There is one point in the speech of Mr. SLFAX, lately published, which is worthy of more than passing attention. It is that in not one of the reconstructed States has-the anchadment of the State Constitutions abolishing slavery, been submitted to a vote of the people.

The uniformity of the course pursued on his question, in all the States, would seem o imply a general understanding among the Southern leaders, and a predetermine. in getting judicial decisions nullifying the endment because not ratified by the peo-

But aside from this the refusal to submit these amendments to a popular vote proyes a bas more. This latter might not be worth consolousness on the part of these who a second thought. The other has signifiify them. There is not, to all appearance a Southern State in which a majority of the popular vote can be got in favor of the abolition of slavery; and the mansgers were so well aware that a negative vote would prove the ingrain disloyalty of the people, and so Keep their Side out of the Union, that they have shuffled the matter off un-der one press or another, endeavoring to der one propert or another, enueavoring to make the Government believe that the mere Passage of the amondments, by the various State Conventions is all that is necessary. The apparent certainty that these amondments would be rejected at the ballot box in the several States is a strong reason for insisting that they shall be submitted to that test and so femore lorever all doubt an the subject.

No constitution was ever adopted in this country without first submitting it to a vote of the people. The Lecompton Constitu-tion may be clied as an exception, but it was an abortion hand damned every man connected with it. This being a Governtarat of the popple, no mere convention can put fife and validity into the constitution or amendments it may frame. The vote of thei people has in all cases been hald necessary to ratification, and this is the first stempt to set the rule aside. The people of the north are not disposed to take the act of these conventions as the acts of the people. If the people are in accord with their conventions, the popular endorsement of their work, can do no harm; and if not, we want to know it. If the people are still disloyal and rebellious in heart, this test will show it; and until it a spplied, and the sincerity of their professions proven, the mation will be justified in coubting. MEXICO.

While certain interested parties are trying to make us believe that the Imperial rule is firmly established in Mexico, the Emperor gives us the most convincing information to the contrary. His order to whole country to the Liberals, with the exception of whatever territory may be commanded by the foreign garrisons of these three places. In addition to this the Em peror sends the Empress to Europe to be ou, of barm's way, and is evidently convinced that it is most prudent for him to be feady to go himself upon short notice.

Two things are plain from this movefirst, that MAXIMILIAN has no support from the people of Mexico; and second, that he cannot hold the country with the foreign legions at his command. His occupation of Mexico, therefore, cannot extend beyond the few months required by the Liberals to concentrate their forces. With the larger part of the nation free from the steps
