The Pittsburgh Gante.

ACRTICHED MA. THE CALBYTE PUBLICATION ADMINISTRATION. MONDAY, MAY 1, 1865.

BEGINNING OF THE PROTECTIVE In Rice Register of April 26th, 1817, wo find a very able and interesting docume a "Report of the committee appointed by the titizens of Pittsburgh, at a meeting held at the Court House on the 21st of Dec. 1816, to inquire into the state of the manufactures in the city and its immediate vicinity. Read February 17, 1817, in the House of mtatives of the United States.

We are unable to say who the author of his able paper is. It bears the signature of E. DENNY, Chairman [of the meeting,] and PERTLAND, Secretary, The following tract furnishes at once an interesting extenent of the extent and condition of the factures of this city at that carly day, and unanswerable arguments in favor of the principle of national protection to national industry arguments as applicable to our condition at this moment as they were to the state of thirgs existing in 1816, and will shall be crushed down to the standard of Barope, or the standard of Hurope shall rise to what it is here.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT. In the discharge of this duty, they have found that the manufacture of cottons, wo ens, finit glass, and the finer qualities of irr has fately suffered the most alarming operation. Some branches which had be several years in operation, have been des troyed or partially suspended; and other of a more recent growth, annihilated befor they were completely in operation. The following facts, from many others of less roomen; within the knowledge of the committee are stated in filustration of this part of the sublight.

of the subject.

The colim factory of Jelly & Co., occupying, a large three story brick building and propelled by steam, is not now in operation, and most, if not all the hands en ation, and most, it not an ene name of discharged.

The wooken factory of Mr. Arthurs, conducted by the agency of steam, is now but partially in operation, and the number of hands reduced one-half. The same observants reduced one-half.

partially in operation, and the number of hands reduced one-half. The same observation applies to the woolen factory of George Cochran, lately removed from Pittsburgh to Beaver Creek. The fiint glass, formerly made in Pittsburgh, and which, in point of beauty and style of workmanchip, equalled the finest glass from Europe, amounted to upwards of $130,000 per anamm. The enormous influx of foreign glass has already stopped one of the furnices, and reduced the manufacture about thirty thousand a year.

The wire factory of Mr. Eighbaum, carried on by steam, is no longer in operation. The but hinge factory, intely arected by A. Becken, has fallen a victim to the late importations. The manufactory for curry combs, established by the same gentleman, has met a similar fate.

The importance of our manufactures in iron may be estimated from the following facts, in Pittsburgh and its immediate vicinity there is an annual consumption of pig hou to the smouth of 1,000 tons, which gives employment to about 100 hands. The value produced is estimated at $334,000 per annual. Of wrought iron there is annually worked up about two thousand tons furnishing, seconding to the best estimate in the power of the committee, as produce of one million three hundred thousand dollars.

The great public injury and private distress which has attended the late depression of sanniactures, seems not confined to Pittsburgh or the western country. From tres, seems not confined to burgh or the western country. From many parts of the middle the same complaints are heard, and the same complaints are heard, and the same distress appears to prevail. The tide of importation has inundated our country with foreign goods. Some of our met valuable and enterprising citizens have been subjected to enormous losses, and eithers overwhelmed with bankruptcy and ruin. The pressure of war was less fatal to the hopes of enterprise and industry than arenhopes of enterprise and industry than a general peace, with the calamities arising from the preent state of our foreign prade. The circa pastances which have induced such a state-of things, demand the investigation of the histomic Government, bound, as it certainly is, to provide for the general welfare of the community. Among the inducements presented to men of capital to invest it in menulactures, the language and conduct of the Administration, were not the best. It was certainly understood, and every one was led to believe, that Govern best. It was certainly understood, and every one was led to believe, that Govern-ment was at length convinced of the necesment was at length convinced of the necessity of a reliance on our own resources, and that a permanent support would be given to domestic manufacturer. Their growth and properly during the war, seemed to domestic manufacturer. Their growth and properly during the war, seemed to atone for fis most pressing evils and became a topic of fitumph and exultation at its close. Although we had acquired no territory, we extorted a formal acknowledgment of the rights asserted by an appeal to arms, the dwelopement of our interior resources promised a stability to idependence, which seemed an equivalent for the sacrifices we had made. It was carnestly believed that the destinies of the United States would no longer depend on the jealousy and caprice of foreign governments, and that our national freedom and welfare were fixed on the solid hasts of our intrinsic means and energies. But these were "afty dreams."

A peace was concluded with England, and in a few months we were prostrate at her

A peace was concluded with England, and in a few months we were prostrate at her feet.

