NO ONE TO BLAME, The author of the pathetic song "No The author of the pathetic song "No one to love," if he were yet alive, might in a short time, and if they meet with the wary the strain somewhat and issue a new edition under the title of "No one to blame," and dedicate it to the special ure of such Coroner's Juries as are called to act upon railroad accidents and steamboat explosions. Such is the burden of their sorgs generally, although it has not yet lin, and will be finished in April to Frank-

The verdict of the Coroner's Jury in the late Lancastor railroad murder is a case the late Lancaster rannoau nutrier is a case in point, as well as that upon the steamer St. John at New York. In both these cases, no with standing the terrible sacrifice of life attending them, we are assured that there was no one to blame-that rail. road trains run off the track without any ascertainable cause, and that steamboat boilers explode in such a mysterious way that it is impossible to find out the reason. We have read all the cvidence in both these cases. In the railroad case the witnesses were mainly employees of the road, and the Coroner's Jury teem to have been content to take their version of the affair as the only explanation of the accident that was possible; and yet, instead of stopping, there, as they did, the reader of the testimony cannot help but maryel that it did not stimulate them to push the inquiry further. The testimony amounted to this, simply-that the track, where the accident happened, was perfect; that there was no breakage of axle or wheel; and that the was not running at a dangerous rate of speed. When these facts were elicited the jury stopped, contenting themselves with believing that it was "all a muddle," and that it was no use tot ry to get out of a muddle. In the St. John case the jury indeed tell us that the boilers of the steamer were not properly braced; that the hydrostatic of the government examiners had weakened them; and that, in caulking, the chisel had cut a groove one-sixteenth of an inch deep in the plate of the exploded boi. ler, the fracture of the explosion following the line of this groove; but they fail to censure any one for not bracing the boilers properly, or for weakening a boiler by cutting a groove in its plates through one fourth of their thickness, Surely some one must be to blame for such faults as these; then why not point them out? As to the fact alleged, that the hydro stratic pressure, which the government employs as a test, weakens the bollers to which it is applied, it is of the utmost im portance to know whether it be really a fact or no. The government applies and enforces this test to all boilers as a certain means of avoiding explosions by detecting the weaknesses of defective boilers and so preventing their use; and if, as this Crowner's Quest assures us, this test, instead of preventing; causes explosions, it is high time to abandon it. But we do not believe it. New York boiler manufacturers may be able to cram that down the throats of coroner's jury, but the jury cannot make the public swallow R.

There is no wisdom in depending upon these inquisitions to find out who is responsible for accidents. The only preventive is to mulct all companies engaged in carrying passengers in fixed and heavy penalties for every life lost and inlury inflict-ed by accidents of their lines of travel, without reference to the causes of the accidents. The companies will then exer-
