Perhaps our readers have already heard something of the cow spoken of as follows by the New Albany Ledger.

At the agreement rain at Charleston a certain cow, decorated with red and blue ribbons, was the observed of all observers. She was explured from the rebels by Shorman's army near Corinth, Mississippi, in the summer of 1802, and had accompanied the army in all its marches, countermarches, raids and exdeditions from the time up to the field disbandoument of the army at Washington. She is the property of General Clark, of New York, who expecting to go on duty at Now Orleans, had this noted cow sent westward with a view of taking her to his now field of duty. But the General being ordered back to New York, the cow will be sent thilther and placed in the Central Park. This cow, during all the Journeyings through Mississippi, Tennessee, Georgia, South and North Uarolton and Virginia—a poried of three years—has never ceased to give milk, avrenging three galions a day, which she still gives. She is certainly a nobie salmal, and wears her ribbons gracefully. She is more in the care of Mr. Grorge W. Lee, of Clark county.

ARMY BOOTS, as much as Homet's Iliad."

Tan years ago a young mulatto ran away from the plantation of Mr. Charles Ambrose, a sugar lord at Bayon Fourche, Louisiana, stealing himself—a piece of property worth a thousand dollars. In the north he amassed a fortune of a quarter of a million. A few days ago he went to baseld home, traveling in open daylight with as little fear of bloodhounds and fugility slave laws as if he was a white man, found his aged father and mother among the freed folks, and settled them comfortably, and presented a cottage and a piece of land to his widowed mistrees, whose family had been beggared by the war.
