INTELLIGENT SUFFRAGE. The New York Tribune says The New YOR: Iruthur says:

In his forthcoming message the President fully recognize the manhood of the negro; but would qualify and limit his right of suffrage by education or property. When proved to be possessed of either of these,
Mr. Johnson thinks he ought to be allowed

Still, we can see no good reason for requiring a black voter to be intelligent, or a property holder, any more than a white man. Why should more be required o one than another! We do not object making intelligence the base of the mea vote, but we want to see the test applied to all voters, and not merely to black voter-We think education is the proper test of man's right to vote, and will gladly just man's right to vote, and will windly jurn in any effort to make it general; but we cannot see the force of any argument that will confine the test to one particular set of men. The poor whites of the South are as ignorant as the llacks, and as poorly qualified to vote right; and both being on an iffed to vote right; and both being on an interest of the following reply within half and the following replaces the feature of the following repl fied to vote rigit; and both being on an feed to vote rigit; and both being on an equality in this respect, any reason that would exclude a ignorant black man from vetlag, would, a dishould, operate equally violation again: calumnies to an intelligent with the state of the second world.
