chin valued ht $1:20... The plaintiff cont passage at Philadelphis for Cincinnati
The Court, (Strong, J.) hald that the defendants are not common carriers except between Philadelphis and Pittaburgh. They were under notobligation to carry the plaintiff beyond the termination of their route, or to transport his luggare. It is true they received the fare for the whole distance from Philadelphis to Cincinnati, and if that were all, its might raise a presument to carry over the entire route between the two cities. But contemperantously with the receipt of the fare, and as existence of the contract into which they entered, they gave to the plantiff atteket, informing him that they assumed no responsibility for his carriage, and of course for the carriage of his largeste, beyond Pittaburgh. They notified him that they acted only as agents for the carriage whise route extended westward from Pittaburgh, and not at all for themselves. With this carries disclaimer of personal liability, there is no possibility of implying an agreement. The pisture information is not against the company which indertook for that portion of the route upon which the carpot bag was lost.

Hyrengo has made the following decision.

Loses by fire may be deducted from income, where they occur in connection with a business before which the business and desired from the business. where they occur in concetton with a business from which income is derived. If a building which is rented is destroyed or injured by fire, the known spent in re-building may be deducted from the amount received as rent in the what the building is occupied by the owner, only so much can be deducted as does not exerced the average expended in repairs on such building the projecting fire years. Where losses are deducted as it excess above given, insurance moneys received must be extracted as income. 3 Hittsburgh Theatre. Mrs. Waller's Rome ionged. The South retained but one great army, and that has now been half destroyed. The loss of Richmond might in itself have been, perhaps, sustained, but, coupled with the defeat of Lee, it represents a vertiable catastrophe.

The event has been anticipated not only in America, but in this country for some time, and yet it did not occur in conformity with the prevalent speculations. Farragut had no part in it, nor Sherman either, There was no fiscillar, in bombardment, no combined astack by land or water. It is the to Gon. Grant that his military abditive should be recognized and his success acknowledged. It was his army which in the end captured Richmond. He did "fight it out on that line," as he had pledged himself to do, not only through all the summer, but though the white and the joiliowing spring. Often and often was he repulsed with dreadful losses, but he clung with unconquerable tenacity to his work, and never once relaxed the grip that he had obtained. He forced his adversary intoRichmond, and sat down before its ramparts with the resolution, which he has well maintained, that sooner or later the city should be his. It is true that he had the assistance of Sheridan, and that without that expoperation the final assant; would probably not have been steinfared much of the fighting indeed feli to Sheridan's share, and he reems to have displayed much of that genius which won him so remarkable a victory in the Shenandoni Valley? But the whole work, substantially, was the work of semarkable a victory in the Shenandoni Valley? But the whole work, substantially, was the work of Grant—and it can fidner through array testen inouths of discourage much; the was the first Giserral of the North why required to recognize defeat, and the reserved of for living it has a first the can have discourage much.