The manufacturers appealed to the general government for the adoption of measures that might enable them to resist the torrent stat; was sweeping away the fruits of their capical and their industry. Their complaints were heard with a concern which seemed to wouchesie the return of better days. The fariff of duties established at the last persion of Congress, and the history of the present year, will demonstrate the utter futility of their expectations. Vast quantities of the circulating medium of the country—the life blood of domestic enterprize—have been drained into a foreign kingdom, our own manufacturers have been superceded by British goods, and a balance of trade already states us in the face, equal, perhaps, in smount to the whole specie capital of the Union.

Even the British government, whose rooted and implacable hostillities to our manufacturers has been proverbal throughout the world, is at length gratified with a complete through. Mr. Brougham, a distinguished member of Parliament, in a late speech, after noticing the great losses which accribed from a vast exportation of goods to the confident uses the following language. The peace with America has produced somewhat of a similar effect; though I am very far from placing the vast exports which it occasioned upon the same footing with those to the European market the year before, both because ultimately the Americase will poy, which the exhausted state of the confident renders very unlikely, and because in a few months we were prostrate at her.

to comfort and a high civilization were concerped. But the return of peace at once broke down the defentes of the country in this important particular, and laid it, as this committee forcibly remark, prostrate at the feet of Great Britain. That powerful nation did by her commerce and her wast manufacturing capital what she was unable to do by her arms—she conquered and crushed the United States, as Mr. BROUGHAM said. Our memory stretches bick far enough twoin the close of the war, and the enactment of the drift protected tariff in 1634.

The picture we have in this report of the Thopicture we have in this report of the condition of the second part of the search o The weekly newspapers in almost every county were half filled every three mon with sheriffs' advertisements of real estate seized and sold, at ruinous sacrifice, for debt. Wheat sold for thirty-seven and a half cents per bushel "in silver," and often could find no market even at that price. Oats sold as low as ten cents per bushel, while corn and potatoes had no cash valu

This state of things continued through a period of eight or nine years. The influ ence of the commercial cities, especially Boston, New York and Philadelphia, so continue to be so until the rewards of laber ong as there was any money to be drained out of the country into the ch merce, was exerted in favor of low duties But at length the men of Boston began to open their eyes to the fact that their commercial policy, if longer persisted in, would rain the country, themselves included, and they resolved that they would follow the lead of HENRY CLAY, and turn their capital and enery from commerce to manufactures and in 1824 the first pretective tariff law passed Congress.

There never was a time in the history of

The effect was marvelous. Hope and confidence were at once inspired. Men sprang to work, each to develop some dornant element of wealth. Capital long ocked up was brought out, and furnaces rolling mills, glass houses, cotton mills, woolen factories and a thousand other enterprises were set on foot. Everybody was busy, and everybody making more or less money. Farmers pushed their business, ecause now they could sell their surplu products at fair prices. This, bear is mind, was in 1824. Two years afterwards the Pennsylvania: canal was surveyed and pat under contract. We shall not push the argument further at present, but only sak, whether, at the close of this war, the country is to be crushed in the same way that it was at the close of the war of 1812?

SHERMAN'S SURRENDER. The Boston Post, a leading organ of the poposition, makes the following just remarks upon SHERMAN's proposal to surrender to the rebels all that we have been contending for, on condition that they should march home again, and not fight us should march nome again, and not ugar any more:

The proposed terms of Johnston's surrender to Sherman, if correctly reported, are remarkable, and it. is a matter of surprise that Sherman could have entertained them for a moment. The conditions Grant allowed Lee were generous; all that any confederate officer should ask or receive. We believe the Government will ennede as much as its home; security, and desire for the satist home; security and desire for the following proposition would be, practically the surrender of the Federal Government to the rebels, instead of their surrender to our forces. We think there must be some mistake in this business; but whatever may be the facts, Grant's presence will make all things clear, and convince Johnston that he is fortunate if he can come out as well as Lee.

The President's plan, as it is understood, seems safe, reasonable, merciful—namely:
to hold the mass of rebels as prisoners of war on parole; left the loyal men reorganize their State governments, fill the offices of trust and power, and then admit the rebels

—except their principal leaders—to the privileges of cliticenship as fast as they can give salfactory evidence of repensance and pledges of fidelity to the Constitution and the Federal Government. The loyal inhabitante of the Confederate States composed more than one-half of their population four years ago, and, when they can have ample protection, will undoubtedly, exhibli the same attachment again. The alsa terry question may appear to be a formidable embarrassment to this consummation;
but as it is apparent that no State tolerating
it can now maintain harmonious relations with the Union, the wisest thing the South can de is to abandon it at once, voluntarily before the Constitution makes, it an obliga-tion. In this manner, we may regain all those worth having, leaving, the refuse to such foreign abores as the tide of treason may float them, or to a harder destiny at Gessip About the Pope's Intendens.

Cassip About the Pope's Intentions.

