THE REMAINS OF THE PRESIDENT.

The programme of the funeral has been changed by order of the Secretary of War. The funeral train will pass through this city. The time of its arrival here will be ascertained in time to take measures to pay what honors may be practicable to the illustrious dead.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

The quiet dignity with which the new President meets the great responsibilities so inexpectedly thrust upon him by the demise of his lamented predecessor—the total absence of all pretensions and high-sounding professions and promises, augur well for his future course, and have already won for him a high degree of public confidence. Mr. JOHNSON is no untried man. Few have given more indubitable proofs of sterling patriotism, whether in the Senate chamber, in the severe ordeal of rebel persecution in his own Tennessee, or in the trying scenes through which he passed while Governor of that State, when yet partially in the grasp of traitor enemies. To use the odd proverbial phrase of Cromwell's men, "He will do to the to's."

THE New York Commercial Advertiser, in commenting upon the great national calamity, remarks:

The South Britain brought up by negro nurses, and have imbibed from these able attendants somewhat of the cruel African superstitions and crimes that linger in the traditions of the subject race.

A more slanderous sentence than this was never penned. That "subject race" have passed through the terrible storm which, for four years, has raged around them, without committing a single known outrage. In hundreds of places they had their oppressors entirely at their mercy, but not a murder, not an assassination, not a single case of outrage, arson or cruelty can be laid to their charge. They have proved themselves brave, but not cruel; they love their friends, but do not hate their enemies. This they have proven; and had the wretches who were nourished at the breasts of negro nurses imbibed the negro character with that nourishment, we should have mourned no prisoners murdered by starvation, no President struck down by assassination. Negroes are not low enough, or devilish enough, for such atrocities as these.

LINCOLN'S PARTING WORDS.

On the morning of the 11th of February, 1861, Mr. LINCOLN, at the call of his country, left Springfield, to enter upon the discharge of his high and, at that moment, appalling official responsibilities. From the platform of the car he turned to his assembled neighbors, many of whom were in tears, and addressed to them the following few and simple words—words which have inspired more faith and evoked more prayer than any that ever fell from uninspired lips. Reader, let them have a place in your scrap-book as a precious memento:

MY FRIENDS:—No one not in my position can appreciate the sadness I feel at this parting. To this people I owe all that I am. Here I have lived more than a quarter of a century. Here my children were born, and here one of them lies buried. I know not how soon I shall see you again. A duty devolves upon me which is, perhaps, greater than that which has devolved upon any other man since the days of Washington. He never would have succeeded except for the aid of Divine Providence, upon which he at all times relied. I feel that I cannot succeed without the same Divine aid which sustained him, and on the same Almighty Being I place my reliance for support; and I hope you, my friends, will all pray that I may receive that Divine assistance without which I can't succeed, but with which success is certain. Again I bid you all an affectionate farewell.

RAISING THE FLAG AT SUMTER.

We have already given by telegraph some account of the ceremonies of raising the flag, (which was lowered four years ago, under an unendurable storm of rebel balls,) upon the ruins of Fort Sumter. We now give an much of the address of the Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, the orator of the day, as our limited space will allow.

MR. BEECHER'S ADDRESS.

On this solemn and joyful day we again lift to the breeze our father's flag—now again the banner of the United States, with the fervent prayer that God would crown it with honor, protect it from treason, and send it down to our children with all the blessings of civilization, liberty and religion. Terrible in battle, may it be beneficent in peace. Happily to bind on beast of prey has been inscribed on it. The eagle may not deem the night's front darkness, and the beams of red light that beautify the morning have been united on its folds. As long as the sun endures, or the stars, may it wave over a nation neither enslaved nor enslaving. [Great applause.] Once, and but once, has treason, sheltered it. In that insane hour, when the guiltiest and bloodiest rebellion of time buried their fires upon this fort, you, sir, (turning to Gen. Anderson) and a small heroic band, stood within these now crumbled walls, and did gallant and just battle, for the honor and defense of the Nation's Banner. [Applause.] In that cope of fire this glorious banner still waved to the breeze above your head, unconscious of harm as the stars and stripes above it. Once it was shot down. A gallant hand in whose care it this day was, dared plucked it from the ground and rear it again—cast down but not destroyed. After a vain resistance, with trembling hand and sad heart you withdrew. Unseen its height, closed its wings and bore it far away, silently to sleep amid the tumults of rebellion and the thunders of battle. The first act of war had begun. The long night of four years had set in. While the giddy traitors whirled in a maze of exhilaration dim horrors were already advancing, that were ere long to fill the land with blood. To-day you have returned again. We do to-day join with you in thanksgiving to Almighty God, that He has spared you to honored life and vouchsafed you the honors of this day. The heavens over you are the same—the same shores. Mornings come and evenings as they did.

