THE DYNAMICS OF COAL.

The commercial supremacy of Great Britain is built on her coal beds.

By means of coal the domestic industry encourages agriculture, replenishes the waste of soil, makes out of iron millions of double blades, who require neither dirt, nor fuel, nor manure, enlarges commerce, gathers countries into an all-mercantile globe and all the islands of the Sea; and makes London "the clearing house" of the world, where all balances are accounted and adjusted.

Being the computation on the present condition of mechanical knowledge, it may be assumed that three tons of coal, used in generating steam, are equal, in dynamical value, to twenty tons of iron.

It is not to be forgotten that the application of machinery to the mechanical and manufacturing arts is in the infancy and that the waste of coal as a fuel is an evil that demands remedy as well from considerations of comfort as of economy.

It is of the great annual coal crop of Great Britain only nine millions of tons are used in propelling machinery for manufacturing purposes.

The British coal fields, in their best estate, do not exceed seven thousand million tons in extent; and the final exhaustion of them is a problem that already excites serious attention on the part of capitalists and statesmen.

In the United States, independently of recent alleged discoveries on the Pacific slope and in the central portions of the continent, there are two hundred thousand acres of coal.

The aggregate amount of coal mined in this country up to the present time, does not equal the amount mined in Great Britain during the last three years.

If the American people would break or free the commercial fetters which impede the supremacy of Great Britain, these facts indicate the way.

"We repeat that the white man as well as the negro has been freed."

To appreciate the full force of this one needs to read the condition of public opinion among men and private citizens, the press, the pulpit, and the forum, were all under the most abject servitude.

The attempt to rival Great Britain by applying manual industry to the production of raw material to be manufactured by her, or to feed her people who are employed in manufacturing, must prove a miserable failure.

The Legislature of Mississippi refused to ratify the Constitutional Amendment. The reason assigned in the report of the joint committee of the House is that slavery is really abolished already, and any further proceedings are therefore unnecessary.

A NEW JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

The people of Washington County tried hard, last winter, to get themselves attached to this judicial district, and an act was passed for that purpose by both Houses of the Legislature; but the Governor vetoed it on account of some defect in it, and another bill was not arranged, in time, to obviate the Governor's constitutional objections.

At the next session a bill will be proposed to create a new judicial district out of the counties of Washington and Beaver; and this we regard as preferable to the bill of last winter, and free from all constitutional objections.

Washington and Beaver are both large and populous counties, and there is abundant legal business to them for a judicial district. There is a sufficient reason in that, therefore, for its creation, and no other need be given.

The State forms her judicial districts for the accommodation of the people, and as the State grows in population, the number of districts must increase. We trust, therefore, that the legislature will pass the bill promptly, and the motion especially that there is no objection to it on the part of the districts from Washington and Beaver will respectively be detached.

The point will be made that it will add to the expenses of the State, but we do not consider that as having any weight whatever. The additional expense is but a trifle, and will not be felt; and as the majority of the government is spent as a view to the accommodation of the public, the simple question is whether the new district is necessary for the convenience of the people and the administration of justice.

Believing that it is we join with our friends in Washington and Beaver in urging the proposition upon the early attention of the Legislature.

THE HOUSE COMMITTEES.

In the arrangement of the Committees of the House, Mr. Wirtz has been placed in the place of the Judiciary Committee— one of the most important and laborious Committees of the House. Mr. Moonan is again Chairman of the Committee on Manufactures; and is placed, in addition, on the Committee of Ways and Means—both of them very important Committees.

At the last Session it was decided that the Committee of Ways and Means should thereafter be divided into three—one on Appropriations, one on Revenue, or Ways and Means, and one on Banking, and the new arrangement goes into effect in this Session. Mr. Stevens is at the head of the Committee on Appropriations, and Mr. Moonan is at the head of the Committee on Revenue, and Mr. Wirtz is at the head of the Committee on Banking.

Mr. Moonan, in striking off the Legislature of the negro, introduced the bill for the relief of the African war the necessity of force.

The general arrangement of the Committees is good, and although there are personal disappointments, the Speaker has succeeded better than most Speakers have done in routing causes of complaint on that score.

To the Wheeling Intelligence belongs the credit for the following truthful utterance: "Abraham Lincoln, in striking off the Legislature of the negro, introduced the bill for the relief of the African war the necessity of force."

VARIOUS ITEMS.

The reception General Grant made at Savannah was, according to the prediction of that city, very tame. He arrived on Monday, the 13th inst., and was received by the Federal Honorary Guard, and a large number of citizens.

A young man named John, who was employed as a messenger in the city, after which he was entertained at dinner by a few subscribers. The Mayor and other prominent citizens were present, and the young man was very much pleased.
