TELEGRAPH

REPORTED FOR THE DAILY RECORD.

Afternoon Dispatches.

Ottawa, Feb. 12.

The morning opened dull, accompanied by dripping snow. Country people began to arrive at an early hour...

Up to 5 o'clock there were about 300 people on the east side of the jail, and by 10:30 the crowd had increased to 7,000 or 8,000...

Soon after the sheriff announced everything in readiness for the execution, and at 11 o'clock Whalen was pinioned...

I beg pardon for any offense I may have committed, and I forgive all parties who have injured me.

The executioner then fitted on the white cap, and drew it over his face, adjusted the rope...

It is rumored that Whalen left a written paper in custody of the sheriff, the purport of which is not yet made public.