All else, how changed! What grim batteries crowd the burdened shores. What scenes have filled this air and disturbed these waters. These shattered heaps of shapeless stone are all that is left of Fort Sumter. Desolation broods in yonder sad city. Solemn retribution hath avenged our dishonored banner. You have come back with honor, who departed hence four years ago, leaving the air sultry with fanatic fire. The surging crowds that rolled up their frenzied shouts as the flag came down, are dead, or scattered or silent, and their habitations are desolate, and ruin rests in the cradle of treason. Rebellion has perished; but there flies the same flag that was insulted! [Great and prolonged applause.]

With starry eyes it looks all over this bay, for that banner that supplanted it and sees it not. [Applause.] You that then for the day were humbled, are again to triumph once more and forever. [Applause.]

In the storm of that assault this glorious ensign was often struck, but it is a memorable fact that not one of its stars was torn out by shot or shell. [Applause.] It was cast by shot or shell. [Applause.] It was a prophecy. It said, "Not one State shall be struck from this Nation by treason." [Applause.] The fulfilment is at hand. Lifted to the air to-day it proclaims, after four years of war, not a State is blotted out. [Applause.] Hail to the flag of our fathers and our flag. Glory to the banner that has gone through four years black with the tempests of war to pilot the nation back to peace without dismemberment. And glory be to God, who, above all floods and banners, have ordained victory, and shall ordain peace. [Applause.] Wherefore have we come hither, pilgrims from distant places? Have we come to exult that northern hands are stronger than Southern? No; but to rejoice that the hands of those who defend a just and beneficent Government are mightier than the hands that assaulted it. [Applause.] Do we exult over fallen cities? We exult that a nation has not fallen. [Applause.] We sorrow with the sorrowful. We sympathize with the desolate. We look upon this shattered fort and yonder dilapidated city with sad eyes, grieved that men should have committed such treason, and glad that God hath set such a mark upon treason that all ages should dread and abhor it. [Applause.]

Let no man misread the meaning of this unfolding flag. It says, government hath returned hither—it proclaims in the name of vindicated government peace and protection to loyalty, humiliation and pain to traitors; this is the flag of sovereignty. The Nation, not the State is sovereign. Restored to authority, this flag commands, but not supplicates. There may be pardon, but may be amenity and oblivion, but no hoary-eyed compromises. [Applause.] There no concession. [Great applause.] There is the Government. They rise up like mountains of strength that shall not be moved. They are the conditions of peace. One Nation under one Government, without slavery, has been ordained and shall stand. There can be peace on no other basis. On this basis reconstruction is easy and needs neither architect nor engineer. Without this basis, no engineer or architect shall ever reconstruct these rebellious States. We do not want your cities nor your fields. We do not envy you your prolific soil, nor heavens full of perpetual summer. Let agriculture revel here—let manufactures make every stream twice musical. Build fleets in every port—inspire the arts of peace with genius, second only to that of Athens, and we shall be glad in your gladness and rich in your wealth. All that we ask is unswerving loyalty and universal liberty [Applause.] And, that, in the name of this high sovereignty of the United States of America, we demand—and that, with the blessing of Almighty God, we will have. [Great applause.]

We raise our fathers' banner that it may bring back better blessings than those of old, that it may cast out the devil of discord—that it may restore lawful government and a prosperity fairer and more enduring than that which it protected before; that it may win parted friends from their alienation; that it may inspire hope and inaugurate universal liberty; that it may say to the sword return to thy sheath—and to the plow and sickle, go forth; that it may heal all jealousies, unite all politics, inspire a new national life, compact our strength, purify our principles, ennoble our national ambition, and make this people great and strong, not for aggression and quarrelsomeness, but for the peace of the world, giving to us the glorious prerogative of leading all nations to juster laws, to more humane politics, to sincere friendship, to rational as distinct civil liberty, and to universal Christian brotherhood.

Reverently, piously, in hopeful patriotism we spread this banner on the sky, as God did the bow was planted on the clouds, and with a solemn fervor beseech God to look upon it and make it the memorial of an everlasting covenant and decree that never again on this fair land shall a deluge of blood prevail. [Applause.]