A letter from Rome to the London Times, dated the 4th inst., gives the following.

The College of Cardinals here is divided into three parties—the men of extreme opinions, who support the present pelley of the Pope; the Liberals, whose opinions, is must be confessed, are less definite; and those easy persons who, if they can be called a party, do not occupy themselves with State matters, and are ever ready, to side with the majority. As regards the departure of the Pope, a question which is freely aginated, the extreme section of the college approve the step, fearing a reconcilitation with the Italian Government, while the Liberals, on the contrary, oppose it. It is only last week that one of this party, whese mane I abstain of course, from giving, said, "Even were the Pledmontess in the Courts of the Vatican, his Holliness ought not to leave. That the Pope is himself disposed to do so, there can, I think, be little doubt. That he has long contemplated the probability of such a step is evident from an observation of his Holiness which I quoted at the beginning of the winter, and on the authenticity of which you may rely: "If I am compelled to leave, I will not do so as formerly, in a carriage, but on feet, with my beverlary under my arm." "Nor," say those who know him well, "would the Pope's departure be the result of fear, he is ready to meet marry, done to the shighly imaginative, and has as ideas that by moving around from place to place he would serve the interests of the Church, and win many members to the fold. "As to the place which, his Holliness may accried from a vast exportation of goods to the cominent, uses the following language:

"The peace with America has produced somewhat of a similar effect; though I am year, the from placing the vast exports which it occisioned upon the same footing with those to the European market the year before, both because ultimately it to Americans will poy, which the exhausted state of the configent renders very unlikely, and because it was seed worth while to their a loss upon the first exportation, in order, by the gist, to stiff in the cradle, those rising, amanufacture in the United States, which the war had forced into existence, contrary to the natural course of things."

This was in 1818-17, a short time after the close of the war of 1812-15. During that contest of three years an impulse was given to the manufacturing industry of the country such as had never before been known. Weak, crude and imperfect as the efforts in this direction were, they were enough to prove that the American people had the skill and enterprise necessary to render them perfectly independent of the world, so far as the supply-of fabrics executions of the Prophet, but simply to show the animus which prevails here.

The outburst may have been angested by a fact which occurred shortly before the receipt of letters, in this direction were, they were enough to prove that the American people had the skill and enterprise necessary to render the impression that his holiness is at all disposed to accept the most of the people and the people of the most profound devo into prove that the American people in the people of the people of the people." Prices in Raleigh, N. C. Among the many sudden changes of the last few days that in prices is very striking. We can scarcely realize saying so many cents for so many dollars, and then the occasional clink of silver almost astonishes our our country when farmers suffered as they casional clink of allyer almost astonishes our cars, so long unaccustomed to such sounda. As yet there has been nothing brought to market; but baden formerly $10 per pound, can now be had/for ten cents. Coffee is 50 cents per pound, instead of $50, and so on. These figures seem strange to us, and it will take us some days to become familiarized with them, but no doubt we shall become adapted to them with wonderful facility. It is something agreeable to learn, and we shall prove agt scholars. Greenbacks, with a sprinkling of coin, have already made shall prove an scholars. Greenbacks, with a sprinkling of coin, have already made their appearance among our clitzens, and we feel that we have money once more in our midst. The feeling is rather an agreeable one, too. Instead of bringing our money to market in a basket and carrying home our purchases in our pocket, we expect to reverse the order. In fact, starvation no longer stares us in the face as it did, and we feel a sense of eccurity we have not felt before in a long time.—Ralleigh Progress.

Closing Scenes. On the morning of the murder Booth breakfasted with Miss Carrie Bean, the daughter of a merchant, and a very respectable young lady, at the National Hotel. He arose from the table at, say seven o'clock. During the breakfast, those who watched him was he was vary lively nignant and During the breakfast, those who watched bim, ay he was very lively, piquant and sell possessed as ever before is his life.

That night the horrible crime thrilled the land. A period of crippled flight succeeded. Living in swamps upon trembling hospitality, upon hopes which sank as he leased upon them. Booth passed the night in perlious route, or broken sleep, and in the end went down like a bravo, but in the eyes of all who read his history, commanding no respect for his valor, charity for his motive, or sympathy for his sin.

The Rebals in Canada.

The grand jury at Toronto have found true hills against Jacob Thompson, and C. C. Clay, and others, on the charge of being concerned in the St. Albans raiders. This is striking at the head scoundrels. There is no doubt these skulking traitors are guilty of the St. Albans murders, just as deep as the man Young, who led the marauders. Neither is there any doubt that the same men were concerned in the plot for the assassination of the President, members of the Cabinent and Géneral Grant. The leading rebels in Canada will now begin to tremble, since they discover that the Canadian authorities are getting in earnest on the subject of neutral rights. The Rebels in Canada-
