DIRECT VOTE FOR PRESIDENT. Mr. JENCKES of R. I., has presented to amend the Federal Constitution in respect to the election of President and Vice Presi-rogates the Electoral College System. Under it the people, instead of voting for electors, would vote directly for the persons they preferred to have made President and Vice President.

The original intention was to remove the selection of these most important officers one step from the people. Electors were powered to select for those offices whomsoever they would. The politicians easily flanked this position. Each party nomina ted its presidential and vice-presidential candidates first, then nominated their candidates for Electors, and exacted from them would vote in the College for no others than the nominees of the party. So rigid has been party discipline that no candidafor Elector, has hesitated to give the pledge, and such has been the sense of per sonal honor that no Elector has violated his pledge in this particular. But more is intended by the Electoral College System. It does not rest the selection of the President and Vice President on the democratic basis of allowing a majority of the people to elect. The selection is represented as in the Senate, and the per-ple, as in the House of Representatives. fair criterion from which to judge of the Rhode Island and New Jersey get their two gross value of productions. electors at large, the same as New York