There is scarcely a man born in the South who has lifted his head against this banner but had a father who would have died for it. Is there no historic pride? Is memory dead? Has a fatal fury struck blindness or hate into eyes that used to look kindly towards each other, that read the same Bible, and hung over the same pages of our national glory, that recited the same Constitution.

Let this uplifting bring back all of the past that was good, but leave in darkness all that was bad. It was never before so wholly unspotted, so clear of all wrong, so pure, and simply the sign of justice and liberty.

Did I say that we brought back the same banner that you bore away, noble and heroic, sir? It is not the same; it is more and better than it was. The land is free from every stain that banner fell. When God would prepare Moses for emancipation, he overthrew his first steps and drove him forty years to tread in the wilderness. When our flag came down four years ago, it lay brooding in darkness; it cried to the Lord, "Wherefore am I deposed?"

Then arose before it a vision of its sin. It had strengthened the strong and forgotten the weak. It had proclaimed liberty, but trod upon slaves. In that seclusion it dedicated itself to liberty. Behold to-day it folds its rows. When it went down, four millions of people had no flag. To-day it rises, and four millions of people cry out, Behold our flag.

The mighty hand of government, made strong in war, by the favor of the God of battles, spreads wide to day the banner of liberty that went down in darkness, and that arose in light, and there it streams like the sun above it, neither parcelled out nor monopolized, but flooding the air with light for all mankind.

Ay, a suffering and broken, yet wounded and dying, bitter, yet the fiery serpents of oppression, everywhere, in all the world look upon this sign lifted up, and live. Come ye homeless and ye sinless slaves look up and ye are free. At length you too have part and lot in this glorious ensign that broods with impartial love over small and great, the poor and the strong, the bond and the free.

In this solemn hour let us pray for the gift of coming of reconciliation and happiness under this common flag. But we must build again from the foundations all those now free Southern States. No cheap restoration to forgetfulness of the past, to regard to all things as they were, will do. God does not stretch out his hands so. He has for four dreadful years that men might easily forget the might of His terrible arm? Restore things as they were! What the lamentable alliances and jealousies, the discords and confusions, and the causes of them? No; in that solemn sacrifice for which a nation has offered up for its sins and many mistakes, so many precious victims, loved and lamented, let our sins and mistakes be consumed utterly and forever. Nor never again shall things be restored as before; the old things are passed away; that is fulfilled, old things are passed away; that new earth in which dwelleth righteousness draws near.

Emerging from such a prolonged rebellion, he is blind who tells you that the State, by a mere amnesty and benevolence of Government, can be put again, by a mere decree, in its place; it would not be honest; it would not be kind or fraternal for me to pretend that Southern revolution against the Union has not reached and wrought a revolution in the Southern States themselves, and inaugurates a new disorganization. Society is like a broken bone, and the period which rebellion put in and was wearing has to be reconstructed in the fitness.

You must put in new warp and new woof, and weaving anew as the fabric slowly unwinds, we shall see in it no gorgon figures, no hideous grotesque of the old barbarism, but figures of liberty vines and golden grains crowning the heads of Justice, Love and Liberty.

Mr. Beecher proceeded by showing what had been settled and determined by the war. First, that these United States shall be one and indivisable; second, that States are not absolute sovereigns, and have no right to dismember the republic; third, that universal liberty is indispensable to republican government, and that slavery shall be forever abolished.

Such are the results of war. These are the best fruits of the war; they are worth all they have cost; they are foundations of peace; they will secure benefits to all nations as well as to ours. Our highest wisdom and duty is to accept the fact as decrees of God. We are exhorted to forget all that has happened; yes, the wrath, the conflict, the cruelty, but not those overruling decrees of God which this war has pronounced.

As solemnly as on Mount Sinai God says, "Remember, remember!" Here, to-day, under this sun, under that bright child of the sun, our banner, with the eyes of the nation and the world upon us, we repeat the syllable of God's providence, and recite the solemn decrees. No more Disunion. No more Secession. No more Slavery. [Applause.]

He next proceeded to review the causes of our civil war, and the condition and tendencies of Southern society, and concluded as follows:

From this pulpit of broker stone, we speak forth our earnest greeting to all our land. We offer to the President of the United States our solemn congratulations that God has sustained his life and health under the unparalleled burdens and sufferings of four bloody years, and permitted him to behold this auspicious consummation of that National opportunity for which he has waited with so much patience and fortitude, and for which he has labored with such disinterested wisdom. [Applause.] To the members of the Government associated with him in the administration of perilous affairs in critical times; the Senators and Representatives of the United States who have eagerly fashioned the instruments by which the popular will might express and enforce itself, we tender our grateful thanks. [Applause.]

