues, his memory enshrined in the hearts of millions can never die.

Resolved, That as a special mark of our great sorrow, the courts be closed until next Saturday, that the several court rooms and the portico be draped in black for the space of thirty days, and that the bar be appropriately draped and kept at half-mast for the same time.

Resolved, That the foregoing resolutions be entered on the records of the several courts, Federal and State.

Hon. A. W Loomis moved the adoption of the resolutions, seconded by Hon. Wilson M'Candless.

Pending the motion, eloquent and appropriate remarks were delivered by Hon. A. W. Loomis, Hon. Wilson M'Candless, Hon. Walter H. Lowrie, Hon. S. A. Purviance, Wm. M. Shinn, M. Swartzwelder, and Thos. M. Marshall, Esqs.

The resolutions were then unanimously adopted.

On motion of Mr. Swartzwelder, a committee of three were appointed to carry into effect the resolution relative to draping the Court Rooms, etc. The committee consisted of Mr. Swartzwelder, Wm. M. Shinn, and George Shiras, Jr., Esqs.

On motion of B. C. Childs, Esq., the resolutions were ordered to be engrossed, signed by the officers, and transmitted to the family of the deceased President.

ACTION OF THE DISTRICT COURT.

On the adjournment of the Bar Meeting, the District Court was opened, and the resolutions presented by Mr. Loomis. After the had been read, the Court ordered that they be spread upon the minutes.

His Honor, Judge Hampton, then delivered a brief but touching and appropriate eulogy upon the deceased President, after which the meeting adjourned.

Bounty Fund, Second Ward, Allegheny.

On Wednesday and Friday evenings last adjourned meetings of citizens of this ward were held at the School House. Some subscribers to the Bounty Fund, reported delinquent at former meetings, had paid their subscriptions; others would pay in a few days; some had not been seen, and a few refused to pay. Such was the report of a committee in the case. That all the facts may be known a committee was appointed to publish for a week in the city dailies the names of delinquent subscribers—that that no injustice be done to any, it was ordered that this additional call be first made throughout the press. The official result of the drafts does not discharge any one from paying his subscription. The burdens of the ward can only be equalized by paying. None but dishonorable men will think and act otherwise. If all delinquents pay promptly the whole bounty business of the ward can be closed up next Thursday evening, to which time the meeting stands adjourned. Let this be done, and there will then be no necessity for publishing delinquents.

By order of the meeting.

GIDEON WELLES, Secretary.