To the officers and men of the army and navy who have so faithfully, skillfully and gloriously upheld their country's authority by suffering so long, and to whose sublime courage we offer a heart-tribute beyond the compass of words. [Great applause.]

Upon these true and faithful citizens, men and women, who have borne up with undimming hope in the darkest hour, and covered the land with their labors of love and charity, we invoke the divine blessing of Him whom they have so truly imitated. [Applause.]

But chiefly to Thee, God of our fathers, we render thanksgiving and praise for that wondrous Providence that has brought forth from such a harvest of war the seed of so much liberty and peace. We invoke peace upon the North; peace be to the West; peace be upon the South. In the name of God we lift our banner and dedicate it to peace, Union and Liberty, now and forevermore.

SOON after Mr. Lincoln's re-election the following appeared first in the Selma Dispatch (Ala.,) and was copied unrebuked into other rebel organs:

OUR MILLION DOLLARS WANTED TO HAVE PEACE BY THE 1ST OF MARCH.—If the citizens of the Southern Confederacy will furnish me with the cash or good security for the sum of one million of dollars, I will cause the lives of Abraham Lincoln, William H. Seward and Andrew Johnston to be taken by the 1st of March next. This will give us peace, and satisfy the world that cruel tyrants cannot live in the world of liberty. If this is not accomplished, nothing will be claimed beyond the sum of fifty thousand dollars, in advance, which is supposed to be necessary to reach and slaughter the three villians.

"I will give myself one thousand dollars towards this patriotic purpose.

"Every one wishing to contribute will address box X, Cahawba, Ala.

NONPAREIL WASHING MACHINE,

Patented and manufactured by OAKLEY & KEATING, New York.

This Machine has been before the public since April, 1861. It is now in extensive use throughout the loyal States; and experience has demonstrated that it is the only reliable Washing Machine in existence.

It is a SQUEEZING MACHINE, strongly made, simple and easy in its operation, and not liable to get out of order. It is constructed on strictly mechanical principles, and solely with a view to utility and durability.

A girl or boy can operate it satisfactorily, and it may be relied on to finish its work without assistance from hand rubbing. It is guaranteed not to injure the finest garment.

The Agent here has the pleasure in submitting the following extracts from Testimonials:

"I have no hesitation in saying that it is by far the best machine of which I have any knowledge, and about as perfect as anything of the kind can be.—Dr. D. S. Kerr."

"In every respect it gives entire satisfaction.—Dr. Jas. Patterson, President Westminster College."

"The working of the machine is not more laborious than that of an ordinary grist-stone. Wristbands, collars, bosom of garments, and the finest laces, can be thoroughly washed with out injury, as it does not run, but squeezes the clothes. It is an economical of time, labor and soap, and it is calculated to become, universally, a domestic institution.—Dr. John Douglas, Pastor First Reformed Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh."

"It has been in my family for several months—performs all that has been claimed for it well, and is a great saving of time, labor and clothes.—Dr. John G. Brown, Pastor Third U. P. Church, Pittsburgh."

"It does its work with neatness and dispatch, and does it well.—Rev. A. G. Wallace, Westmoreland Co., Penna."

THUS SPEAKS OF THE

Wheeler & Wilson

Sewing Machine,

Which should be considered by those who desire to purchase the

BEST FAMILY SEWING MACHINE.

"We are having a great many inquiries for Sewing Machines from various parts of the country, and as we can not conveniently reply to them all by mail, we have thought it proper to state our opinion in regard to them in this public manner. We have used Wilson's patent, manufactured by the Wheeler & Wilson Manufacturing Company, and we can say in regard to it, that it is without a rival. It is simple, not easily get out of order, and, in point of effectiveness and finish, as other machine stands ahead of it. We state this much in regard to the excellent machine upon our own responsibility.

This Company have made and sold during the last three months, 19,675 machines, and are now producing and selling 180 per day. They vary in price from $60 to $100, the medium priced ones sell best. In their business there is over 1,000,000 invested, and they keep 1,000 men regularly employed manufacturing machines. The system pursued is the same as that adopted in the manufacture of arms; every piece is made to a gauge, and consequently the parts of any machine may be transposed with those of another machine of the same size; or should an accident occur, the broken part is immediately be replaced on application at the office.
